PREFACE TO THE TWENTIETH EDITION.

THIS book, when it first appeared in 1841, consisted of 568 pages of smaller size and larger type than those of later editions. It was favourably received, as it in some degree supplied a public want. In 1855, Mr. Joseph Haydn, the compiler, was compelled by failing health to relinquish his labours, and at the earnest request of the Publisher, Mr. Edward Moxon, the present Editor undertook the continuation of the work, and the superintendence of the SEVENTH EDITION, while passing through the press. This led eventually to his undertaking the thorough renovation of the book, which has been gradually effected by revision and correction and copious additions. The new features include Chronological Tables at the beginning of the volume, innumerable historical, literary, scientific, topographical, and geographical facts inserted in the body of the work, and a Dated Index. To make room for these additions the size of the page has been enlarged, many articles have been condensed or printed in smaller type, and much useless matter has been expunged.

The TWENTIETH EDITION continues the general history of the world during the last three years, under the heads of the respective countries; the more important events being noticed in separate articles. Especial attention has been given to the affairs of the British Empire, political, ecclesiastical, social, commercial, and philanthropic. Details are given relating to the political affairs of France, Germany and the United States of North America, to European progress throughout Africa, and to revolutions in South America. In the course of revision extra attention has been given to the articles connected with ancient history in relation to modern researches. Many small articles have been inserted relating to topics liable to arise in general conversation. This edition contains eighty-two pages more than the last published in 1889.

The Editor has endeavoured to make the book a dated Cyclopaedia, a digested summary of every department of human history, brought down to the eve of publication. The kindness of those friends who have pointed out errors and omissions, which are almost unavoidable in a work of such scope and magnitude, is gratefully acknowledged. Much of the information in the book necessarily depends on varying statements often exceedingly difficult to verify.

The more important events that have occurred during the printing of this edition, are noticed in the ADDENDA, at the end of the volume.

PREFACE TO THE FIRST EDITION.

THE design of the Author has been to attempt the compression of the greatest body of general information that has ever appeared in a single volume, and to produce a Book of Reference whose extensive usefulness may render its possession material to every individual—in the same manner that a London Directory is indispensable, on business affairs, to a London merchant. . . .

The Compiler persuades himself that the DICTIONARY OF DATES will be received as a useful companion to all Biographical works, relating, as it does, to things as those do to persons, and affording information not included in the range or design of such publications.

LONDON, May, 1841.

ABYSSINIA, the country of the Habese, N.E. Africa. Its ancient history is very uncertain. The kingdom of the Axumites (its chief town Axum) flourished in the 1st and 2nd centuries after Christ. The religion of the Abyssinians is a corrupt form of the Christianity introduced about 329 by Frumentius. About 960, Judith, a Jewish princess, murdered a great part of the royal family, and reigned forty years. The young king escaped; and the royal house was restored in 1268 in the person of his descendant Iem Amale. In the middle ages it was said to be ruled by Prester John or Prete Janni. The Portuguese missions, commenced in the 15th century, after much struggling against opposition, were expelled about 1633. The encroachments of the Gallas and intestine disorders soon after broke up the empire into petty governments. From the reigns of James Bruce, 1768-73; Henry Salt, 1809-10; Edward Rüppell, 1834-7; major Harris, 1841; Mansfield Parkyns, 1844-7, much information respecting Abyssinia has been gained. Several expeditions into Abyssinia have been organized by the French government. The brothers Antoine and Armand Abbadie visited the country 1837-45. Abyssinia was divided into four provinces. In 1847 Ras Ali was ruler of Ambara; Ras Uble of Tigre and Samien; and Sabela Seleside of Shoa. Population between 3,000,000 and 4,000,000. The ulcer of Abyssinia is termed Nagae, a title dating from the 13th century. The country is now sometimes styled Ethiopia.

ACRE, Acrea, anciently Ptolemais, in Syria, was taken by the Saracens in 638; by the crusaders under Baldwin I. in 1104; by Saladin in 1187; and again by Richard I. and other crusaders, 12 July, 1191, after a siege of 2 years, with a loss of 6 archbishops, 12 bishops, 40 earls, 500 barons, and 300,000 soldiers. It was then named St. Jean d'Acre. It was retaken by the Saracens in 1291, when 60,000 Christians perished, and the nuns, who had mangled their faces, were put to death. Acre was gallantly defended by Djézzer Pacha against Bonaparte, till relieved by Sir Sidney Smith, who resisted twelve attempts by the French, between 16 March and 20 May, 1799, when Bonaparte retreated. Acre, as a Turkish pashalic, was seized 27 May, 1832, by Ibrahim Pacha, who had revolted. On 3 Nov. 1840, it was stormed by the allied fleet under Sir Robert Stopford, and taken after a bombardment of a few hours, the Egyptians losing upwards of 2000 in killed and wounded, and 3000 prisoners, while the British had but 12 killed and 42 wounded: see Syria and Turkey.

A sect with this name arose at Antwerp in the 12th century, under Tandemus or Tanchelin, whose followers, 3000 soldiers and others, committed many crimes. It became extinct soon after the death of its chief; but another of the same kind, named Turlupine, appeared shortly after in Savoy and Dauphiny. ADJUTATORS, see Agitators.

ADMINISTRATIONS OF ENGLAND AND OF GREAT BRITAIN. Until the Restoration, 1660, there was not any cabinet approaching to the modern sense. The sovereign was aided by privy councillors, varying in number, the men and offices being frequently changed. The separation of the cabinet from the privy council became greater during the reign of William III. His ministers included both Whigs and Tories, and their dissensions led to much maladministration, civil, military, and naval, and consequent popular discontent; the king was therefore compelled to have a united ministry, at first wholly composed of Whigs. The change was gradually effected, 1694-6. The control of the chief, now termed the "Premier," began in the reign of Anne. "The era of ministries may most properly be reckoned from the day of the meeting of the parliament after the general election of 1698," Macaulay. For a fuller account of each administration, * Till 1850 the cabinet council usually consisted of the following twelve members: First lord of the treasury; lord chancellor; lord president of the council; chancellor of the exchequer; lord privy seal; home, foreign, and colonial secretaries; first lord of the admiralty; president of the board of trade; president of the board of control; chancellor of the duchy of Lancaster. In 1850 the number was fifteen, and included the secretary-at-war, the postmaster-general, and the chief secretary for Ireland. In the Palmerston-Russell cabinet (which see), the president of the poor-law-board replaced the secretary for Ireland. In 1868 the Gladstone cabinet consisted of 15; that of Mr. Disraeli in Feb., 1874, of 12. The average duration of a ministry has been set down at four, five, and six years; but instances have occurred of the duration of a ministry for much longer periods: Sir Robert Walpole was minister from 1721 to 1742 (21 years); Mr. Pitt, 1804 to 1809 (13 years); and Lord Liverpool from 1801 to 1809 (12 years). Several ministries have not lasted beyond a few months, as the Coalition Ministry in 1725, and the "Talents" Ministry in 1806. The "Short-lived" Administration lasted 20 to 22 Feb. 1794.

ADMINISTRATIVE REFORM ASSOCIATION derived its origin from an opinion that the disasters which occurred to the army in the Crimea in 1854-5 were attributable to the inefficient and irresponsible management of the various departments of the state. The association was organised in London, 5 May, 1855. A meeting was held in Drury-lane theatre, on 15 June, and Mr. Layard's motion on the subject in parliament was negatived 18 June following. The association was reorganised in 1856, Mr. Roebuck, M.P., becoming chairman, but soon became unimportant; see Civil Service.

ADMIRAL. The title, derived from the Arabic, emir-al-behr, "Lord of the sea," which occurs in the Chanson de Roland, 11th century, does not appear to have been adopted in England until about 1300. Alfred, Athelstan, Edgar, Harold, and other kings, were commanders of their own fleets. The first French admiral is said to have been appointed 1284. The rank of admiral of the English seas was first given to William de Leybourne by Edward I. in 1297. Speilman; Rymer. The first Lord High Admiral in England was created by Richard II. in 1385: there had been previously high admirals of districts—the north, west, and south. The duties have generally been executed by lords commissioners; see Admiralty. A similar dignity existed in Scotland from the reign of Robert III. In 1673, Charles II. bestowed it upon his natural son Charles Lennox, afterwards duke of Richmond, then an infant, who resigned the office to the crown in 1703: after the union it was discontinued.—The dignity of lord high admiral of Ireland (of brief existence) was conferred upon James Butler by Henry VIII., in May, 1534. The Admiral of the Fleet is the highest rank in the Royal Navy, corresponding to that of field-marshal in the army. We have now 7 admirals of the fleet, 12 admirals, 20 vice-admirals, 35 rear admirals, and 168 captains (April 1892). Senior admiral of the fleet, Sir Provo Wallis, born 12 April, 1791, died 13 Feb. 1892. The first admiral of the United States of America, David G. Farragut, was nominated in 1866.

ADMIRALTY, COURT OF. a court for the trial of causes relating to maritime affairs, said to have been erected by Edward III., in 1357. It was enacted in the reign of Henry VIII., that criminal causes should be tried by witnesses and a jury, some of the judges at Westminster (or, as now, at the Old Bailey) assisting. The jurisdiction of the admiralty was constituted in 1514, and was filled by two or more functionaries until the Revolution, when it was restricted to one. Barton. The judge has usually been an eminent doctor of the civil law. In 1844 the criminal jurisdiction of this court was removed, and by 30 & 31 Vict. c. 77 (1857), the judge of the Probate court was to be also judge of the Admiralty court. The judge of the Admiralty court, Dr. Stephen Lushington (appointed in 1838), resigned 1 July, 1867, and was succeeded by Sir Robert Phillimore, who retired March, 1883. The jurisdiction of this court was extended in 1864. The very ancient gill anchor set up in the Admiralty Court of the Royal Courts of Justice. The ancient silver orb is laid on the Registrar's Table, Oct. 1885. See Supreme Court and Probate Court.

ADMIRALTY OFFICE dates from 1312, when Henry VIII. appointed commissioners to inspect his ships of war. During the Commonwealth the admiralty affairs were managed by a committee of the parliament; and at the restoration in 1660, James, duke of York, became lord high admiral. In 1668 the admiralty was first put into commission, the great officers of state being the commissioners; see succeeding changes below. In 1688-9 the admiralty was put into commission, and the board appears to have assembled at admiral Herbert's lodgings, in Chancery-row, Westminster, he being at that time first lord. In 1830, 1832, and 1836 various changes were made in the civil departments, several offices being abolished or consolidated with others. In March, 1861, a royal commission recommended the abolition of the board of admiralty and the appointment of a minister of the navy department. The board was reconstituted 14 Jan. 1869, and 4 May, 1872. The collective action of the board was taken away, and concentrated in the person of the first lord.

The office removed from Somerset House to Whitehall, 1874-5.
 New buildings erected by virtue of the Public Offices Site Act passed 24 July, 1882. The designs of Messrs. Leeming & Leeming, of Halifax, selected for approval by parliament, July, 1884.

ADMIRALTY, Whitehall. "At the south end of Duke-street, Westminster, was seated a large house made use of for the admiralty office, until the business was removed to Greenwich, and thence to Wallingford-house, against Whitehall." It was rebuilt by Ripley about 1726; the screen was erected, to conceal the ugliness of the building, by the brothers Adam, in 1776.—Lord Nelson lay in state in one of the apartments on 8 Jan. 1806; and on the next day was buried at St. Paul's.

Explosion in clerks' rooms (ascribed to gunpowder in an iron pot); Mr. Swainson much hurt; about 12 A.M. 23 April, 1825.

ADMIRALTY AND WAR OFFICE ACT, to facilitate improvements in the organisation of those offices, by the retirement of clerks from certain of the civil departments by granting gratuities, was passed 10 Aug. 1873.

"ADMONITION TO THE PARLIAMENT," condemning all religious ceremonies but those commanded by the New Testament, was published by certain Puritans in 1571. Its presumed authors, Field and Wilcox, were imprisoned. A second Admonition by Thomas Cartwright was answered by archbishop Whitgift.

ADORNO AND FREGOSO, two families, of which the doges were frequently members, disturbed Genoa from the 14th to the 16th centuries, the former favouring the emperor, the latter the French king. Their power was annihilated by Andrea Doria about 1528.

ADRIAN'S OR HADRIAN'S WALL (to prevent the irruptions of the Scots and Picts into the northern counties of England, then under the Roman government) extended from the Tyne to Solway frith, and was eighty miles long, twelve feet high, and eight feet in thickness, with watch-towers; built 121. It was repaired and strengthened by Severus, 207—210.

ADRIANOPOLE, in Turkey, so named after its restorer the emperor Adrian (who died 10 July, 138). Near here Constantine defeated Licinius and gained the empire, 3 July, 323; also, near here the emperor Valens was defeated and slain by the Goths, 9 Aug. 378. Adrianople was taken by the Turks under Agurath in 1381, and was their capital till the capture of Constantinople in 1453. It was taken by the Russians on 20 Aug. 1829; and restored 14 Sept. same year; occupied by the Russians, without resistance, 20 Jan. 1878. Population 1885, 70,886. See Turkey.

ADRIATIC. The ceremony of the doge of Venice wedding the Adriatic sea (instituted about 1773), took place annually on Ascension-day. The doge dropped a ring into the sea from his buncratur, or state barge, being attended by his nobility and foreign ambassadors. The ceremony was first omitted in 1797.

ADULLAM, a cave to which David fled from the persecution of Saul about 1062 B.C. (1 Sam. xxii. 1, 2.)

Mr. Horsman, Mr. R. Lowe, earl Grosvenor, lord Elcho, and other liberals who opposed the Franchise Bill in 1866 were termed "Adullamites." During a debate on this bill on 23 March, 1866, Mr. Bright said of Mr. Horsman, that he "had retired into what may be called his political cave of Adullam, to which he invited his every one who was in debt, and every one who was discontented," &c. On 19 April, lord Elcho said, "No improper motive has driven us into this cave, where we are a most happy family, daily—I may say, hourly—increasing in number and strength, where we shall remain until we go forth to deliver Israel from oppression." Although their opposition led to the resignation of the Russell ministry, they declined to take office under lord Derby in July, 1866. They did not vote together uniformly in 1867, and (lord Elcho and Mr. Wyld excepted) voted with Mr. Gladstone, for the disestablishment of the Irish church, 1 May, 1868.

ADULTERATION. That of food was prohibited in England in 1267, and punishments for it enacted, 1531, 1604, 1826, 1851, &c. Much attention was drawn to it in 1822, through Mr. Accum's book, called "Death in the Pot," and in 1855 through Dr. Hassall's book, "Food and its Adulterations." By an act for preventing the adulteration of food, passed in 1860, parochial chemical analysts may be appointed. An act to prevent adulteration of seeds passed 16 Aug. 1869, amended 1878. Another to prevent adulteration of food and drugs passed 10 Aug. 1872. Penalties for adulterating liquors were imposed by the new licensing act passed same time. The report of a commission, issued in July, 1874, declared that the public "were cheated rather than poisoned." All the anti-adulteration acts were repealed by the Sale of Food and Drugs Act, passed 11 Aug. 1875; which was amended in 1879; reported very effectual Dec. 1884.

ADULTERY was punished with death by the law of Moses (1490 B.C.; Lev. xx. 10)—and by Lycurgus (884 B.C.). The early Saxons burnt the adulteress, and erected a gibbet over her ashes, whereon they hanged the adulterer. The ears and nose were cut off under Canute, 1031. Adultery was ordained to be punished capitally by the parliament, May 14, 1650; but there is no record of this law taking effect; and it was repealed at the restoration. In New England the punishment for adultery was made capital to both parties, and several suffered for it, 1662. Hardie. Till 1857 the legal redress against the male offender was by civil action for a money compensation; the female being liable to divorce. By 20 & 21 Vict. c. 85 (1857) the "action for criminal conversation" was abolished, and the Court for Divorce and Matrimonial Causes established with power to grant divorces for adultery and ill usage; see Divorce. An act was passed in 1869 permitting parties to suits for adultery to give evidence.

ADVENTURERS, and MERCHANTS.

ADVERTISEMENTS IN NEWSPAPERS, as now published, were not general in England till the beginning of the eighteenth century. A penalty of 50s. was inflicted on persons advertising a reward with "No questions to be asked" for the return of things stolen, and on the printer, 1754. The advertisement duty, (first enacted, 1712,) formerly charged according to the number of lines, was afterwards fixed, in England, at 3s. 6d., and in Ireland at 2s. 6d. each advertisement. The duty (further reduced, in England to 1s. 6d. and in Ireland to 1s. each, in 1833), was abolished in 1852.

J. H. A. Macdonald, 1885-8; Mr. J. P. B. Robertson, 1888-Sept. 1891, succeeded by sir Charles John Pearson, 1891, by Mr. J. B. Balfour, 1892. Mr. Geo. W. T. The following epitaph on Fair Rosamond (mistress of her Henry II. about 1173) is a mediæval specimen:—"Hic jacet in tomba Rosa mundi, non Rosa mundi; Non redelet, sed clint, quæ redelet solet."

The BRITISH SOUTH AFRICA COMPANY chartered (see under Zambesi), 15 Oct. 1890.

For FRENCH AFRICA, see Africa, 1891, and Senegal.

AFRICAN ASSOCIATION, for promoting the exploration of central Africa, was formed in June, 1788, principally by Sir Joseph Banks; and under its auspices many additions were made to African geography by Ledyard, Park, Burchard, Hornemann, &c. It merged into the Royal Geographical Society, July, 1831.

AFRICAN CHURCH In 1866 Robert Gray, bishop of Capetown (in consequence of a decision of the privy council: see Arch of England), established synods of the "Church of South Africa."

AFRICAN COMPANY (merchants trading to Africa), arose out of an association in London, formed in 1588. A charter was granted to a joint-stock company in 1618. A second company was created in 1631; a third corporation in 1662, another was formed in 1672; remodelled in 1685. In 1792 the company was abolished.

AFRICAN EXPLORATION FUND, founded by Royal Geographical Society, May, 1837.

AFRICAN INSTITUTION, founded in London in 1807, for the abolition of the slave trade, and the civilization of Africa. Many schools have been established with success, particularly at Sierra Leone.

NATIONAL AFRICAN COMPANY incorporated in 1882; chartered, 10 July, 1886, as the Royal Niger Company. See Niger.

AFRIKANDER BUND. A confederation of the descendants of the Dutch settlers in South Africa, formed to extend their influence, became prominent after the Transvaal war in 1881. See Noers and Transvaal, 1891. A congress of the Bund opened at Burgersdorp, 4 Nov. 1891, urgently requested the high commissioner at Cape Town to get the land question settled.

AGAPE (agapē, Greek for love, charity), "feasts of charity," referred to John 12, and described by Tertullian, of which the first Christians of all ranks as one family partook, as Christ did with his disciples. Disorders creeping in, these feasts were forbidden to be celebrated in churches by the councils of Laodicea (366) and Carthage (390). They are still recognised by the Greek church, and are held in their original form weekly by the Glasites or Sandemanians, and in some degree by the Moravians, Wesleyans, and others.

AGAPEMONE (Greek, "the abode of love"), an establishment at Charlifene, near Bridgewater, Somersetshire, founded in 1845, where Henry James Prince,* and his deluded followers, formerly persons of property, lived in common, professing to devote themselves to innocent recreation and to maintain spiritual marriage. The Agapemone is described by Mr. Hepworth Dixon in his "Spiritual Wives," published in Jan. 1868. Meetings of the sect were held at Hamp, near Bridgewater, Dec., 1872.

AGAR-TOWN, the name given to a district in St. Pancras parish, N. London. It consisted of hovels, erected on the site of the grounds of councillor Agar, after 1841, which, from their filthy and uncivilized condition, were termed by Charles Dickens, in 1851, the English Commensura. The entire district was cleared by the Midland Railway Company.

AGE. Chronologists have divided the time between the creation and the birth of Christ into ages. Hesiod (735 B.C.) described the Golden, Silver, Brazen, and Iron Ages; see Dark Ages.

FIRST AGE (from the Creation to the De- luge)	A.C. 4004-3949
SECOND AGE (to the coming of Abraham into Canaan)	2348-1928
THIRD AGE (to the Exodus from Egypt)	1921-1491
FOURTH AGE (to the founding of Solomon's Temple)	1490-1014
FIFTH AGE (to the capture of Jerusalem)	1014-588
SIXTH AGE (to the birth of Christ)	588-4
SEVENTH AGE (to the present time)

AGE. In Greece and Rome twenty-five was full age for both sexes, but a greater age was requisite for the holding certain offices: e.g. thirty for tribunes; forty-three for consuls. In England the minority of a male terminates at twenty-one, and of a female in some cases, at that of a queen, at eighteen. In 1547, the minority of Edward VI. was, by the will of his father, fixed at eighteen years; previously to completing which age, his father, Henry VIII., had assumed the reins of government, in 1509.—A male of twelve may take the oath of allegiance; at fourteen he may consent to a marriage, or choose a guardian; at seventeen he may be an executor, and at twenty-one he is of age; but according to the Statute of Wills, 7 Will. IV. & 1 Vict. c. 26, 1837, no will made by any person under the age of twenty-one years shall be valid. A female at twelve may consent to a marriage, at fourteen she may choose a guardian, and at twenty-one she is of age.

AGED PILGRIMS' FRIEND SOCIETY, founded 1807; asylums, 1826 and 1871.

AGINCOURT, OR AZINCOUR (N. France), a village where Henry V. of England, with about 9000 men, defeated about 60,000 French on St. Crispin's day, 25 Oct. 1415. Of the French, there were, according to some accounts, 10,000 killed, including the dukes of Alençon, Brabant, and Bar, the archbishop of Sens, one marshal, thirteen earls, ninety-two barons, and 1500 knights; and 14,000 prisoners, among whom were the dukes of Orleans and Bourbon, and 7000 barons, knights, and gentlemen. The English lost the duke of York, the earl

* Prince was born in 1812; educated for the medical profession and licensed to practice, 1832; gave it up for the church and entered St. David's college, Lampeter, and there commenced ultra-revivalist movements in 1836; and finally claimed to be an incarnation of the Deity, with corresponding authority over his followers. On 3 May, 1850, Thomas Robinson sought to recover the possession of his child from the care of its mother (from whom he had separated); the application was refused by the vice-chancellor, to "save the child from the pollution of the parent's teaching."—On 21 Aug. 1851, Miss Louisa Jane Notidge died, having transferred her property to Mr. H. J. Prince. Her brother, Mr. Notidge, by an action, recovered from Prince £241, as having been fraudulently obtained. Extraordinary disclosures were made during the trial, 25 July, 1850. In the autumn of 1850, the Rev. Mr. Prince, after several vain attempts, succeeded in rescuing his wife from the Agapemone. They had both been early supporters of it.

of Suffolk, and about 20 others. St. Rémy asserts with more probability that the English lost 1600 men. Henry V. soon after obtained the kingdom of France.

AGINCOURT, iron-clad. See Navy, 1871.

AGITATORS (or Adjutors), officers appointed by the Parliamentary army in 1647, to take care of its interests: each troop or company had two. The general Cromwell was eventually obliged to repress their seditious power. At a review he seized the ringleaders of a mutiny, shot one instantly, in the presence of his companions and the forces on the ground, and thus restored discipline. Hume.—Daniel O'Connell, the agitor of Ireland, was born in 1775. He began to agitate at the elections in 1826; was elected for Clontarf, 5 July, 1828; the election being declared void, he was re-elected 30 July, 1829. After the passing of the Catholic emancipation bill, he agitated in vain for the repeal of the union, 1834 to 1842. He died 15 May, 1847.—Richard Cobden and John Bright were the chief anti-corn-law agitators, 1841-45.—Mr. Bright became a Reform agitator in 1866.

AGNADELLO (N. E. Italy). Here Louis XII. of France gained a great victory over the Venetians, some of whose troops were accused of cowardice and treachery; 14 May, 1509. The conflict is also termed the battle of the Rivolta.

AGNOITÆ (from agnos, Greek, ignorance). I. A sect founded by Theophrastus of Cypadocia, about 370: said to have doubted the omniscience of God. II. The followers of Theophrastus of Alexandria, about 530, who held peculiar views as to the body of Christ, and doubted his divinity.

AGNOSTICS, name given to philosophers who assert that we have no knowledge but what we acquire by means of our senses, about 1876. Mr. Herbert Spencer, Professor Huxley, and Mr. John Fiske are said to be agnostics.

AGONISTICI (from agōn, Greek, a conflict), also termed curvatores, a branch of the Donatists (which see) in the 4th century. They preached with great boldness, and incurred severe persecution.

AGRA (N. W. India), founded by Akbar in 1566, was the capital of the Great Mogul; see Aurangzeb. In 1658 Aurangzeb removed to Delhi.—The fortress of Agra, "the key of Hindostan," in the war with the Mahrattas surrendered to the British forces, under general Lake, 17 Oct. 1803, after one day's siege: 162 pieces of ordnance and 240,000 lbs. were captured.—In June, 1857, the city was abandoned to the mutineers by the Europeans, who took refuge in the fort, from which they were rescued by major Montgomery and colonel Greathed. Visit of the prince of Wales, 25 Jan., 1876.—Allahabad was made capital of the N. W. provinces of India, instead of Agra, in 1861.

AGRAM (formerly Zagrab), a city of Croatia, Hungary, residence of the ban; suffered much by earthquakes, 9-12 Nov. 1880. See Croatia.

AGRARIAN LAW (Agraria lex), decreed an equal division among the Roman people of all the lands acquired by conquest, limiting the acres which each person should enjoy. It was first proposed by the consul Spurius Cassius, 486 B.C., and occasioned his judicial murder when he went out of office in 485.—An agrarian law was passed by the tribune Licinius Stolo, 376; and for proposing further amendments Tiberius Gracchus in 176, and his brother Cornelius in 121, were murdered. Livius Drusus, a tribune, was murdered for the same cause, 91. Julius Cæsar propitiated the plebeians by passing an agrarian law in 59.—In modern times the term has been misinterpreted to signify a division of the lands of the rich among the poor, frequently proposed by demagogues, such as Gracchus Babeuf, editor of the Tribun du Peuple, in 1794. In 1796 he conspired against the directory with the view of obtaining a division of property, was condemned, and killed himself, 27 May, 1797.

Great progress made by the experiments of Lawes, Gilbert, Pasteur, and others.

AGRICULTURAL GANGS.—In the spring of 1867, most painful exposures were made of the prevalence of much cruelty and immorality in the gang system (in which boys and girls are employed) in several of the eastern and midland counties; and in consequence an act was passed 22 Aug. for regulating these gangs, licensing gang-masters, &c.

AGRIGENTUM (now Girgenti), a city of Sicily, built about 532 B.C. It was governed by tyrants from 566 to 470; among these were—Phalaris (see Bees and Bull); Alcamares; Theron who, with his step-father Glauco, defeated the Carthaginians at Himera, 480; and Thrasydeus, his son, expelled in 470; when a republic was established. It was taken by the Carthaginians in 405 B.C., and held, except during short intervals, till gained by the Romans in 262 B.C. From A.D. 825 till 1086 it was held by the Saracens.

AID TO THE SICK AND WOUNDED. NATIONAL SOCIETY FOR. On 4 Aug. 1870, soon after the breaking out of the Franco-German war, a meeting was held in London, which established this society under the rules of the Geneva Convention, which see.

The Queen, patron; the Prince of Wales, president; col. Loyd-Lindsay, chairman of committee; active supporters, duke of Manchester, earl of Shaftesbury, lords Overstone and Bury, sir Harry Verney, general sir John Burgoyne, surgeon-general Leaguere, and captain (aft. sir) Douglas Colton. The operations were chiefly directed by capt. Henry Brocklebury, at the seat of war, and by Mr. John Furley and general sir Vincent Eyre.

A fruitless meeting to promote the incorporation of the society. It was then reported that 206,000 had been received; together with stores valued at 15,000. Col. Loyd Lindsay conveyed to Versailles and Paris from the society 40,000, equally divided between the Germans and French (gratefully acknowledged) about 11 Oct. 1870.

The crown-prince of Prussia wrote to colonel Loyd Lindsay:—"In this, as on other occasions of distress, the help of the English public has been poured out with a liberal and an impartial hand. The gifts which have been offered in a truly Christian spirit have excited a feeling of heartfelt gratitude among those on whose behalf I speak."

AIRANTINE, see SUE.

AIR or ATMOSPHERE. Anaximenes of Miletus (530 B.C.) declared air to be a self-existent deity, and the first cause of everything created. Pseudoionius (about 79 B.C.) calculated the height of the atmosphere to be 800 stadia. The pressure of air, about 15 lbs. to the square inch, was discovered by Galileo, 1564, and demonstrated by Torricelli, (who invented the barometer) about A.D. 1643, and was found by Pascal, in 1647, to vary with the height. Halley, Newton, and others, up to the present time have illustrated the agency and influences of this great power by various experiments, and numerous inventions have followed; among others, the AIR-GUN of Guter of Nuremberg about 1656; the AIR-PUMP, invented by Otto von Guericke of Magdeburg about 1650; improved by Robert Boyle in 1657, by Robert Hooke about 1659; and the AIR-PIPE, invented by Mr. Sutton, a brewer of London, about 1756. The density and elasticity of air were determined by Boyle; and its relation to light and sound by Hooke, Newton, and Bernoulli. The extension of our atmosphere above the surface of the earth, has been long considered as about 45 miles.—Its composition, about 77 parts of nitrogen, 21 of oxygen, and 2 of other matters (such as carbonic acid, watery vapour, a trace of ammonia, &c.) was ascertained by Priestley (who discovered oxygen gas in 1774), Scheele (1775), Lavoisier, and Cavendish; and its laws of refraction were investigated by Dr. Bradley, 1737. The researches of Dr. Schönbein, a German chemist of Basel, between 1840 and 1859, led to his description of two states of the oxygen in the air, which he calls ozone and autozone. Dr. Stenhouse's Air-filters (in which powdered charcoal is used) were first set up at the Mansion-house, London, in 1854. In 1858, Dr. H. Angus Smith made known a chemical method of ascertaining the amount of organic matter in the air, and published his "Air and Rain" in 1872. See Oxygen, Nitrogen, Ozone, Atmospheric Rain, Balloons, and Pneumatic Despatch.

The Aero-stern Engine, the invention of George Warap, a mechanic of Nottingham, who, by employing compressed air united with steam, is said to have effected the saving of 47 per cent. of fuel. The plan was reported to the British Association, at Exeter, in Aug. 1859, and was said to act successfully in a tug steamer (for China) in the Thames, 26 March, 1870. Mr. Edward

† Air, as well as its gaseous components, has been compressed into the liquid state by means of great pressure and intense cold, 1877-8, by Raoul Pictet of Geneva, and Calletet of Paris, Dec. 1877, Jan. 1878. At the Royal Institution, 5 June, 1885, professor Jan. de Dwar exhibited Liquid Air obtained at the temperature of —192° cent.

Field, in his new motive power, introduced a small volume of steam into a large volume of heated air, and effected an economy of 12 to 20 per cent. of steam. The system was exhibited in London, July, 1861.

Col. Beaumont's air-engine for propelling railway cars, tried at Woolwich, reported successful (a little steam is used), 6 Oct. 1860. His system largely employed in various ways by the Paris Compressed Air company, described to the British Association at Newcastle-upon-Tyne, Sept. 1880.

Victor Popp applies compressed air as a motive power to clocks, 1881.

An air-telegraph, in which the waves of air in a tube are employed instead of electricity, invented by sig. Guattari, was exhibited in London in 1870. It obtained a gold medal in Naples.

Isaac Wilkinson patented a method of compressing air by a column of water in 1757, and William Mann patented stage pumping by compressed air in 1829. The force of compressed air was employed in boring the Cais tunnel (see under Alps).

Here Charlemagne was born, 742, and died, 814; having built the minster (796-804), and conferred many privileges on the city, in which fifty-five emperors have since been crowned. The city was taken by the French in Dec. 1792; retaken by the Austrians, March, 1793; by the French, Sept. 1794; ceded to Prussia, 1814. Population, 1890, 103,491.

The Turkish army was divided and broken up, the strong camp taken, with many prisoners, including 7 pashas and 38 guns. The Russian strategy was highly commended. This overwhelming disaster, which led to the investment of Kara, was attributed to Mukhtar's maintaining too extensive lines which were turned (so miles with only 40,000 men: when 200,000 were required).

Ali Pacha, of Janina, in 1812, defeated the Turkish pashas, and governed Albania fully, but cruelly and despotically, till Feb. 1822, when he and his two sons were slain, after surrendering under a solemn promise of safety. A revolt in Albania was suppressed in 1843.

ALBANS, ST. (Hertfordshire), near the Roman Verulam, derived its name from Alban the British protomartyr, said to have been beleaguered during the persecution by Diocletian, 23 June, 286. A stately monastery to his memory was erected about 795, by Offa, king of Mercia, who granted it many privileges. Its superior sat as premier abbot in parliament till the dissolution in 1539. A meeting was held 22 June, 1871, to raise a fund for the restoration of the abbey, the earl of Verulam, chairman. The results were favourable, and the work was confided to Mr. G. Gilbert Scott, who issued a report in June, 1872. The work was carried on under the superintendence of Sir Edmund Beckett (afterwards Lord Grimthorpe), who contributed 50,000l. towards it. Mr. H. Hicks Gibbs also contributed largely to the restoration (1886). The nave was opened 21 Oct. 1885. Verulam was built on the site of the capital of Camulodunum, taken by Julius Cæsar, 54 B.C. ALBERT MEMORIALS. (See England, Queen.) The Prince Consort died on 14 Dec. 1861, deeply lamented by the whole civilized world. His remains were transferred to the mausoleum of Frogmore, 18 Dec. 1862. The sarcophagus is composed of the largest known block of granite without flaw. A meeting to organize a method of receiving contributions for a great national memorial was held at the Mansion-house, 14 Jan. 1862; and a large sum was quickly subscribed. 36,000*l.* had been received on 1 March; 50,220*l.* on 11 June, 1862; and parliament voted 50,000*l.*, in addition to the 60,000*l.* received by voluntary contributions, 23 April, 1863.

The nature of the memorial was referred to the queen herself. In a letter to the lord mayor, dated 29 Feb. 1864, Sir Charles Grey says, on behalf of her majesty, "It would be more in accordance with her own feelings, and she believes with those of the country in general, that the monument should be directly personal to its object. After giving the subject her maturest consideration, her majesty has come to the conclusion, that nothing would be more appropriate, provided it is on a scale of sufficient grandeur, than an obelisk to be erected in Hyde-park on the site of the Great Exhibition of 1851, or on some spot immediately contiguous to it. Nor would any proposal that could be made be more gratifying to the queen herself personally, for she can never forget that the prince himself had highly approved of the idea of a memorial of this character being raised on the same spot in remembrance of the Great Exhibition." In a second letter the queen expressed her intention of personally contributing towards erecting the memorial, that "It might be recorded in future ages as raised by the queen and people of a grateful country to the memory of its benefactor." Shortly after a committee was appointed to fulfil her majesty's desire. As a suitable block of granite could not be obtained, the proposal for an obelisk was given up.

The queen approved of the design of Mr. Gilbert G. Scott for an Eleanor Cross, with a spire 250 feet high, accompanied by statues, &c., 22 April, 1863; work begun, 12 May, 1864.

The sculptors employed were McDowell, Foley, Theod. John Earl, and Armstrong; material, Sicilian marble. (Jan. 1865.)

The memorial, complete, except the statue, by Foley (delayed through illness), was given up to her majesty privately, 1 July, 1879. The gilt statue by Foley uncovered 6 March, 1876.

ROYAL ALBERT HALL OF ARTS AND SCIENCES: The erection of a great building for congresses, concerts, &c., was proposed by the prince-consort at the close of the exhibition of 1851, and an estate at Kensington was purchased; a committee, with the prince of Wales at the head, to erect the building, was appointed 6 July, 1855; circulars soliciting subscriptions were issued April, 1856, and the first stone was laid by the queen, 20 May, 1857.

The building was erected by Col. Scott, chiefly after designs by Capt. Fowke, and cost about 200,000*l.* The organ, by Willis, is said to be the largest in the world. An experimental concert was given to the workmen 25 Feb., and the hall was opened by the queen 20 March, 1871, when a grand concert was given, and many since. The hall is said to contain seats for 10,000 persons (orchestra 2,000, oval arena 1,000, balcony 2,300, and gallery 2,000).

ALBERT NYANZA, see Victoria Nyanza.

ALBERT UNIVERSITY, the name proposed for a new teaching university, at and for London, advocated by University college and King's college in 1891. A draft charter was submitted to the privy council and approved in July, 1891. In Jan. 1892 the lord mayor proposed that the new university should be combined with Gresham college and called Gresham university. Much discussion ensued, and the subject was eventually referred to a royal commission in March following. See London University.

ALBIGENSES, a name given to various persons who opposed the doctrines and occupations of the church of Rome, living at Albi, in Languedoc, and at Toulouse in the 12th century. They were persecuted assailed Manichæans, 1163, and a crusade (proclaimed by pope Innocent III.) against them commenced in 1207. Simon de Montfort commanded 500,000 men, and at Bexters, 1209, he and the pope's legate put friends and foes to the sword, saying, "God will find his own!" At Minerva he burnt 150 of the Albigenes alive; and at La Vaur he hanged the governor, and beheaded the chief people, drowning the governor's wife, and murdering other women. He defeated Raymond, count of Toulouse, but was himself killed in 1218. Louis VIII. and IX., kings of France, patronised the crusade; count Raymond was subdued, and abdicated in 1229; and the heretics were given up to the Inquisition. They had little in common with the Waldenses, which see.

ALBION. Britain is said to have been so called by Aristotle (died 322 B.C.). Julius Cæsar and others, are said to have given it the name (from albus, white) on account of its chalky cliffs.

ALBUERA OR ALBUHERRA, Extremadura, Spain. Here a battle was fought between the French, commanded by marshal Soult, and the British and Anglo-Spanish army, under marshal, afterwards lord Beresford, 16 May, 1811. The allies obtained a brilliant victory. The French loss exceeded 8000 men previously to their retreat; but the allies lost a large number. The chief brunt of the action fell on the British; colored Inglis, 22 officers, and more than 400 men, out of 570 who had mounted a hill, fell,—out of the 57th regiment alone; the other regiments were scarcely better off, not one-third being left standing; "1500 unwounded men, the remnant of 6000 unconquerable British soldiers, stood triumphant on this fatal hill." Nespie.

ALBUFERA (Spain, East Central), a lagoon, near which the French marshal Suchet (afterwards duke of Albufera) defeated the Spaniards under Blake, 4 Jan. 1812: this led to his capture of Valencia on 9 Jan.

ALCALA DE HENARES, Spain, near the Roman Complutum. At the university here was printed the Complutensian Polyglott Bible, at the expense of cardinal Ximenes, 1502-15.

ALCANTARA, a town on the Tagus, W. Spain. A fine bridge was built here by Trajan about 104. The duke of Alva acquired Portugal for Spain by defeating the Portuguese army here, 24 June, 1580. The Spanish military order of knighthood of Alcantara was established in 1150. The sovereign of Spain has been grand master since 1495.

ALCAZAR-QUIVER, near Fes, N. W. Africa, where the Moors totally defeated the Portuguese, whose gallant king Sebastian was slain, 4 Aug. 1578. The Portuguese disbelieved his death, and long expected his return; this led to the appearance of five impostors.

ALCHEMY, the forerunner of chemistry; its chief objects being the discovery of the philosopher's stone (which was to effect the transmutation of metals into gold), an alkahest or universal menstruum, and the elixir of life.* The alchemists assert that their founder was Hermes Trismegistus (thrice greatest), an ancient Egyptian king.—Pliny says, the emperor Caligula was the first who prepared natural arsenic, in order to make gold of it, but left it off, because the charge exceeded the profit.

Zosimus wrote on the subject about 410.

The Arabians cultivated alchemy and were followed (in the 13th century) by Roger Bacon, Albertus Magnus, Aquinas, Raymond Lullus, Basil Valentine (born 1394), Paracelsus (died 1541), and others.

In 1504 the craft of multiplying gold and silver was made felony by 2 Hen. IV. c. 4, which act was repealed in 1569. A license for practicing alchemy with all kinds of metals and minerals was granted to one Richard Carter, 1476. Ryder's Fædera.

Dr. Price, of Guilford, in 1786 published an account of his experiments and brought specimens of gold to the king, affirming that they were made by means of a red and white powder. Being a fellow of the Royal Society, he was required, under pain of expulsion, to repeat his experiments before Messrs Kirwan and Wolfe (some say Higgins); but after much equivocation and delay he took poison and died, Aug. 1783.

ALCOHOL. Pure spirit of wine or hydrated alcohol is said to have been obtained by the distillation of fermented liquors by Abucasis in the 12th century; and the dehydration of this liquor to have been partially effected by Raymond Lullus in the 13th century by carbonate of potassium. In 1820, Faraday and Henschel obtained traces of alcohol by passing olefiant gas (bi-carburetted hydrogen) through sulphuric acid; and in 1862 this process was examined and confirmed by Berthelot. Alcohol has been artificially formed from its elements by chemists: it was solidified by Prof. Dewar at the Royal Institution, 1886; see Distillation, Spirits, Brandy, Gin, Rum. About 250 medical men, including the president of the Royal College of Physicians, and many hospital officials, issued a cautionary declaration concerning the use of alcohol in medicine, Dec. 1871. See Temperance.

ALCOLEA (Andalusia, S. Spain). Near this bridge a sharp engagement took place between the royalists under general Inyia y Laey, marquis de Novaliches, and the insurgents under marshal Serrano, 27 Sept. 1868. The former was defeated, and, being severely wounded, surrendered 28 Sept. About 600 were killed on both sides.

AL-CORAN OR AL-KORAN, see Koran, Mohometanism, &c.

ALDERMAN. The Saxon soldorman was next to the king and frequently a viceroy; but after the settlement of the Danes the title was gradually displaced by that of seerl. Aldermen in corporations are next in dignity to the mayor. A curious list of aldermen and their wards is assigned to the year 1290. Loftie. Aldermen chosen for life, instead of annually, 17 Rich. II. 1394. Present mode of election established, 11 Geo. I. 1725. Aldermen made justices of the peace, 15 Geo. II. 1741.

* M. Martin Eloger patented a method of producing a "vital fluid" by combining nitrogen and carbon in a porous cell containing ammonia, immersed in a vessel filled with water. The current was to flow through silk threads attached to the vessel; about 1868.

* Now contradicted.

The 26 London aldermen elected by the ward. In 1877 the court of aldermen exercised their ancient right of veto against Sir John Bennett (thrice chosen alderman for the ward of Cheap), and chose Mr. Edgar Broffitt, 23 Oct. 1877.

Aldermen form part of the County Councils established by the Local Government Act, 1888.

ALDERNEY (English Channel), with Jersey, &c., was acquired by William the Conqueror, 1066. The "Races" is celebrated for two fatal occurrences; William of Normandy, son of Henry I. of England, and many young nobles (140 youths of the principal families of France and Britain), were overtaken by a storm, and all lost, 25 Nov. 1120. The British man-of-war Victory, of 100 guns and 1160 men, was wrecked here, 5 Oct. 1744; the admiral, Sir John Balchen, and all his crew perished. Through this strait the French escaped after their defeat at La Hogue by admirals Russell and Rooke, 19 May, 1692. The construction of a breakwater, in order to make Alderney a naval station, was begun in 1852, and after having cost 1,337,100*l.*, was suspended by parliament in 1871. In 1874 the harbour and lands were transferred from the control of the board of trade to that of the admiralty and the war department.

ALDERSHOT CAMP, on a moor near Farnham, about 35 miles from London. In April, 1854, the War office, having obtained a grant of 100,000*l.*, purchased 4000 acres of land for a permanent camp for 20,000 men.

Additional land purchased in 1856. Barracks since erected for 4000 infantry, 1500 cavalry, and several batteries of artillery. Great improvements in military cookery introduced (see Cookery) under the superintendence of captain John Grant, 1857. Visited by the queen, 18, 19 April, 1856.

The troops returned from the Crimea, reviewed by her, 7, 16 July, 1856.

About 15,000 men were stationed here, 1859. Cost of the camp, said to be 1,201,312 up to Feb. 1860. An industrial and fine-art exhibition, furnished by officers and men and their wives, opened, 29 June; closed 14 July, 1864.

Camp set up for 40,000 men to execute military manoeuvres, Aug. Sept. 1871. Many horses broke away through a fright, 30 Aug. 1871.

Review of 14,000, &c. by the queen, 5 July, 1872. Summer Manœuvres here, 1874, 1875, 1876, 1877.

Review by the queen, 13 May, 1878; again (all branches of the service represented), 2 July, 1886.

Theatre Royal burned down, 8 Feb. 1889.

The Queen reviews 11,945 of all ranks, 31 May, 1889.

A sham fight and review, in which about 25,530 troops, regulars and volunteers, were engaged, took place here in the presence of the Emperor William II., the Princess of Wales, the Duke of Cambridge, and others of the royal family, 7 Aug. 1889.

The Queen reviews the troops, 16 July, 1891, 27 June, 1892.

ALDINE PRESS, that of Aldo Manuzio (Aldus Manutius), at Venice, where were printed many of the first editions of the Greek, Latin, and Italian Classics, commencing in 1494 with Musæus.

ALE, BEER, and Wine. Ale is said to have been known as a beverage at least in 404 a.c. Herodotus ascribes the first discovery of the art of brewing barley-wine to Isia, the wife of Osiris, and a beverage of this kind is mentioned by Xenophon, 401 a.c. The Romans and Germans very early learned from the Egyptians the process of preparing a liquor from corn by means of fermentation. Theophrastus. Ale-houses are mentioned in the laws of Ina, king of Wessex. Booths were set up in England, 728, when laws were passed for their regulation. None but freemen were allowed to keep ale-houses in London, 13 Edw. I. 1285. They were further subjected to regulation by 5 & 6 Edw. VI. c. 25 (1551). By 1 James I. c. 9 (1603), one full quart of the best, and two quarts of small ale were to be sold for one penny. Excise duty on ale and beer was imposed by the parliament in 1643, and continued by Charles II. (1660); repealed, 1 Will. IV. c. 51 (1830); see Beer, Porter, Wine, Victuallers. Michael Thomas Bass, the eminent brewer of Burton, died 28 April, 1884, aged 84.

Mr. John Blekerdyke's book on "The Curiousities of Ale and Beer" was published in 1886.

ALEMANNI, or ALL MEN (i.e. men of all nations), hence Allemanni, German. A body of Suevi, who took this name, were attacked by Caracalla, 214. After several repulses, they invaded the empire under Aurelian, who subdued them in three battles, 271. They were again vanquished by Julian, 350, 357; by Jovinus, 368. They were defeated and subjugated by Clovis at Tolbiac (or Zulpich), 496. The Suebians are their descendants.

ALENÇON (N. France) gave title to a count and duke.

1476. Charles IV. fell after the battle of Favia in 1535, and died shortly after of chagrin. The duchy was annexed by the crown.

ALEPPO, North Syria, a large town named Beroa by Seleucus Nicator, about 299 b.c. The pachalic of Aleppo is one of the five governments of Syria. It was taken by the Saracens, A.D. 638, who restored its ancient name Haleb or Chaleb; by Saladin, 1193; and sacked by Timour, Nov. 1400. Its depopulation by the plague has been frequent; 60,000 persons were computed to have perished by it in 1797; many in 1827. The cholera raged here in 1832. Aleppo suffered severely from the terrible earthquakes in 1822 and 1830; and has often been the scene of fanatical massacres. On 16 Oct. 1850, the Mahometans attacked the Christians, burning everything. Three churches were destroyed, five others plundered, and thousands of persons slain. The total loss of property amounted to about a million sterling; no interference was attempted by the pacha. Population in 1835, 110,000.

ALESSANDRIA, a city of Piedmont, built in 1168 under the name of Caesar by the Milanese and Cremonese, to defend the Tanaro against the emperor, and afterwards named after pope Alexander III. It has been frequently besieged and taken. The French took it in 1796, but were driven out by Suwarrow, 21 July, 1799. They recovered it after the battle of Marengo, 14 June, 1800, and held it till 1814, when the strong fortifications erected by Napoleon were destroyed. These have been restored since June, 1856.

ALEXANDRIAN ERA, see Mundane.

ALEXANDRIAN SCHOOLS OF PHILOSOPHY. The first school arose soon after the foundation of Alexandria, 332 B.C. It flourished under the patronage of the Ptolemies till about 100 A.C. It included Euclid (300), Archimedes (287-212), Apollonius (250), Hipparchus (150), and Hero (150). The second school arose about A.D. 140, and lasted till about 400. Its most eminent members were Ptolemy, the author of the Ptolemaic system (150), Diophantus the arithmetician (300), and Pappus the geometer (350).

* The saying of Omar—"That if the books agreed with the book of God, they were useless; if they disagreed, they were pernicious"—is denied by Makometana. It is also attributed to Theophrastus, archbishop of Alexandria (150), and to cardinal Ximenes (1500).

ALEXANDRINES, verses of twelve syllables, first written by Alexander of Paris, about 1164, and since called after him. The last line of the Spenserian stanza is an Alexandrine. In Pope's Essay on Criticism, this verse is thus happily exemplified:—

"A needless Alexandrine ends the song,
That, like a wounded snake, drags its slow length along."

The longest English poem wholly in Alexandrine verse is Drayton's Polyolbion, published 1612-22.

ALEXINATZ, a town in Servia. Severe fighting took place here between the Turks and Servians, Aug.-Sept. 1876. The town, head-quarters of the Servians, was captured 31 Oct. This led to an armistice and peace. See Turkey.

ALFORD (N. Scotland), BATTLE OF. General Baillie, with a large body of covenanters, was defeated by the marquis of Montrose, 2 July, 1645.

ALGEBRA: Diophantus, said to be the inventor, wrote upon it probably between the 3rd and 5th centuries. It was cultivated in the 6th century by the Arabs, who brought it into Spain; and in Italy by Leonardo Bonaccio of Pisa, in 1220. In 1494 Luca Pacioli published the first printed book on Algebra in Europe. Serret. Some of the algebraic signs were introduced either by Christopher Rudolph (1522-26) or Michael Stifelius of Nuremberg, 1544, and others by Francis Vieta, in 1590, when algebra came into general use. Morery. Jerome Cardan published his "Arithmetica," containing his rule, 1545. Thos. Harriot's important discoveries appeared in his "Artis Analyticæ Praxis," 1631. Descartes applied algebra to geometry about 1637. The binomial theorem of Newton, the basis of the doctrine of fluxions, and the new analysis, 1668. Dean Peacock's "Algebra" is a first-class work.

ALGERIA, see Algiers.

ALGESIRAS, or OLD GIBRALTAR (S. Spain). Here the Moors entered Spain in 711, and held it till taken by Alfonso XI. March, 1344.—Two engagements took place here between the English fleet under sir James Saumarez and the United French and Spanish fleets, 6 and 12 July, 1801. In the first the enemy was victorious; but the British honour was redeemed in the latter conflict, the San Antonio, 74 guns, being captured. Two Spanish ships fired on each other by mistake, and took fire; of 2000 men on board, 250 were saved by the English. Alison.

ALGIERS, now ALGERIA, N.W. Africa; part of the ancient Mauritania, which was conquered by the Romans, 46 B.C.; by the Vandals, A.D. 439; recovered for the empire by Belisarius, 534; and subdued by the Arabs about 690. Population of Algeria in 1866, 2,921,146; 1872, 2,146,225; 1875, 2,448,691; 1880, 3,910,399; 1891, 4,124,732.

ALI, SECT OF (Shiites, or Fatimites). Ali, born about 599, married Mahomet's daughter Fatima, about 619; became vizier, 624; and caliph, 656. Ali was called by the prophet, "the lion of God, always victorious;" and the Persians follow the interpretation of the Koran according to Ali, while other Mahometans adhere to that of Aboobeker and Omar.
Ali was assassinated 23 Jan. 661.*

ALIENS or FOREIGNERS, were banished in 1155, being thought too numerous. In 1343 they were excluded from enjoying ecclesiastical offices.
By 2 Rich. II. st. 1, 1378, they were much relieved.
When they were to be tried originally, the juries were to be half foreigners, if they so desired, 1430.
They were restrained from exercising any trade of

ALIZARINE, a crystalline body, the colouring principle of madder, discovered in it by Robiquet and Colin in 1831. Schunck showed that all the finest madder colours contained only alizarine combined with alkalies and fatty acids. Graebe and Liebermann obtained anthracene from alizarine in 1868, and alizarine from anthracene in 1869.
The crystalline body anthracene was discovered in coal oils by Dumas and Laurent in 1832. See Madder.

ALJUBARROTA, Portugal. Here John I. of Portugal defeated John I. of Castile, and secured his country's independence, 14 Aug. 1385; see

ALKAHEST, see Alchemy.

ALKALIES (from kali, the Arabic name for the plant from which an alkaline substance was first procured) are ammoniac, potash, soda, and lithia. Black discovered the nature of the difference between caustic and mild alkalies in 1736.

The fixed alkalies, potash and soda, decomposed, and the metals potassium and sodium formed, by Humphry
Davy at the Royal Institution, London, 1807.

Dr. Ure invented an alkalimeter, 1816.

The manufacture of alkalies, very extensive in Lancashire and Cheshire, is based on the decomposition of common salt (chloride of sodium), by a process invented by a Frenchman named Nicolas Le Blanc, about 1792; his statue set up in Paris, summer, 1885.

Mr. Leach obtained crystals of soda from brine about 1812.

Various modifications of these processes are now in use.

"Alkali works," are defined as works for the manufacture of alkali, sulphates of soda, sulphate of potash, and in which muriatic gas is evolved.

Mr. Wm. Gossage's process for condensing muriatic acid gas patented in 1836.

The "ammonia process" of making soda, invented by Dyer and Hemming, in 1838, patents respecting it taken out by Sulzay, 1865, 1867, 1872; Gossage, 1834; Schlesinger, 1834, 1838; Young, 1871, 1872; Waldon, 1872, 1873; and by others.

Mr. Walter Waldon received the French Lavoisier medal for his most important improvements in the alkali manufacture, July, 1877. He died of overwork, 20
Sept. 1885, aged 57.

In consequence of the injury to vegetation produced by the alkali works in Lancashire and Cheshire, the Alkali Works act "for the more effectual condensation (of 95 per cent.) of muriatic acid gas" (or hydrochloric acid) was passed, 28 July, 1863. It came into operation 1 Jan. 1864, proved successful; was re-enacted, 1868; and amended, 1874 and 1885. Mr. James Greenwood's electrolytic process for the direct production of caustic soda and chlorine from common salt required successful, Jan. 1870. See Chemical Works and Union.

ALKMAER, see Bergen.

ALLAHABAD (N. W. Hindostan), the "holly city" of the Indian Mahomedans, situated at the junction of the rivers Jumna and Ganges. The province of Allahabad was successively subject to the sovereigns of Delhi and Oude, but in 1801 was partially and in 1803 wholly incorporated with the British possessions. By treaty here, Bengal, &c., was ceded to the English in 1765.—During the Indian mutiny several sepoy regiments rose and massacred their officers, 4 June, 1857; colonel Neil marched promptly from Benares and suppressed the insurrection. In Nov. 1861, lord Canning made this city the capital of the N. W. provinces. Visit of the Prince of Wales, 7 March, 1874. Population, 1891, 176,770.

ALLEGIANCE, see Oaths.

ALLEGORY abounds in the Bible and in Homer; see Jacob's blessing upon his sons, Genesis xlix. (1689 B.C.), Psalms lxxx., and all the prophets. Spenser's Faerie Queene (1590) and Bunyan's Pilgrim's Progress (1658) are allegories throughout. The Spectator (1711), by Addison, Steele, and others, abounds in allegories. The allegorical interpretation of the scriptures is said to have begun with Origen in the 3rd century; but see Gal. iv. 24.

(about 830) for the commemoration of all those saints and martyrs in whose honour no particular day is assigned. The reformers of the English

The English, French, and Turkish army (about 57,000 men) moved out of their first encampment in the Crimea on 19 Sept., and bivouacked for the night on the left bank of the Bulganoa. The Russians (commanded by prince Menschikoff), mustering 40,000 infantry, had 180 field-pieces on the heights, and on the morning of 20 Sept. were joined by 6000 cavalry from Theodosia (or Kaffa). The English forces under lord Raglan, consisted of 26,000 men; the French of 24,000, under marshal St. Arnaud. At 12 o'clock the signal to advance was made; the river Alma was crossed, while prince Napoleon took possession of the village under the fire of the Russian batteries; and at 4, after a sanguinary fight, the allies were completely victorious. The enemy, utterly routed, threw away their arms and knapsacks in their flight, having lost about 5000 men, of whom 900 were made prisoners, mostly wounded. The loss of the British was 26 officers and 327 men killed, and 73 officers and 1539 men wounded (chiefly from the 23rd, 7th, and 33rd regiments); that of the French, 3 officers and 233 men killed, and 54 officers and 1033 men wounded. ALMANACS (from the Arabic al mansah, to count; or better, the Coptic al computation, and men, memory). The Egyptians computed time by instruments; the Alexandrians had almanacs, and log calendars are ancient. In the British Museum and universities are specimens of early almanacs. Michael Nostradamus, the astrologer, wrote an almanac in the style of Merlin, 1556. Dufresnoy, Professor Augustus De Morgan's valuable "Book of Almanacs," with an index of reference, by which the almanac may be found for every year," was published in March, 1851.* Among the earlier and more remarkable almanacs were * Murphy's Almanack for 1856 predicted correctly a frost on 7 Jan.; thaw and frost 14th; severe frost 21st, and then thaw. A great sale of the almanac ensued. Afterwards the predictions failed.

The Stationers' company claimed the exclusive right of publishing almanacs in virtue of letters patent from James I., granting the privilege to them and the two Universities; but the monopoly was broken up by a decision of the Court of Common Pleas in 1775. A bill to renew the privilege was lost in 1779.

The Stamp Duty on English almanacs first imposed in 1790, was abolished in August, 1834; since when almanacs have become innumerable, being issued by tradesmen with their goods.

Of Moore's under the management of Henry Andrews, the able computer of the Nautical Ephemeris at one time upwards of 430,000 copies were annually sold. He died in 1820.

Of Foreign Almanacs, the principal are the "Almanach de France," first published in 1699, and the "Almanach de Gotha," 1764.

brought them into Palestine are legendary. Dr. Isaac Taylor's learned work, "The Alphabet," was published May, 1883.

Nearly 50 alphabets are known, of which about 50 are in use, mostly developed from the Phœnician alphabet itself, said to have been derived from the Egyptian hieroglyphic picture writing; the Roman alphabet was based upon the Greek. The alphabets of the different nations contain the following number of letters:—

French	25	Parian	32
Italian	25	Turkish	28
Spanish	27	Senarot	44
German	26	Chinese radical charac-

ALPHONSINE TABLES, astronomical tables, composed by Spanish and Arab astronomers, and collected in 1253 under the direction of Alfonso X. of Castile, surnamed the Wise, who is said to have expended upwards of 400,000 crowns in completing the work; he himself wrote the preface. The Spanish government ordered the work of Alphonsine to be reprinted from the best MSS.; the publication began in 1863.

ALPS, European mountains. Those between France and Italy were passed by Hannibal, 218 B.C., by the Romans, 154 B.C., and by Napoleon I. May, 1800. Roads over Mont Cenis and the Simplon, connecting France and Italy, were constructed by order of Napoleon, between 1801-6; see Simplon. The "Alpine Club," which consists of British travellers in the Alps, was founded in 1858, and published its first work, "Peaks, Passes, and Glaciers," 1859; and a journal since. Mr. John Ball, F.R.S., long the able first president, and author of excellent "Guides," died 21 Oct. 1889. See Jungfrau, Matterhorn. An international Alpine Congress opened at Salzburg 14 Aug. 1882.

Mont Cenis or Col de Frêne Tunnel.—A tunnel, 7½ miles long through mont Cenis, connecting Savoy and Piedmont, was proposed by M. Medail, and, after long lying dormant, was discussed and plans drawn up in 1846. The execution was prevented by the war of 1849.

The work of excavation was begun by king Victor Emmanuel, 31 Aug. 1857.

The boring was at first effected by ordinary piercing machinery; steam power was employed in 1860; and lastly compressed air.

Engineers—Grattolli, Grandis, and Sommeiller; the boring was completed, 25 Dec. 1870.

The total cost was about 2,600,000*l*. As the Italians had executed the work within the given time, the French government bore the chief expense.

The first experimental trip was made in 40 minutes, 13 Sept., and the tunnel was solemnly inaugurated by the passage of 50 carriages in 30 minutes, 17 Sept. 1871; regular trains pass through, 15 Oct. 1871.

A railway for locomotives over mont Cenis was constructed upon Mr. Fell's plan in 1867 (see Railways), and opened for traffic, 15 June, 1868.

The overland mail first travels through the tunnel to Brindisi, saving 24 hours, 5 Jan. 1879.

St. Gotthard Tunnel (part of a railway system to connect the North Sea and the Mediterranean), about 4½ miles; compressed air employed in boring; begun June, 1872; completed 29 Feb. 1880; through failure in venting, May, 1880, opening deferred.

The first complete train carrying one hundred passengers, passed through the St. Gotthard Tunnel in 50 minutes, 1 Nov. 1881; partially opened 1 Jan. 1882; completely opened June, 1882.

ALPSTED, battle of, or Chertton, which

ALSACE, ELZASS, formerly part of the kingdom of Austrasia, afterwards the French departments of the Upper and Lower Rhine. It was incorporated with the German empire in the 19th century. A portion was restored to France, 1648, and the whole, including Strasbourg, in 1792. Alsace was re-conquered by the Germans, Aug.-Sept. 1870; and annexed to their empire, May, 1871; by law, 9 June, 1871. The Alsatians were permitted to choose their nationality, before 30 Sept. 1872. Many emigrated into France, with much regret.—ALSACE-LOTHARINGEN was constituted a province of the German empire, having been ceded by France by the treaty of peace concluded 10 May, 1871, see Belfort. The province sends 15 members to the German parliament. Administrators, prince Bismarck, 1871; field-marshal, Manteuffel, 1 Oct. 1879; prince Hohenlohe, July, 1885. Population of Alsace-Lotharingen, 1885, 1,564,355; 1890, 1,653,107. See Germany, 1887, and Strasbourg. The emperor William II. visited the province 20 Aug. at seq., 1890. The stringent passport regulations greatly relaxed 1 Oct. 1891.

ALSATIA, a name given to the precinct of Whitefriars, London, is described in Scott's "Fortunes of Nigel." Its privilege of sanctuary was abolished in 1697.

ALSEN (Denmark), besieged by the Prussians, and heroically defended, 26 June; taken, 29 June, 1864.

ALTAR. One was built by Noah, 2348 B.C.; 3154 Hales; 2481 Clinton (Gen. viii. 20); others by Abraham, 1921 (Gen. xii. 8). Directions for making an altar are given, Exod. xx. 24, 1491 B.C. The erection of altars in Greece is mythically assigned to Cecrops. The term "altar" was early applied to the table used in the celebration of the Lord's Supper in Christian churches (Heb. xiii. 10). Since the time of Elizabeth there has been much controversy on the subject, and the Puritans in the civil war destroyed many of the ancient stone altars, substituting wooden tables. In Jan. 1845 it was decided in the Arches Court that stone altars were not to be erected in English churches.

ALTENKIRCHEN (Prussia). The French, who had defeated the Austrians here, 4 June, 1796, were themselves defeated, and their general, Marceau, killed, 19 Sept. following.

ALTER EGO (another or second I), a term applied to Spanish viceroys when exercising regal power; used at Naples when the crown prince was appointed viceroy-general during an insurrection in July, 1820.

ALTONA (Holstein, N. Germany), acquired by the Danes, 1660, and made a city, 1664. It was occupied first by the German federal troops, 24 Dec. 1863, and then by the Prussians (the federal diet protesting) 12 Feb. 1864.

ALT-RANSTADT (Prussia), where the treaty of peace dictated by Charles XII. of Sweden, to Frederick Augustus of Poland, was signed, 24 Sept. 1706, O.S. Frederick, deposed in 1704, regained the throne of Poland after the defeat of Charles XII., in 1709.

ALUM, a salt, is said to have been first discovered at Roebia, in Syria, about 1300; it was found in Tuscany about 1470; its manufacture was brought to perfection in England by Mr T. Chalmer, who established large alum works near Whitby in 1608; it was discovered in Ireland in 1757; and in Anglesey in 1790. Alum is used as a mordant in dyeing, to harden tallow, to whiten bread, and in the paper manufacture.

Messrs. Peter Spence & Sons produced a colossal crystal of alum weighing over eight tons. April, 1886.

ALUMBAGE, a palace with other buildings near Lucknow, Oude, India, taken during the mutiny from the rebels, 23 Sept. 1857, and heroically defended by the British under Sir James Outram. He defeated an attack of 30,000 sepoys on 12 Jan. 1858, and of 20,000 on 21 Feb., and was relieved by Sir Colin Campbell in March.

ALUMINIUM, a metal, the base of the earth alumina, which is combined with silica in clay, and which was shown to be a distinct earth by Marggraf in 1754, having been previously confounded with lime. Discovered in 1826 obtained, the chloride of aluminium; and in 1827 the metal itself was got from it by F. Wöhler, but was long a scientific curiosity, the process being expensive. The mode of production was afterwards simplified by Bunsen and others, more especially by H. Ste.-Claire Deville, who in 1856 succeeded in procuring considerable quantities of this metal by the aid of the metal sodium.* It is very light (sp. g. 2.25), malleable, and sonorous; when pure does not rust, and is not acted on by sulphur or any acid except hydrochloric. In March, 1856, it was 3*l.* the ounce; in June, 1857, 1*l.* or 12*s.*, and it gradually became much cheaper. The eagles of the French colours have been made of it, and many other ornamental and useful articles. Deville's work, "De l'Aluminium," was published in 1859. An aluminium manufactory was established at Newcastle in 1860, by Messrs. Bell. They obtain the metal from a French mineral, bauxite. Their aluminium bronze, an alloy of copper and aluminium, invented by Dr. John Perey, F.R.S., was made into watch cases, &c., by Messrs. Reid of Newcastle, in 1862. The production of aluminium has been very greatly increased by the use of Mr. Eugene Cowles' electric furnace and the use of powerful dynamo-machines: aluminium bronze is thus largely produced, 1886-9. A company for the purpose was formed in the United States.

Mr. H. Y. Carter's aluminium works at Oldbury near Birmingham in successful operation, May 1889. Price of aluminium 20*s.* a pound (1889). See Sodium.

AMADIS OF GAUL, a Spanish or Portuguese romance, stated to have been written about 1342 by Vasco de Lobeira. It was enlarged by De Montalvo, about 1485; and first printed (in Spanish) 1519; in French, 1540-56.

AMALEKITES (descendants of Amalek, grandson of Esau, brother of Jacob) attacked the Israelites, 1491 B.C. when perpetual war was denounced against them. They were subdued by Saul about 1079, by David, 1058 and 1056; and by the Simeonites about 715 B.C.

AMALFI, a city on the gulf of Salerno, Naples, in the 8th century became the seat of a republic, and flourished by its commerce till 1075, when it was taken by Roger Guiscard, and eventually incorporated with Naples. The Normans, in their sack of the town in 1135, are said to have found a copy of the Pandects of Justinian, and thus to have induced the revival of the study of Roman law in Western Europe; the story is now doubted. Flavio Gioia, a native of Amalfi, is the reputed discoverer of the mariner's compass, about 1302.

* A cheaper method of procuring this metal was patented by Mr. Webster, of Hollywood, near Birmingham, in 1888.

AMATEUR MECHANICAL SOCIETY (39, Stamford Street), issued its first prospectus, 1 Jan. 1869.

AMATONGALAND, between Zululand and the Portuguese possessions, South Africa. A deputation from Queen Zambila solicited protection of England from the Boers, and the prohibition of the liquor traffic, Nov.-Dec. 1887.

AMAZON, West India mail steam ship, left Southampton on her first voyage, Friday, 3 Jan. 1852, and on Sunday morning, Jan. 4, was destroyed by fire at sea, about 110 miles W.S.W. of Bally (ascribed to the spontaneous ignition of combustible matter placed near the engine-room). Out of 161 persons on board, 102 persons must have perished by fire or drowning. 21 persons were saved by the life-boat of the ship; 25 more were carried into Great harbour by a Dutch vessel passing by; and 13 others were picked up in the bay of Biscay, also by a Dutch galliot. Eliot Warburton, a distinguished writer in general literature, was among those lost.

AMAZON, a river (S. America), was discovered by Pinzon, in 1500, and explored by Francisco Orellana, in 1540. Coming from Peru, he sailed down the Amazon to the Atlantic, and observing companies of women in arms on its bank, he called the country Amazonia, and gave the name of Amazon to the river, previously called Marañon.

AMAZONS. Three nations of Amazons have been mentioned—the Asiatic, Scythian, and African. They are mythically said to have been the descendants of Scythians inhabiting Cappadocia, where their husbands, having made incursions, were all slain, being surprised in ambushes by their enemies. Their widows formed a female state, and deemed that matrimony was a shameful servitude. Quintus Curtius. They were said to have been conquered by Theseus. The Amazons were constantly employed in wars; and that they might throw the javelin with more force, their right breasts were burned off, whence their name from the Greek, a, no, ma, breast. Others derive the name from ma, the moon, which they are supposed to have worshipped. About 330 B.C. their queen, Thalestris, visited Alexander the Great, whilst he was pursuing his conquests in Asia, with three hundred females in her train. Herodotus. For modern amazons, see Dalmacy.

AMBASSADORS. Accredited agents, and representatives from one court to another, are referred to in early ages. In most countries they have great privileges; and in England, they and their servants are secured against arrest. England has seven ambassadors (at Berlin, Constantinople, Madrid, Paris, Rome, St. Petersburg, Vienna), twenty-six ministers, and about thirty chief counsils, resident at foreign courts, exclusive of inferior agents; the ambassadors and other chief agents from abroad at the court of London in 1865, were 47; in 1868, 43; in 1873, 42; in 1878, 39; in 1889, 43.

The Russian ambassador being implicated for debt by a lace-merchant, 27 July, 1808, led to the passing the statute of 7 June, for the protection of ambassadors, 1808.

Two men, convicted of arresting the servant of an ambassador, were sentenced to be conducted to the house of the ambassador, with a label on their breasts, to ask his pardon, and then one of them to be imprisoned three months, and the other fined, 18 May, 1760. The first ambassador from the United States of America to England, John Adams, presented to the king, 1 June, 1785; the first from Great Britain to America was Mr. Hammond, in 1792.

A Japanese minister received by the queen, 8 March, 1876.

The first accredited ambassador from China, Kuo-ta-Jen, landed at Southampton, 27 Jan. 1877.
In the case of Sir H. Macartney, secretary to the Chinese legation v. the Vestry of Marylebone, the Queen's Bench decided that the plaintiff was free from parish rates and taxes, 24 Feb. 1890.

AMBER, a carbonaceous mineral,* principally found in the northern parts of Europe, of great repute in the world from the earliest time; esteemed as a medicine before the Christian era: Theophrastus wrote upon it; 200 B.C. Upwards of 150 tons of amber have been found in one year on the sands of the shore near Pillau. Phillips.

AMBLEF, near Cologne, Germany. Here Charles Martel defeated Chilperic II., and Ragenfrid, mayor of the Neustrians, 716.

AMBOISE (Central France). A conspiracy of the Huguenots against Francis II., Catherine de Medici, and the Guises, was suppressed at this place in Jan. 1560. On 10 March, 1563, the Pacification of Amboise was published, granting toleration to the Huguenots. The civil war was however soon renewed.

AMBOYNA, chief of the Molucca Isles, discovered about 1512 by the Portuguese, but not wholly occupied by them till 1580. It was taken by the Dutch in 1605. The English factors at this settlement were cruelly tortured and put to death, 17 Feb. 1623-4, by the Dutch, on an accusation of a conspiracy to expel them from the island, where the two nations jointly shared in the pepper trade of Java. Cromwell compelled the Dutch to give a sum of money to the descendants of the sufferers. Amboyna was seized by the English, 16 Feb. 1796, but was restored by the treaty of Amiens, in 1802. It was again seized by the British, 17-19 Feb. 1810; and again restored at the peace of May, 1814.

AMBROSIAN CHANT, see Chant, Liturgy, &c.

AMBULANCE ASSOCIATION, see under John's, 81.

First "ambulance ship" (for small-pox convalescents). Red Cross, constructed for Metropolitan Asylums Board, launched at Millwall, 8 Aug. 1883.

AMEN, an ancient Hebrew word meaning true, faithful, certain, is used in the Jewish and Christian assemblies, at the conclusion of prayer; see 1 Cor. xiv., 16 (A.D. 59). It is translated "verily" in the Gospels.

AMENDE HONORABLE, in France, in the 9th century, was a punishment inflicted on traitors and sacrilegious persons: the offender was delivered to the hangman; his shirt was stripped off, a rope put round his neck, and a taper in his hand; he was then led into court, and was obliged to beg pardon of God and the country. Death or banishment sometimes followed. These words also denote a recantation in open court, or in presence of the injured person.

AMERCEMENT, in Law, a fine assessed for an offence done, or pecuniary punishment at the mercy of the court: thus differing from a fine directed and fixed by a statute. By Magna Charta, 1215, a freeman cannot be amerced for a small fault, * Much diversity of opinion still prevails among naturalists and chemists respecting the origin of amber. It is considered by Berzelius to have been a resin dissolved in volatile oil. It often contains delicately-formed insects. Sir D. Brewster concludes it to be indurated vegetable juices. When rubbed it becomes electrical, and from its Greek name, elektron, the term Electricity is derived.

but in proportion to the offence he has committed; the mode was determined by 9 Hen. III., 1225.

AMERICA,* the great Western Continent, is about 9000 miles long, with an area of about 16,500,000 square miles. It is now believed to have been visited by the Norsemen or Vikings in the 10th and 11th centuries; but the modern discovery is due to the sagacity and courage of the Genoese navigator, Christopher Columbus.† See Chicago.

Columbus is imprisoned in chains at San Domingo by Bobadilla, sent out to investigate into his conduct, May, conveyed to Spain, where he is honourably received. 17 Dec. "

* The name is derived from Amerigo Vesputri, a Florentine merchant, who died in 1492. He accompanied Ojeda in his voyage on the eastern coast in 1498, and described the country in letters sent to his friends in Italy. He is charged with presumptuously inserting "Tierra de Amerigo" in his maps. Irving discusses the question in the Appendix to the Life of Columbus, but comes to no conclusion. Humboldt asserts that the name was given to the continent in the popular works of Waldseemüller, a German geographer, without the knowledge of Vesputri. To America we are indebted, among other things, for maize, the turkey, the potato, Peruvian bark, and tobacco.

† Christopher Columbus was born about 1445; first went to sea about 1460; settled at Lisbon in 1470, where he married Felipa, the daughter of Perestrello, an Italian navigator; whereby he obtained much geographical knowledge. He is said to have laid the plans of his voyage of discovery before the republic of Genoa, in 1485, and other powers, and finally before the court of Spain, where at length the queen Isabella became his patron. After undergoing much ingratitude and cruel persecution from his own followers and the Spanish court, he died on 20 May, 1506; and was buried with much pomp at Valladolid. His remains were transferred, in 1513, to Seville; in 1536 to San Domingo; and in Jan. 1596 to the Havana, Cuba. The original inscription on his tomb is said to have been: "A Castilla y a Leon Nuevo Mundo, dir Colon." "To Castile and Leon Colon gave a New World." Humboldt says beautifully, that the success of Columbus was "a conquest of reflection." It was stated in Nov. 1890, that Columbus' log-book had been fished up from the sea.

Columbus sails on his fourth voyage, a Nauf; discovers "treasure islands" on the coast of Honduras, and explores the coast of the isthmus, July, 1492; discovers and names Porto Bello 1498-3

AMERICA, BRITISH, see British America.

AMERICA, CENTRAL, REPUBLICS OF, includes Guatemala, San Salvador, Honduras, Nicaragua, and Costa Rica (which see). They declared their independence, Sept. 21, 1821, and separated from the Mexican confederation, 21 July, 1823. The states made a treaty of union between themselves, 21 March, 1824. There has been among them since much anarchy and bloodshed, aggravated greatly by the irruption of American filibusters under Canby and Walker, 1854-5. In Jan. 1863, a war began between Guatemala (afterwards joined by Nicaragua) and San Salvador (afterwards supported by Honduras). The latter was defeated at Santa Rosa, 16 June, and San Salvador was taken, 26 Oct.; the president of San Salvador, Barrios, fled; and Carrera, the dictator of Guatemala, became predominant over the confederacy. Gen. Barrios, president of Guatemala, attempts the union of the five states, himself to be dictator; opposed by all except Honduras, Feb. He is defeated and killed in a prolonged battle at Chalchuapa, 2 April; peace with the states signed 16 April, 1885. The union of the states, under one principal president, was proposed at the Pan-American Congress, 1889-90. See Darien, and Panama.

AMMERGAU PASSION PLAY, see Drama.

AMMONIA, the volatile alkali, mainly produced by the decomposition of organic substances. Its name is ascribed to its having been procured from heated camels' dung near the temple of Jupiter Ammon in Libya. The discovery of its being a compound of nitrogen and hydrogen is ascribed to Joseph Priestley in 1774. By the recent labours of chemists both the oxide of the hypothetical metal ammonium, and ammonium amalgam, have been formed; and specimens of each were shown at the Royal Institution in 1856 by Dr. A. W. Hofmann, who has done very much for the chemical history of ammonia.

Ammonotaphos. An apparatus for the improvement of the voice and lungs, by inhaling combinations of ammonia, hydrogen, &c., invented by Dr. Carter Moffat, of Edinburgh, 1883. An amnesty, with certain exemptions, was granted to the vanquished southern states of North America by president Johnson, 29 May, 1865. An amnesty for political offences was granted by the emperor of Austria at his coronation as king of Hungary, 8 June, 1867; a rather sweeping amnesty bill was passed in the United States regarding the rebellion, 10 April, 1871. The amphitheatre of Vespasian (capable of holding 87,000 persons) was built between A.D. 70 and 80; and is said to have been a fortress in 532. AMYLENE, a colourless, very mobile liquid, first procured by M. Balard of Paris in 1844, by distilling fusel oil (potato-spirit) with chloride of zinc. The vapour was employed instead of chloroform first by Dr. Suow in 1856. It has since been tried in many hospitals here and in France. The odour is more unpleasant than chloroform, and more vapour must be used.

ANABAPTISTS, those who baptize at full age, and reject infant baptism; see Baptists. The name was first given to Thomas Münzer, Storch, and other fanatics who preached in Saxony in 1521, and excited a rebellion of the lower orders in Germany, which was quelled with bloodshed in 1525. A similar insurrection took place in Westphalia, headed by Matthias, 1533, and, after his assassination, by John Boccold of Leyden, who was crowned "king of Sion" in Münster, 24 June, 1534. Münster was taken in June, 1535; and John was executed 13 Feb. 1536. Several anabaptists were executed in England in 1535, 1538, and 1540. On 6 Jan. 1661, about 80 anabaptists in London appeared in arms, headed by their preacher, Thomas Venner, a wine-cooper. They fought desperately, and killed many of the soldiers brought against them. Their leader and sixteen others were executed, 19 and 21 Jan. Annals of England.

Anarchy frequently prevailed in ancient times. Similar principles, now termed socialism, have been eminently advanced by P. J. Proudhon 1809-65, to whom is ascribed the maxim, "la propriété est le vol." See France, Oct. 1882. Many Anarchists tried and punished in Austria and other countries, 1883 et seq. Anarchists expelled from Switzerland, 1885, but return, and cause much trouble; they held a congress at Ticino Jan. 1891. The modern anarchists declare war against society and all its institutions, and frequently employ dynamite as a destructive agent. See Dynamite, France, Spain, and Trials, 1892.

Erasistratus and Herophilus first dissected the human form, having been previously confined to animals; it is said that they practised upon the bodies of living criminals, about 300 and 293 B.C. Galen, who died A.D. 193, was a great anatomist. In England, the schools were long supplied with bodies unlawfully exhumed from graves; and until 1832, the bodies of executed murderers were ordered for dissection. Pope Boniface VIII. forbade the dissection of dead bodies, 1297.—The first anatomical plates, designed by Titian, were employed by Vesalius, about 1538. Leonardo da Vinci, Raphael, and Michael Angelo, studied anatomy. The great discoveries of Harvey were made in 1616. William and John Hunter were great anatomists: William died 1783, and John, 1793. Quain's and Wilson's large anatomical plates were published 1842, and Bourguery's great work by Jacob, 1830-55. Comparative anatomy has been treated systematically in the present century by Cuvier, Owen, Müller, Huxley, and others.—The anatomy of plants has been studied since 1680; see Botany.

ANATOMICAL SOCIETY OF GREAT BRITAIN founded 1887.

* By 32 Hen. VIII. c. 42 (1540), surgeons were granted four bodies of executed malefactors for "anatomie," which privilege was extended in following reigns; but in consequence of the crimes committed by restriction-men in order to supply the surgical schools (robbing churchyards and even committing murder, see Burking), a new statute was passed in 1832, which abated the ignominy of dissection by prohibiting that of executed murderers, and made provision for the wants of surgeons by permitting, under certain regulations, the dissection of persons dying in workhouses, &c. The act also appointed inspectors of anatomy, regulated the schools, and required persons practicing anatomy to obtain a license. It repealed the clauses of the act of 1540 which directed the dissection of the body of an executed murderer.

ANCHORITES, see Monachism.

ANCHORS were invented by the Tuscan. Phny. The second tooth, or snke, was added by Anacharis the Beythian (592 A.C.). Strabo. Anchors said to have been forged in England A.D. 578. The Admiralty anchor was introduced about 1841. Improved anchors were made by Perring and Rodgers about 1828; by Porter, 1838; by Costell, 1848; by Trotman, 1853; and by several other persons. ANCIENT MONUMENTS in Britain. Bills for their preservation (especially of prehistoric) have been brought into parliament in vain. One by sir John Lubbock, read 2nd time, 7 March, 1877; was withdrawn; again read 2nd time, 19 Feb. 1878; read 2nd time in the lords, 11 Mar. 1880. Acts for their better preservation were passed in 1882 and 1892.

ANCONA, an ancient Roman port on the Adriatic. The mole was built by Trajan, 107. After many changes of rulers (Lombards, Saracens, Greeks, and Germans) Ancona was annexed to the papal states in 1532. It was taken by the French, 1797; retaken by the Austrians, 1799; reoccupied by the French, 1801; restored to the pope, 1802. It was occupied by the French in 1832; evacuated in 1838, and after an insurrection was bombarded and captured by the Austrians, 18 June, 1849. The Marches (comprising this city) rebelled against the Papal government in Sept. 1860. Lamoriciere, the papal general, fled to Ancona after his defeat at Castelfidardo, but was compelled to surrender himself, the city, and the garrison, on 20 Sept. ANDALUSIA (S. Spain), a province once part of the ancient Lusitania and Bætica. The name is a corruption of Vandalitia, it having been held by the Vandals from 419 to 459, when it was acquired by the Visigoths. The latter were expelled by the Moors in 711, who established the kingdom of Cordova, and retained it till 1236. Andalusia suffered much by the earthquakes of Dec. 1884.

ANDORRA, a small republic in the Pyrenees, bearing the title of "the valleys and sovereignties of Andorra," was made independent by Charlemagne about 778, certain rights being reserved to the bishop of Urgel. The feudal sovereignty, which long appertained to the counts of Foix, reverted to the French king, Henry IV., in 1599; but was given up in 1790. On 27 March, 1806, an imperial decree restored the old relations between Andorra and France. The republic is now governed by a council elected for four years; but the magistratures are appointed alternately by the French government and the Spanish bishop of Urgel, to both of whom tribute is paid. The population 1875 about 5,800. Andorra, though neutral, was attacked by the Carlists in Sept. 1874. The university was founded in 1411 by bishop Wardlaw. The cathedral (built 1159-1318), was destroyed by a mob, excited by a sermon of John Knox, June, 1559. Sir R. Sibbald's list of the bishops commences with Killach, 872. The see became archiepiscopal in 1470, ceased soon after 1689; was re-instituted in 1844; see Bishops. ANHALT, HOUSE OF, in Germany, deduces its origin from Bertholdus, who made war upon the Thuringians in the sixth century. In 1606, the principality was divided among the four sons of Joachim Ernest, by the eldest, John-George. Thus began the four branches—Anhalt-Desau (descended from John-George); Zerbst, extinct, 1793; Plötzen or Oosterh, extinct, 1847; and Bernburg, extinct, 1863; (the last duke died without issue, 23 Aug. 1863.) The princes of Anhalt became dukes in 1809. Anhalt is an hereditary constitutional monarchy (by law 19 Feb. 1872); population in 1871, 203,437; in 1875, 213,565; in 1885, 248,166; 1890, 271,759.

From benzole (which see) Bechamp, in 1856, obtained it by successive treatment with concentrated nitric acid and reducing agents. The scientific relations of aniline have been carefully examined by several chemists, especially by Dr. A. W. Hofmann. It was long known to yield a series of coloured compounds, but it was not till 1856 that Mr. W. H. Perkin showed how a violet oxidation-product (mauve) could be applied in dyeing. Aniline is now manufactured on a large scale for the commercial production of "Mauve" and "Magenta" (rosaniline) (which see), and several other colouring matters, aniline blue, 1861; violet, 1863; "night" green, &c. Saville Kent's Manual of Infusoria, 3 volumes, 1880-3, are valuable. The Rev. W. H. Dallinger and Dr. Drysdale, by their unwearied continuous microscopical observations of bacteria and other low forms of life, have greatly increased our knowledge: 1873-89.

ANIMAL MAGNETISM (to cure diseases by sympathetic affection) was introduced by father Mehl, a Jesuit, at Vienna, about 1774, and had its believers in France and England about 1788-89. Mehl for a short time associated with Mesmer, but they soon quarrelled.—Mr. Perkins (who died in 1799) invented "Metallic Tractors for collecting, concentrating, and applying animal magnetism;" but Drs. Falconer and Haygarth put an end to his pretensions by performing many wonders with a pair of crooked tractors. Broads. See Mesmerism. Animal magnetism disapproved by commissions of the French Academy of Science, 1837-8; investigation closed as of a "dead letter," 1840. Remarkable feats were performed by Miss Abbott "the magnetic lady," at the Alhambra theatre, 14 Nov. & 26 Aug. 1891.

ANIMALS, CREDULITY TO. Mr. Martin, M.P., as a senator, zealously laboured to repress it; and in 1824, the Royal Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals was instituted. Its new house in Jermyn-street, London, was founded 4 May, 1869. It opposed vivisection in 1860, in union with a French society, and in Oct. 1873, offered premiums for improved tracks for conveying cattle. A jubilee congress of this and similar societies met in London 17 June, 1874. Convictions obtained by the society 1835 to June, 1876, 28,309. The Animals' Institute, Knightsbridge, distributed prizes for inventions for the relief of horses and other animals, 28 July, 1890.

ANJOU, a province, W. France, was taken by Henry II. of England from his brother Geoffrey, in 1156; their father Geoffrey Plantagenet, count of Anjou, having married the empress Matilda in 1127. Beaugé was the first battle that turned the tide of success against the English.

ANNAM or ANAM, an empire of Asia, to the east of India, nominally subject to China, comprising Tonquin, Cochinchina, part of Cambodia, and various islands in the Chinese Sea; said to have been conquered by the Chinese, 334 B.C., and held by them till A.D. 867. In 1407 they reconquered it, but abandoned it in 1428. After much anarchy, bishop Adrian, a French missionary, obtained the friendship of Louis XVI. for his pupil Gia-long, the son of the nominally reigning monarch, and with the aid of a few of his countrymen established Gia-long on the throne, who reigned till his death in 1821, when his son became king. In consequence of the persecution of the Christians, war broke out with the French, who defeated the army of Annam, 10,000 strong, about 22 April, 1859, when 500 were killed. On 3 June, 1862, peace was made; three provinces were ceded to the French, and toleration of the Christians granted. An insurrection in these provinces against the French, begun about 17 Dec. 1862, was suppressed in Feb. 1863. Ambassadors sent from Annam with the view of regaining the ceded provinces arrived at Paris in Sept. 1863, had no success. Cochinchina and other provinces were annexed to the French empire by proclamation, 25 June, 1867. Several native Christians were massacred by order of a bonze, July, 1868.

By a treaty concluded 15 March, 1874, at Saigon, the independence of the king of Annam was recognised by France, the ports were opened to commerce, and toleration of the Christian religion was secured.

The books were not in the Jewish canon, were rejected at the council of Laodicea about A.D. 366, but were received as canonical by the Roman Catholic church at the council of Trent on 8 April, 1546. Parts of the Apocrypha were admitted to be read as lectiones by the church of England, by the 6th article, 1563. Many of these were excluded by the act passed 1871.

These opinions were condemned by the council of Constantinople, 381.

* Some ascribe the authorship to Cerinthus, the heretic, and others to John, the presbyter, of Ephesus. In the first centuries many churches disowned it, and in the 4th century it was excluded from the sacred canon by the council of Laodicea, but was again received by other councils, and confirmed by that of Trent, held in 1545, &c. Although the book had been rejected by Luther, Melancthon, and others, and its authority questioned in all ages, from the time of Justin Martyr (who wrote his first Apology for Christians in A.D. 130), yet its canonical authority is still almost universally acknowledged.

The composition is ascribed to the first century. The text, with English translation and introduction, was published by R. D. Hitchcock and Francis Brown in 1884; improved edition, spring, 1885.

APOSTLES' CREED, erroneously attributed to the apostles, is mentioned as the Roman creed by Rufinus, died about 410. Irenaeus, bishop of Lyons, died 202, gives a creed resembling it. APPEAL or ASSIZE OF BATTLE. By the old law of England, a man charged with murder might fight with the appellant, thereby to make proof of his guilt or innocence. In 1817, a young maid, Mary Ashford, was believed to have been violated and murdered by Abraham Thornton, who, on trial, was acquitted. In an appeal, he claimed his right by wager of battle, which the court allowed; but the appellant (the brother of the maid) refused the challenge, and the accused was discharged, 16 April, 1818. This law was struck off the statute-book, by 59 Geo. III. c. 46 (1819).

In 1631, Lord Ken impeached Mr. David Ramsey of treason and offered battle in proof; a commission was appointed, but the duel was prohibited by king James I.

APPEALS. In the time of Alfred (869-901), appeals lay from courts of justice to the king in council. Courts of appeal at the Exchequer Chamber, in error from the judgments of the superior and criminal courts, were regulated by statutes in 1357, 1559, 1830 and 1848. Appeals from English tribunals to the pope were first introduced about 1151, were long vainly opposed, and were abolished by Henry VIII. 1534; restored by Mary, 1554; again abolished by Elizabeth, 1559. A proposition for establishing an imperial court of appeal submitted to the house of lords by the lord chancellor Hatherley, 15 April; was referred to a select committee, 30 April, 1872. A similar proposition by lord chancellor Selborne, 13 Feb. 1873. See Privy Council and Justice, Lords.

The House of Lords was reconstituted as a court of final appeal by the Appellate Jurisdiction Act introduced by Lord Cairns, 11 Feb., and passed 11 Aug. 1876; amended, 1887. Richard Harris, fruitster to Henry VIII., is said to have planted a great number of the orchards in Kent, and lord Somers, ambassador to France in the reign of Charles I., planted many of those in Herefordshire. Ray reckons 70 varieties of apples in his day (1683). In 1866 there were 1500 varieties

In 1845 their annual licence was raised from 10s. to 40s.

APPRENTICES. Those of London were obliged to wear blue cloaks in summer, and blue gowns in winter in the reign of queen Elizabeth, 1558. Ten pounds was then a great apprentices fee. From twenty to one hundred pounds were given in the reign of James I. Stow's Survey. The apprentices tax enacted 43 Geo. III. 1802. The term of seven years, not to expire till the apprentice was 24 years old, required by the statute of Elizabeth (1503), was abolished in 1814. An act for the protection of apprentices, &c., was passed in 1851. APPROPRIATIONS (property taken from the church), began in the time of William I. The parochial clergy, then commonly Saxons, were impoverished by the bishops and higher clergy (generally Normans) to enrich the monasteries possessed by the conqueror's friends. Where the tithes were so appropriated, the vicar had only such a competency as the bishop or superior thought fit to allow. Pope Alexander IV. complained of this as the bane of religion, the destruction of the church, and a poison that had infected the whole nation. Lay appropriations began after the dissolution of the monasteries, 1536.

In 1854, Mr Gosse published "The Aquarium." Mr W Alford Lloyd, late of Portland-road, London, who by his enterprise in collecting specimens did much to increase the value and interest of aquaria, has been much employed in erecting aquaria. The great aquarium (50 yards long and 12 wide) at the Jardin d'Acclimatation at Paris, was constructed under his direction in 1860. He also constructed the aquarium at Hamburg and others. Four archbishops were constituted, Armagh, Cashel, Dublin, and Tuam; until then the archbishop of Canterbury had jurisdiction over the Irish as well as English bishops, in like manner as the archbishop of York had jurisdiction over those of Scotland, 1152.

Of these four archbishops two were reduced to bishoprics (Cashel and Tuam) conformably with the stat. 3 & 4 Will. IV. by which also the number of sees in Ireland was to be reduced from twenty-two to twelve (see Bishops, Cashel, Tuam; Pallium, &c.), 1833.

ARCH-CHAMBERLAIN. The elector of Brandenburg was appointed the hereditary arch-chamberlain of the German empire by the golden bull of Charles IV. in 1356, and in that quality he bore the sceptre before the emperor.

ARCH-CHANCELLORS were appointed under the two first races of the kings of France (418-986), and when their territories were divided, the archbishops of Mentz, Cologne, and Treves became arch-chancellors of Germany, Italy, and Arles.

ARCHEDEACON, a name early given to the first or eldest deacon, who attended on the bishop without any power; but since the council of Nice, his function has become a dignity above a priest.

The appointment in these countries is referred to the eighth century. There are seventy-five archdeacons in England (1898). The archdeacon's court is the lowest in ecclesiastical polity; an appeal lies from it to the consistorial court, by 24 Henry VIII. (1532).

ARCHEBY is ascribed to Apollo, who communicated it to the Cretans.

Four thousand archers of the king surrounded the houses of Parliament ready to shoot; pacified by the king, as Richard II. (Stow) 1397

The citizens of London formed into companies of archers to the reign of Edward III., and into a corporate body by the style of "The Fraternity of St. George," as Henry VIII. 1538

The long bow was six feet long, and the arrow three feet; the usual range from 300 to 500 yards.
Robin Hood is said to have shot from 600 to 800 yards. The cross-bow was fixed to a stock, and discharged with a trigger.
See Artillery Company, Trophilus, &c.

ARCHES, COURT OF, the most ancient consistory court, chiefly a court of appeal from inferior jurisdictions within the province of Canterbury; it derives its name from the church of St. Mary-le-Bow (Saxeta Maria de Aroubus), London, where it was formerly held, and whose top is raised on stone pillars built archwise. Cowell. Appeals from this court lie to the judicial committee of the privy council, by statute, 1832. The Dean and Official Principal, Dr. Stephen Lushington, (appointed in 1828) resigned 1 July, 1867; succeeded by sir Robert J. Phillimore, who resigned, 1875. Lord Penzance succeeded him.

ARCHONS. When royalty was abolished at Athens, in memory of king Codrus, killed in battle, 1044 or 1068 B.C., the executive government was vested in elective magistrates called archons, whose office continued for life. Medon, eldest son of Codrus, was the first archon. The office was limited to ten years, 752 B.C., and to one year 683 B.C.

ARCOLA (Lombardy), the site of battles between the French under Bonaparte, and the Austrians under field-marshal Alvinzi, fought 14-17 Nov. 1796. The Austrians lost 18,000 men in killed, wounded, and prisoners, four flags and eighteen guns. The French lost about 15,000, and became masters of Italy. In one contest Bonaparte, in most imminent danger, was rescued by the impetuosity of his troops.

AREIOPAGUS or AREOPAGUS, a Greek tribunal, said to have heard causes in the dark, because the judges should be blind to all but facts, instituted at Athens about 1507 B.C.; also ascribed to Cecrops, 1556. The name is derived from the Greek Areios pagos, the hill of Mars, through the tradition that Mars was the first who was tried there for the murder of Halirhotus, who had violated his daughter Alcippe. The powers of this court were enlarged by Solon, about 594 B.C., and diminished by Pericles, 461 B.C. Paul preached on Mars' hill A.D. 52. (Acts xvii.) See Press.

that it the journey was to recover the golden fleece.

ARIAN or ARTAN (in Sanskrit signifying noble, warrior), a term now frequently applied to the hypothetical Indo-Germanic family of nations, including the Greek, Roman, and Teutonic races.

ARIANS, followers of Arius* of Alexandria, who preached against the doctrine of the Trinity, about 315, and died in 336. The controversy was taken up by Constantine, who presided at the council of Nice, June to Aug. 325, when the Arians were condemned; but their doctrine long prevailed. It was favoured by Constantine II. 341; and carried into Africa by the Vandals in the 5th century, and into Asia by the Goths. Servetus published his treatise against the Trinity, 1531, and was burnt, 1553. Leggatt, an

ARISTOTELIAN PHILOSOPHY: the most comprehensive ever devised by man. Aristotle was born at Stagira (hence termed the Stagiritæ), 384 B.C.; was a pupil of Plato from 364 to 347; became preceptor of Alexander, son of Philip of Macedonia, in 342; and died in 322. He divided the circle of knowledge into metaphysics and logic, physics (including part of the science of mind), and ethics. His philosophy was too much exalted by the scholasticism during the middle ages, and too much depreciated after the Reformation. His works on natural science contain a vast collection of facts and an extraordinary mixture of sound and erroneous opinions. To him is attributed the assertion that nature abhors a vacuum, an opinion now maintained by eminent modern philosophers.

An Aristotelian Society, for the systematic study of philosophy, was founded in the spring of 1880; Dr. Brad-worth H. Hodgson, president.

 Aristotle, 35 vols., published early in 1891.

A papyrus containing the lost treatise of Aristotle on the "Constitution of Athens," discovered in Egypt and conveyed to the British Museum, was published by the trustees, with a preface and notes by Mr. F. G.
 Keopon, Jan.; and photographs of the MS. were published March, 1891. The work was hitherto only known by extracts in ancient writers. The MS. was considered genuine by M. Bartholomew St. Hilaine, March, 1891.

A family tomb, discovered at Eretria, in the island of Euboea, by Dr. George Waldstein, early in 1891, was considered by him to be really that of Aristotle and his family.

ARITHMETIC is said to have been introduced from Egypt into Greece by Thales, about 600 B.C. The Chinese used the abacus, or suaspan, at an early period. It is asserted that the ancient Hindus adopted a system having ten as a basis.

The oldest treatise upon arithmetic is by Euclid

ARLES (Arelatum, from the Celtic Ar-leit, near the waters), S. France (said to have been founded 2000 B.C.), a powerful Roman city, was made capital of the kingdom of Provence by Boson in 879 A.D.; and of the kingdom of Arles or Transjuran Burgundy by Rodolph II. in 933. He was succeeded by Conrad I. 937; and by Rodolph III. 993; who in 1032, transmitted his kingdom to the emperor Conrad II. After various changes it was annexed to France in 1486. Many councils (314-1275) were held at Arles; the most celebrated in 314, when British bishops were present.

ARMADA, THE INVINCIBLE, collected and equipped by Philip II. king of Spain, for the subjugation of England. Morant's historical account (accompanying Pine's engravings of the tapestries formerly in the house of lords) was printed 1739.

It consisted of 130 ships (besides caravels), 2165 cannon, 8050 sailors, 2088 galley-slaves, 18,973 soldiers, 1382 volunteers (noblemen, gentlemen, and their attendants), and 150 monks, with Martin Alarco, vicar of the Inquisition,—the whole under the command of the duke of Medina-Sidonia.

ARMAGH, N. Ireland, of which it was the metropolis from the 5th to the 9th century, the seat of the first ecclesiastical dignity in Ireland, founded by St. Patrick, its first bishop, about 444, and said to have built the first cathedral, 450. (See notes of the Roman calendar have been bishops of this see. In the king's book, by an extent taken 15 James I., it is valued at 400l. sterling a year; and until lately was estimated at 15,000l. per annum. Population, 1871, 8,946; 1881, 10,070.

ARMAGNACS, a political party in France, followers of the duke of Orleans, murdered by the Burgundians, 23 Nov. 1407, derived their name from his father-in-law, the count of Armagnac. About 3500 of this party were massacred at Paris in June, 1418, by their opponents, the followers of the duke of Burgundy.

ARMED NEUTRALITY, the confederacy against England, formed by Russia, Sweden, and Denmark, 1780; ended, 1781; renewed, and a treaty ratified in order to cause their flags to be respected by the belligerent powers, 16 Dec. 1800. The principle that neutral flags protect neutral bottoms being contrary to the maritime system of England, the British cabinet remonstrated, war ensued, and Nelson and Parker destroyed the fleet of Denmark before Copenhagen, 2 April, 1801. This event and the murder of the emperor Paul of Russia led to the dissolution of the Armed Neutrality.

ARMENIA, Asia Minor, after forming part of the Assyrian, Median, and Persian empires, became subject to the Greek kings of Syria, after the defeat of Antiochus the Great, 190 B.C. The Romans established the kingdoms of Armenia Major and Minor, but their influence over them was frequently interrupted by the aggressions of the Parthians. In all their political troubles the Armenians have maintained the profession of Christianity, and their church is governed by patriarchs, not subject to Rome. Since 1715 an Armenian convent has existed at Venice, where books on all subjects are printed in the Armenian language.

ARMILLARY SPHERE, an astronomical instrument composed of brass circles disposed in such a manner that the greater and lesser circles of the sphere may be seen in their natural position and motion. It is said to have been invented by Eratosthenes, about 255 B.C.; and was employed by Tycho Brahe and others.

ARMINIANS, or REMONSTRANTS, derive their former name from James Arminius (or Harmensen), a Protestant divine of Leyden, Holland (died 19 Oct. 1609); the latter name from his followers having presented a Remonstrance to the states-general in 1610. They separated from the Calvinists, objecting to their views respecting predestination, &c. Their doctrines were condemned in 1619, at the synod of Dort (which see); they were exiled till 1625. The Calvinists were sometimes styled Gomarists, from Gomar, the chief opponent to Arminius. James I. and Charles I. favoured the Arminian doctrine.

ARMORIAL BEARINGS became hereditary in families at the close of the 12th century. They were employed by the crusaders, 1100. The line to denote colours in arms, by their direction or intersection, were invented by Columbus in 1639. The armorial bearings of the English sovereigns are given under the article England. Armorial bearings were taxed in 1792, and again in 1808. Sir Bernard Burke's

ARMORICA, now Brittany, N. France, was conquered by Julius Cæsar, 56 B.C. Many Gauls were said to have retired there and preserved the Celtic tongue, A.D. 584. A colony of West Britons settled in Armorica in the latter part of the 4th century, hence the modern name Brittany, which see.

ARMOUR. That of Goliath is described (about 1063 A.C.) 1 Sam. xvii. 5. Skins and padded hides were early used, and brass and iron armour, in plates or scales, followed. The body armour of the Britons was skins of wild beasts, exchanged, after the Roman conquest, for the well-tanned leathern cuirass. Testudo. Hengist is said to have had scale armour, A.D. 449.

ARMY BILLS, for the repression of crime and insurrection in Ireland, were passed 1807, 1810, 1823, 1829, and 15 Oct. 1831. The guns registered under the last act at the close of the first year scarcely amounted to 3000, and the number was equally small of all other kinds of arms. The new Arms bill, passed 22 Aug. 1843, has been since renewed, but was not rigidly enforced till 1867. Another Arms bill brought into the Commons, "An act to amend the law relating to the carrying and possession of arms, and for the preservation of public peace in Ireland," to last till 1 June, 1889; Royal Assent, 27 March, 1881. Act renewed till 31 Dec. 1887, 4 June, 1886. See Ireland.

ARMY. Ninus and Semiramis had armies amounting to nearly two millions of fighting men. Diodorus. The first guards and regular troops as a standing army were formed by Saul, 1093 B.C. 1 Sam. 13. 2. The army of Xerxes invading Greece is said to have been 1,700,000 foot and 80,000 horse; 480 B.C. One of the first standing armies of which we have any account, is that of Philip of Macedon. The army which Darius opposed to Alexander the Great (334 B.C.) is set down as between 750,000 and a million. The first standing army which existed as such, in modern times, was maintained in France by Charles VII. in 1445. The chief European nations have had in their service the following armies: Spain, 150,000 men; Great Britain, 310,000; Prussia, 350,000; Turkey, 450,000; Austria, 500,000; Russia, 550,000; and France, 1,000,000. Estimated number in Europe in 1863, 6,000,000 soldiers, 1,000,000 horses, 11,000 guns. The European powers are still increasing their armies. Estimated to consist of 12,000,000 men in Nov. 1888.

ARMY, BRITISH, mainly arose in the reign of Charles II. in 1661, in consequence of the extinction of feudal tenures. The first five regiments of British infantry were established between 1633 and 1680. James II. established several regiments of dragoon guards (1662-8). In 1685 the army consisted of 7000 foot and 1700 cavalry. The Militia then consisted of about 130,000 men, horse and foot. Standing armies were introduced by Charles I. in 1638; they were declared illegal in England, 31 Car. II. 1679; but one was then gradually forming, which was maintained by William III. 1689, when the Mutiny Act was passed. Gross's "History of the British Army" was published in 1801. The Mutiny Act passed annually since 1689, alterations made in this act and in the Articles of War (see below, 1879).

Army Service Act: 12 & 13 Vict c 37 (21 June, 1847), and 18 Vict c 4.

Officers in the service of the East India Company to have the same rank and precedence as those in the regular army.

The office of Master General of the Ordnance abolished, and the civil administration of the Army and Ordnance vested in the hands of Lord Panmure, the Minister of War.

Examination of staff officers previous to their appointment ordered.

The army largely recruited for Indian war.

The East India Company's army was transferred to the Queen.

Much dissatisfaction arose in that army in consequence of no bounty being granted; and threatnings of mutiny appeared which subsided after an arrangement was made granting discharge to those who desired it.

Examination of candidates for the Military Academy, previously confined to pupils from Sandhurst, was thrown open, 1835; the principle of this measure was affirmed by the house of commons by vote.

By 22 & 23 Vict c 42, provision made for a reserve force, not to exceed 20,000 men, who had been in his majesty's service.

Flogging virtually abolished in the army: First class soldiers to be degraded to second class before being liable to it.

A report of a commission in 1858 caused great sanitary improvements in the army barracks, &c., under direction of Mr. Sidney Herbert.

ARRAIGNMENT consists in reading the indictment by the officer of the court, and calling upon the prisoner to say whether he is guilty or not guilty. Formerly, persons who refused to plead in cases of felony were pressed to death by weights placed upon the breast. A person standing mute was declared convicted by an act passed 1772; but in 1827, the court was directed to enter a plea of "not guilty" in such cases; see Mute.

Here a treaty was concluded between the king of France and duke of Burgundy, when the latter abandoned his alliance with England, 21 Sept. 1435. Another treaty was concluded by Maximilian of Austria with Louis XI. of France, whereby Burgundy and Artois were given to the dauphin as a marriage portion, 23 Dec. 1482. Velly. Arras was held by the Austrians from 1493 till 1640, when it was taken by Louis XIII.

ARRAY. On 23 Dec. 1321, Edward II. directed the bishop of Durham to make "arraier" his men of arms, horse and foot, and cause them to proceed to Portsmouth; thence to proceed to the war in Gascony. Rymers's Roderic. Hallam says that this was the earliest commission of array that he could find, and that the latest was dated 1557. The attempt of Charles I. to revive commissions of array in 1642, founded on a statute of Henry IV., was strenuously opposed as illegal.

ARSENIC, a steel-gray coloured brittle mineral, extremely poisonous, known in early times. Brandt, in 1733, made the first accurate experiments on its chemical nature. The heinous crimes committed by its means induced the legislature to enact regulations for its sale, 1831. In 1858 Dr. A. S. Taylor ascertained that green paper-hangings and dresses prepared from arsenic are injurious to health.

ARSON, punished with death by the Saxons, still remained a capital crime on the consolidation of the laws in 1827 and 1837. By the act of 1861 it is punishable by penal servitude for life and minor degrees of imprisonment. William Anthony was convicted of arson, having set many houses on fire, for the sake of obtaining the reward for giving alarm, 13 Dec. 1871. ARTESIAN WELLS (from Artesia, now Artois, in France, where they frequently occur) are formed by boring through the upper soil to strata containing water which has percolated from a higher level, and which rises to that level through the boring tube. The fountains in Trafalgar-square and government offices near have been supplied since 1844 by two of these wells (393 feet deep). At Paris the Grenelle well (1798 feet deep), was completed in 1841, after eight years of exertion, by M. Mulot at an expense of about 12,000*l.*, and the well at Passy, which it is said will supply sufficient water for nearly 500,000 persons, was begun in 1855, and completed in 1860 by M. Kind. Messrs. Amos and Easton completed an Artesian well for the Horticultural Society's garden in 1862, which yielded 880,000 gallons of water, at the temperature of 81° Fahr., in twenty-four hours. The well at Kissingen was completed in 1850. Artesian wells are now common.

ARTHUR, king of Britain, said, mythically, to have lived A.D. 500-532.

The events of his life and the conflicts of the knights of his round table, as sung by the Welsh poets Taliesin, Ilywarch Elen, and Aneurin, were incorporated into his Latin history by Geoffrey of Monmouth, about 1155, who died 1154; put into French verse by Geoffrey Gaimar, and by Wace soon after; and set forth in an English poem called Brut by Layamon, about 1205. Walter Map, by incorporating in his version the legend of the Holy Grail, introduced the religious element about 1171. Sir Thomas Malory's "Morte d'Arthur," printed by Wm. Caxton. 1485. Lord Lytton's "King Arthur," published 1848. Tennyson's "Idylls of the King" 1839-69.

ARTICHOKEs are said to have been introduced from the East into Western Europe in the 15th century, and to have reached England in the 16th.

ARTICLES OF RELIGION. On 8 June, 1536, after much disputing, the English clergy in convocation published "Articles decreed by the king's highness" Henry VIII., who published in 1539 the "Statute of Six Articles," decreeing the acknowledgment of transubstantiation, communion in one kind, vows of chastity, private masses, celibacy of the clergy, and auricular confession. Offenders were punishable as heretics. In 1551 forty-two were prepared, and published in 1553. These were modified by the convocation, and reduced to THIRTY-NINE in Jan. 1563; and they received the royal authority and the authority of parliament in 1571. The Lambeth Articles, of a more Calvinistic character, proposed by archbishop Whitgift, were withdrawn in consequence of the displeasure of queen Elizabeth, 1575. One hundred and four Articles were drawn up for Ireland by archbishop Usher in 1614; but in 1635 the Irish church adopted the English articles. See Perth Articles. The 39 Articles were ordered to be removed from the studies at Oxford in Nov. 1871.

ARTICLES OF WAR were decreed in the time of Richard I. and John. Those made by Richard II. in 1385 appear in "Grove's Military Antiquities." The articles of war now in force are based upon an act, passed by William III. in 1689, to regulate the army about to engage in his continental warfare.

ARTIFICERS AND MANUFACTURERS. Their affairs were severely regulated by the statutes of labourers, 1349, 1350, 1360, 1549, and especially of 1562. They were prohibited from leaving England, and those abroad were outlawed, if they did not return within six months after the notice given them. A fine of 100*l.*, and imprisonment for three months, were the penalties for seducing them from these realms, by 9 Geo. II. (1736) and other statutes. The law was modified in 1824; see Artisans, Workmen, &c.

ARTILLERY, a term including properly all missiles, now restricted to cannon. A small piece was contrived by Schwartz, a German cordelier, soon after the invention of gunpowder, in 1330. Artillery was used, it is said, by the Moors of Algiers, in Spain, in 1343; and according to some historians, at the battle of Crecy, in 1346, when Edward III. had four pieces of cannon. We had artillery at the siege of Calais, 1347. The Venetians employed artillery against the Genoese at sea, 1377. Voltaire. Said to have been cast, with mortars for bomb-shells, by Flemish artists, in Sussex, 1543. Rymer's Fœdera. Made of brass 1635; improvements by Browne, 1728; see Cannon, Bombs, Cartridges (under Cannon), Mortars, Howitzers, Petards, Rockets, Fire-arms. The Royal Artillery-regiment was established in the reign of Anne. See Archery.

Obtained lease of the "new" artillery ground, Finsbury, their present head-quarters, 1641. In the civil war, 1642-3, the company, as a body, took no part, but most of the officers of the Trained Bands were also members of the company. James, duke of York, afterwards James II., appointed captain-general, 1660. The company ordered to take precedence next after the regular forces, 1 June, 1833. The company numbered 1200 in 1803 and 800 in 1861. Since 1842 the officers have been appointed by the queen. On the decease of the duke of Sussex in 1843, the prince consort became captain-general and colonel. It is said that pope Felix III., in 597, first added the four days preceding the old Lent Sunday, to raise the number of fasting days to forty; that Gregory the Great (pope, 590) introduced the sprinkling of ashes on the first of the four additional days, and hence the names of Dies Cinerum, or Ash-Wednesday. At the Reformation this practice was abolished, "as being a mere shadow, or vain show." Ash-Wednesday, 1893, 15 Feb.; 1894, 7 Feb.; 1895, 27 Feb.; 1896, 19 Feb.; 1897, 3 Mar.

ASIA, the largest division of the globe; part of it was so called by the Greeks. The area of Asia and its islands is estimated at 17,255,800 square miles. Asia was the first quarter of the world peopled: here the law of God was first promulgated; here many of the greatest monarchs of the earth had their rise; and hence most of the arts and sciences have been derived. Its early history is derived from the Bible and from Herodotus, who relates the wars of Croesus, Cyrus, and others. The Central Asian Railway from the Caspian to Samarcand constructed by general Annenoff for Russia, which now possesses very great influence over the country, opened 1888. See Population, Java, China, India, Persia, Turkey, and the other countries.

The Austrian loss exceeded 20,000 men, and the French 30,000. Marshal Lannes, mortally wounded 23 May; died 31 May. The bridge of the Danube was destroyed, and Napoleon's retreat endangered; but the success of the Austrians was fruitless to them.

ASPHALT, a solid bituminous substance, probably derived from decayed vegetable matter. It was used as a building material in ancient Babylon. Its application for this purpose was revived by Ririnus, a Greek physician, who discovered beds of it near Neuchâtel in 1712. Asphalt stone was found at Seyssel near Geneva in 1802; and after several failures, count Sassenay brought it into use for pavement about 1832. The Assam Tea Company, by whom Chinese labourers and coolies were introduced, was established in 1839. James II. and several noblemen and others were said to be privy to it; including the earl of Albemarle. About forty ruffians undertook to kill William near Tunbridge Green, Middlesex, when returning from hunting, 14 Feb. 1696. Information was given to William by Mr. Franderget, a Roman Catholic, through horror of the crime. The following were executed: —Charnock, King, and Keyes, 18 March; Sir John Friend and Sir Wm. Parkyn, 3 April; Enochwood, Lovick, and Cornborough, 29 April, 1696; Sir John Fenwick (by attestation), 28 January, 1697. Sir George Barclay, a chief organizer of the plot, escaped to France.

ASSAY OF GOLD AND SILVER, originated with the bishop of Salisbury, a royal treasurer in the reign of Henry I. De Origo. But certainly some species of assay was practised as early as the Roman conquest. Assay early established in England was regulated by statutes, 1238, 1700, and 1705. Assay masters appointed at Newcastle, 1701; Sheffield and Birmingham, 1773. The laws respecting assay were amended in 1854 and 1855. The alloy of gold is silver and copper, that of silver is copper. Standard gold is 2 carats of alloy to 20 of fine gold. Standard silver is 18 dwts. of copper to 11 ozs. 2 dwts. of fine silver; see Goldsmiths' Company and Fys.

ASSAYE (E. Indies). The British army, under general Arthur Wellesley (afterwards duke of Wellington), entered the Marhatta states on the south; took the fort of Ahmednuggur, 12 Aug.; and defeated Scindiah and the rajah of Berar at Assaye, 23 Sept. 1803. This was Wellesley's first great battle, in which he opposed 40,000 with only 6,000 men. The enemy fled, leaving their artillery, &c.

ASSEMBLY OF (130) DEUTER, held at Westminster, 1 July, 1649, summoned by parliament to consider the liberty, government, and condition of the church. Two members were elected for each county. The proceedings were published.

ASTROLOGA (N. W. Spain), the ancient Iberian Astrologa, was taken by the French, 21 April, 1808, and treated with great severity.

ASTRACAN (S. E. Russia), a province acquired from the Mogul's empire in 1554; visited and settled by Peter the Great in 1722. Population, 1866, 326,819.

ASTROLABE, an instrument for observing the stars, said to have been employed by Hipparchus about 130 B.C.; and by Ptolemy about 140 A.D.
The modern astrolabe was described by Ptolemy in 1513.

ASTROLOGY. Judicial astrology was cultivated by the Chaldeans, and transmitted to the Egyptians, Greeks, and Romans. It was much in vogue in Italy and France in the 16th century.
It is said that Bede, 673-735, was addicted to it; and Roger Bacon, 1214-1292. Lord Burleigh is said to have calculated the nativity of Elizabeth, and she, and other princes, were dupes of Dee, the astrologer. It is stated that Lilly was consulted by Charles I. respecting his projected escape from Carisbrook castle in 1647. See Pythagoras.
Astrological almanacs are still published in London.

Michael Apollonius, a French physician (1509-1566), cultivated astrology, published almanacs, and in 1535
"Centuries" and "Prognostics." His cradle, edited by Mr. Chas. A. Ward, appeared in 1869. He was consulted by Catherine de Medici, Henry II. and Charles IX. of France.

Feb. 1879.

ASTRONOMY. The earliest astronomical observations were made at Babylon it is said about 2334 B.C. The study was much advanced in Chaldean under Nabonassar, was known to the Chinese about

ASTURIAS (Orinda, since 1833), N. W. Spain, an ancient principality. Here Pelayo collected the Gothic fugitives, about 711, founded a new kingdom, and by his victories checked Moslem conquest. For his resistance, see Spain. The heir-apparent of the monarchy has borne the title "prince of Asturias" since 1382, when it was assumed by Henry, son of John I. king of Leon, on his marriage with a descendant of Peter of Castile. In 1808, the Junta of Asturias began the organized resistance to the French occupation.

ASYLUM, or PRIVILEGED PLACES, at first were places of refuge for those who by accident or necessity had done things that rendered them obnoxious to the law. God commanded the Jews to build cities of refuge, 1451 A.C., Numbers xiv.—Odessa is mythically said to have built one at Thebes, and Remulus one at Mount Palatine, 751 A.C.; see Samosetaria; Metropolitan District.

ATALANTA (formerly June), training-ship,
 31 Jan. 1880. On board, 15 officers, and 265 petty officers, seamen, marines, and boys; never heard of again. Many merchant vessels were wrecked during a terrific gale, 12-16 Feb. 1880. See Mansion House Period.

ATCHINOFF INCIDENT, see under
Russia, 1859.

ATELIERS NATIONAUX (National Workshops), were established by the French provisional government in Feb. 1848. They interfered greatly with private trade, as about 100,000 workmen threw themselves upon the government for labour and payment. The breaking-up of the system led to the fearful conflicts in June following; and the system was abolished in July.

ATHANASIAN CREED. Athanasius, of Alexandria, was elected bishop, 326. He firmly opposed the doctrines of Arius (who denied Christ's divinity), was several times exiled, and died in 373.

Lamb, in "History of the Creeds" (1874), asserts that this creed, beginning "Quatenus vult," was not composed by Athanasius, that it is made up of two distinct parts, and was originally written in Latin and put into its present shape between 813 and 850; not connected with Athanasius's name by any trustworthy authority before 850; not first used in Gaul, about 870; gradually extended into Italy, Britain, &c., accepted by the Greek church about 1000.

This creed asserts the procession of the Holy Ghost from the Father and the Son, see Filioque.
 Dr. Waterland's Critical History of this creed published 1793.

Much agitation against the general use of this creed has arisen in the Church of England among both clergy and laity, 1870-73.

Modifications approved by several bishops were negatived by the lower house in convocation (65-7) early in May, 1872. The vote was rejected by the bishops, and the agitation continued.

In a letter to the earl of Shaftesbury, 23 July, 1872, the archbishops of Canterbury and York expressed their hope of devising a way for rendering the reading of the creed during public worship not compulsory.

Great meeting of laity at St. James's Hall in defence of the creed, 31 Jan. 1873.

ATHEISM (from the Greek a, without, theos, God, see Phædo xiv. 1). It was professed by Epicurus, Lucretius, and other philosophers.
 Spinoza was the defender of a similar doctrine (1632-1677). Lucilio Vanini publicly taught atheism in France, and was condemned to be burnt at Toulouse in 1689. Matthias Kautzen, of Holstein, openly professed atheism, and had upwards of a thousand disciples in Germany about 1774; he travelled to make proselytes, and his followers were called Kautzenians, because they held that there is no other deity than conscience. "Though a small draught of philosophy may lead a man into atheism, a deep draught will certainly bring him back again to the belief of a God." Lord Bacon. Atheism prevailed during the French republic, 1794 till 1801; see Meteorism. Bill to prevent Atheists sitting in Parliament introduced by Lord Brougham, read first time, 7 March, 1822; dropped.

ATHENÆA were great festivals celebrated at Athens in honour of Minerva. One was called Panathenæa, the other Cheseon; they are mythically said to have been instituted by Erechtheus, or Orpheus, 1397 or 1493 B.C.; and revived by Theseus, who caused them to be observed by all the Athenians, the first every fifth year, 1234 B.C. Pittarch.

ATHENÆUM, a place at Athens, sacred to Minerva, where the poets and philosophers recited their compositions. That of Rome, of great beauty, was erected by the emperor Adrian, 133.—The ATHENÆUM CLUB of London was formed 16 Feb. 1824, for the association of persons of scientific and literary attainments, and artists, and noblemen and gentlemen, patrons of learning, &c., by the earls of Liverpool and Aberdeen, the marquiss of Lansdowne, Dr. T. Young, Moore, Davy, Scott, Mackintosh, Faraday, Croker, Chantrey, Lawrence, and seven other promoters. The clubhouse was erected in 1829-30 on the site of the late Carlton palace; it is of Grecian architecture, and the frieze is an exact copy of the Panathenæa procession which formed the frieze of the Parthenon.—The Liverpool Athenæum was opened 1 Jan. 1799.—At Manchester, Bristol, and many other places, buildings under this name, and for a like purpose, have been founded.—The Athenæum, a weekly literary and scientific journal in relation to literature, science, and the fine arts, originated by James Silk Buckingham, first appeared in 1828. John Francis, publisher, 1831-32, died 6 April, 1832. Rev. Henry Stiebbing, first editor, died 22 Sept. 1833, aged 84. The Athenæum became the property of Mr. C. W. Dillke in 1830, and speedily became an influential critical journal. See Tristram, 1875.

ATHENRY (Galway). Near here the Irish were totally defeated, and a gallant young chief, Feidlim O'Connor, slain 10 Aug. 1316.

ATHENS, the capital of ancient Attica, and of modern Greece. The first sovereign mentioned is Oggyges, who reigned in Boeotia, and was master of Attica, then called Ionia. Tradition states that in his reign (about 1764 B.C.) a deluge laid waste the country, which so remained till the arrival of the Egyptian Cecrops and a colony, by whom the land was re-peopled, and twelve cities founded, 1556 B.C. The city, said to have been first called Cecropia, was afterwards named Athens in honour of Minerva (Athene), her worship having been introduced by Erechtheus, 1383 B.C. Athens was ruled by seventeen successive kings (487 years), by thirteen perpetual archons (316 years), seven decennial archons (70 years), and lastly by annual archons (760 years). It attained great power, and no other city has had, in a short space of time, so great a number of illustrious citizens. The ancients called Athens Atta, the city, by eminence, and one of the eyes of Greece; see Greece. The early history is mythical and the dates conjectural.

ATMOSPHERIC RAILWAYS. The idea of propelling motion by atmospheric pressure was transmitted by Papin, the French engineer, about 1680. Experiments were made on a line of rail, laid down across Warwick Square, London, between Shepherd's Bush and the Great Western railway, to test the efficacy of atmospheric tubes, the working of the air-pump, and speed of carriages upon this new principle on railroads in June, 1825, and these tried for a short time on a line between Groydon and London, 1825. Atmospheric pressure was also tried and abandoned, in 1826, on the South Devon line. An atmospheric railway was commenced between Dalkey and Killybeg, in the vicinity of Dublin, in Sept. 1827; opened 20 March, 1828; discontinued in 1855. A similar railway was proposed to be laid down in the streets of London by Mr. T. W. Russell, in 1857. Mr. Russell's Pneumatic Railway was put in action successfully at the Crystal Palace on 27 Aug. 1854, and following days. An act for a pneumatic railway between the Waterloo railway station and Whitehall was passed in July, 1855. Atmospheric pressure was proposed for a submarine railway from Dover to Calais, in 1866; see Pneumatic Driveway.

ATOMIC THEORY, in chemistry, deals with the indivisible particles of all substances. The somewhat incoherent labours of his predecessors (such as Wenzel, in 1777) were reduced by John Dalton to four laws of combining proportion, which have received the name of "Atomic Theory." His "Chemical Philosophy," containing the exposition of his views, appeared in 1808. Dr. C. Denbary's work on the Atomic Theory was published in 1850. In his standard of atomic weights Dalton takes hydrogen as 1. Berzelius, who commenced his elaborate researches on the subject in 1818, adopts oxygen as 100. The former standard is used in this country, the latter on the continent. The theory is accepted by some, and rejected by other chemists. In 1855 Hinrichs propounded a new hypothetical scheme, atomochæmies, in which panatoms, composed of panatoms, is regarded as the primary chemical principle.

ATOMS. Democritus (about 400 B.C.) held that the only existing things are innumerable indestructible atoms, varying in form, and combining in obedience to mechanical laws, and that the soul consists of fire, smooth, round atoms like those of fire; and that nothing happens by chance. His philosophy was adopted by Epicurus (about 300 B.C.), whose doctrines are luminously expounded by Lucretius in his great poem "De Atomis Notandum" (On the Nature of Things), 57 A.D. The atomic philosophy, in a modified form, was recognized by Gassendi, who died 1655 A.D. Sir Wm. Thomson's discovery "On the Size of Atoms," at the Royal Institution, 3 Feb. 1883, is printed in the "Proceedings," vol. 2.

The rolls and records of the acts of attainder passed in the reign of James II. were cancelled and publicly burnt, 2 Oct 1692. Sir John Feilwick was the last person executed by act of attainder, 28 Jan. 1697. Amongst the last acts returned was the attainder of the children of lord Edward Fitzgerald (who was implicated in the rebellion in Ireland of 1798), 1 July, 1819. In 1814 and 1833 the severity of attainders was mitigated. Several attainders reversed about 1837, and one in 1853 (the earl of Perth).

ATTILA, surnamed the "Scourge of God," and thus distinguished for his conquests and his crimes, having ravaged the eastern empire from 445 to 450, when he made peace with Theodosius. He invaded the western empire, 450, and was defeated by Aetius at Châlons, 451, he then retired into Pannonia, where he died through the bursting of a blood vessel on his nuptials with Hildoe, a beautiful virgin, 453.

ATTORNEY (from law, turn), a person qualified to act for another at law. The number in Edward III's reign was under 400 for the whole kingdom. In the 32nd of Henry VI, 1454, a law reduced the practitioners in Norfolk, Norwich, and Suffolk, from eighty to fourteen, and restricted their increase. The number of attorneys practising in the United Kingdom was said to be 13,824 (1872). The qualifications and practice of attorneys and solicitors are now regulated by acts passed in 1843, 1860, 1870, and 1874. By the Supreme Judicature Act all attorneys styled solicitors since Nov 1875. See Solicitors.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL, a law officer of the crown, appointed by letters patent. He has to exhibit informations and prosecute for the king in matters criminal, and to file bills as exchequer, for any claims concerning the crown in inheritance or profit. Others may bring bills against the king's attorney. The first attorney-general was William Bousneville, 1277.

ATTORNEYS AND SOLICITORS ACT, passed 14 July, 1870.

ATTRACTION, described by Copernicus, about 1540, as an appetence or appetite which the Creator impressed upon all parts of matter; by Kepler as a corporeal affection tending to union, 1606. In 1687, Sir I. Newton published his "Principia," containing his important researches on this subject. See Gravitation, Magnetism, and Electricity. Dr. C. William Stannus exhibited his attraction-meter at the Royal Society, 1876.

ATWOOD'S MACHINE, for proving the laws of accelerated motion by the falling weights, invented by George Atwood, 1784, and died 11 July, 1807.

AUBAINE, a night of the French kings, which extended from the beginning of the monarchy, whereby they claimed the property of every stranger who died in their country, without having been naturalized, was abolished by the national assembly in 1790-91; re-established by Napoleon in 1804, and finally annulled 14 July, 1899.

AUBERBOHLE, Guisance, S. France. The earl of Derby defeated the French, besieging this place, 19 Aug. 1344.

AUCKLAND, capital of North Island (New Zealand), was founded Sept. 1840. The population of the district, in 1857, was estimated at 15,000 Europeans, and 35,000 natives; in 1891, total 26,773. The central government was removed to Wellington on Cook's Strait, Dec. 1864; population in 1887, 59,600.

AUCTION, a kind of sale known to the Romans, mentioned by Cicero, Livy, and Petronius Arbitor (about A.D. 65). The first in Britain was about 1700, by Elisha Yale, a governor of Fort George, now Madras, in the East Indies, who thus sold the goods he had brought home. Auction and sales tax began, 1779. Various acts of parliament have regulated auctions and imposed duties, in some cases as high as five per cent. By 8 Vict. c. 15 (1845), the duties were repealed, and a charge imposed "on the licence to be taken out by all auctioneers in the United Kingdom, of 10s." In 1868 there were 4358 licences granted, producing 43,580s. The abuses at auctions, termed "knock-outs," caused by combinations of brokers and others, excited much attention in Sept. 1866. An act regulating sales of land by auction was passed 15 July, 1867. Certain sales are now exempt from being conducted by a licensed auctioneer, such as goods and chattels under a distress for rent, and sales under the provisions of the Small Debts' acts for Scotland and Ireland.

AUDIANT, followers of Audens of Mesopotamia, who, having been expelled from the Syrian church on account of his severely reproving the vices of the clergy, about 338, formed a sect and became its bishop. He was banished to Scythia, where he is said to have made many converts. His followers celebrated Easter at the time of the Jewish passover, attributed the human figure to the Deity, and had other peculiar tenets.

AUDIOMETER (from acglio, I hear), an instrument for the measurement of the faculty of hearing; invented by professor Hughes. It consists of a battery of two Leclanché's cells connected with a simple microphone and telephone; described to the Royal Society, 15 May, 1879.

AUDIPHONE, an instrument to assist the partially deaf, invented by Mr. R. G. Rhodes of Chicago, and modified by M. Colladon of Geneva, in 1880. It consists of a thin sheet of hard ebonite rubber or card-board. This should be placed against the teeth, through which and other bones the vibrations are conveyed to the auditory nerve.

AUDIT-OFFICE, Somerset House. Commencement for auditing the public accounts were appointed in 1783, and many statutes regulating their duties have since been enacted.

AUDLEY'S REBELLION, see Rebellions, 1497.

AUGERSTADT (France). Here on 14 Oct. 1806, the French, under Davoust, signally defeated the Prussians, under Blücher; see June.

AUGHERDE, near Athlone, in Ireland, where on 18 July, 1691, a battle was fought between the Irish, headed by the French general St. Ruth, and the English under general Gluckel. The former were defeated and lost 7000 men; the latter lost only 600 killed and 950 wounded. St. Ruth was slain. This engagement proved decisively fatal to the interest of James II., and Gluckel was created earl of Athlone.

AUGMENTATION OF POOR LIVINGS' OFFICE, established in 1704. 5597 clerical livings, not exceeding 50s. per annum, were found by the commissioners under the act of Anne capable of augmentation, by means of the bounty then established.

AUGMENTATIONS COURT, established in 1535 by 27 Hen. VIII. c. 27, in relation to cap. 28 same session, which gave the king the property of all monasteries having 200s. a year. The court was abolished by Mary, 1553, and restored by Elizabeth, 1558.

AUGSBURG (Bavaria), originally a colony settled by Augustus, about 12 B.C.; became a free city, and flourished during the middle ages. Here many important diets of the empire have been held. In A.D. 952, a council confirmed the order for the celibacy of the priesthood. Augsburg has suffered much by war, having been frequently taken by siege—in 1783, 1793, 1794, and, last, by the French, 10 Oct. 1805, who restored it to Bavaria in March, 1806. Population, 1890, 75,523.

Augsburg Diet, summoned by the emperor Charles V. to settle the religious disputes of Germany, met 20 June, and separated. Nov. 1530
Confession of Augsburg, compiled by Melancthon, Luther and others, signed by the Protestant princes, presented to the emperor Charles V., and read to the diet. 25 June, 1530

Interim of Augsburg, a document issued by Charles V.: an attempt to reconcile the Catholics and Protestants; (it was fruitless and was withdrawn). read 15 May, 1548
"Peace of Religion" signed at Augsburg, 25 Sept. 1555
League of Augsburg, for maintenance of the treaties of Münster, Nimègue—a treaty between Holland and other powers against France, signed 9 July, 1686

AUGURY. Husbandry was in part regulated by the coming or going of birds, long before the time of Hesiod. Three augurs, at Rome, with vestals and several orders of the priesthood, were formally constituted by Numa, about 710 B.C. The number increased, and was fifteen at the time of Sylla, 81. The college of augurs was abolished by Theodosius about A.D. 390.

AUGUST, the sixth month of the Roman year (originally called Septilis, or the sixth from March), by a decree of the senate received its present name in honour of Augustus Cæsar, in the year 8 B.C., because in this month he was created consul, had thrice triumphed in Rome, added Egypt to the Roman empire, and made an end of the civil war. He added one day to the month, making it 31 days. The appearance of shooting stars on the 10th of Aug. was observed in the middle ages, when they were termed "St. Lawrence's tears." Their periodicity was noticed by Mr. Forster early in the present century. See under France, 10 August, 1794.

AUGUSTAN ERA began 14 Feb. 27 B.C., or 727 years after the foundation of Rome.

AUGUSTIN or AUSTIN PRIANS, a religious order, which ascribes its origin to St. Austin, bishop of Hippo, who died 430. They first appeared about the 11th century, and the order was constituted by pope Alexander IV., 1256. The rule re-quies poverty, humility, and chastity. Martin Luther was an Augustin monk. The Augustines held the doctrine of free grace, and were rivals of the Dominicans. The order appeared in England soon after the conquest, and had 38 houses at the suppression, 1536. One of their churches, at Austin Friars, London, erected 1354, and since the Reformation used by Dutch protestants, was partially destroyed by fire, 22 Nov. 1862. It was restored, and reopened, 1 Oct. 1865. A religious house of the order, dedicated to St. Monica, mother of Augustin, was founded in Hoxton-square, London, 1864.

AULIC COUNCIL, a sovereign court in Germany, established by the emperor Maximilian I., being one of the two courts, the first called the Imperial Chamber civil and criminal, instituted at Worms, 1495, and afterwards held at Spiere and Wetlar, and the other the Aulic council at Vienna, 1506. These courts having concurrent jurisdiction, were instituted for appeals in particular cases from the courts of the Germanic states.

AURAY (N. W. France). Here, on 29 Sept. 1364, the English, under John Chandos, defeated the French and captured their leader Du Guesclin. Charles of Blois, made duke of Brittany by the king of France, was slain, and a peace was made in April, 1365.

AURICULAR CONFESSION. The confession of sin at the ear (Latin, auris) of the priest was an early practice. It is incorrectly stated to have been forbidden in the 4th century by Nectarius, archbishop of Constantinople. It was enjoined by the council of Lateran in 1215, and by the council of Trent in 1551. It was one of the six articles of faith enacted by our Henry VIII. in 1539, but was abolished in England at the Reformation. Its revival here has been attempted by the church party called Puseyites, Tractarians, or Ritualists.

The rev. Alfred Pook, a curate of St. Barnabas, Knightsbridge, was suspended by his bishop from his office for practising auricular confession in June, 1858, and the suspension was confirmed in Jan. 1859. Much excitement was created by a similar attempt by the rev. Temple West at Boyne Hill, in Sept. 1858.

In May, 1873, 48 clergymen of the Church of England presented a petition to convocation for the education, selection, and licensing of duly qualified confessors, in accordance with the provisions of canon law. Strongly disapproved of by the bishops.

Letter from the bishop of London asserting that confession should be to God; that to the minister optional, 31 July, 1873.

Archdeacon Denison (in a letter) declares war against all opposing auricular confession, 22 Aug. 1873.

96 peers send an address against auricular confession to the archbishop of Canterbury about 9 Aug. 1877. For refusal of confessors to give evidence, see

Ireland.
See Holy Cross.

AURIFLAMMA or ORIFLAMME, the national banner mentioned in French history, belonging to the abbey of St. Denis, and suspended over the tomb of that saint. Louis le Gros was the first king who took this standard from the abbey to battle, 1124. Héroult. It appeared for the last time at Agincourt, 25 Oct. 1415. Tillot. Others say at Mentibery, 16 July, 1465.

AURORA, FRIGATE, sailed from Britain in 1771, to the East Indies, and was never again heard of.—AURORA, daily paper newspaper, appeared at Rome 1 June, 1860.

AURORA BOREALES and AURORA TRALES (Northern and Southern Polar Lights), though rarely seen in central Europe, are frequent in the arctic and antarctic regions. In March, 1776, an aurora borealis extended from the west of Ireland to the southeast of Asia. The whole horizon lat. 57° N. was overspread with continuous haze of a dismal red during a whole night, Nov. 1765.—Mr. Foster, the companion of captain Cook, saw the aurora lat. 58° S. The aurora is now attributed to the passage of electric light through the rarefied air of the polar regions. In August and September, 1859 (and about 24 Oct. 1870), when brilliant aurora were very frequent, the electric telegraph wires were seriously affected, and communications interrupted. Auroras were seen at Rome and Basel, and also in Australia. A magnificent aurora appeared in New York and other states, evening of 13 Feb. 1862.

AUSCULTATION, see Stethoscope.

AUSTERLITZ, a town in Moravia, where a battle was fought between the French and the allied Austrian and Russian armies, 2 Dec. 1805. Three emperors commanded: Alexander of Russia, Francis of Austria, and Napoleon of France. The killed and wounded exceeded 30,000 on the side of the allies, who lost forty standards, 150 pieces of cannon, and thousands of prisoners. The decisive victory of the French led to the treaty of Presburg, signed 26 Dec. 1805; see Presburg.

AUSTIN FRIARS, see Augustin Friars.

AUSTRALASIA, the fifth great division of the world. This name, originally given it by De Brosses, includes Australia, Van Diemen's Land (or Tasmania), New Guinea, New Zealand, New Britain, New Caledonia, &c., mostly discovered within two centuries. Accidental discoveries were made by the Spaniards as early as 1526; but the first accurate knowledge of these southern lands is due to the Dutch, who in 1606 explored a part of the coast of Papua or New Guinea. Torres, a Spaniard, passed through the straits which now bear his name, between that island and Australia, and gave the first correct report of the latter, 1606. The Dutch continued their discoveries. Grant in 1800, and Flinders again (1801-5) completed the survey. M'Culloch. Estimated population of the Australasian colonies in 1891, 3,932,000. See Australia, &c.

Gen. Edwards having recommended the federal action of all the Australian troops for colonial defence, Mr. D. Gillies, premier of Victoria, communicated his approval to sir H. Parkes, premier of New South Wales, who in his reply considers that the federal council act does not authorize this combined action, and strongly recommends the establishment of an Australasian Federation with a governor-general, with a constitution like that of the Dominion of Canada, and desires a meeting of delegates from each colony to consider the matter.

AUSTRIA, Österreich (Eastern Kingdom), also called Metz, a French kingdom which lasted from the 6th to the 8th century. It began with the division of the territories of Clovis by his sons, 511, and ended by Charlemagne becoming a monk and surrendering his power to his brother Pepin, who thus became sole king of France, 747.

AUSTRIA, a Hamburg company's steamship, sailed from Southampton to New York 4 Sept. 1859, with 528 persons on board. On 13 Sept. in lat. 45° N., long. 41° 30' W., it caught fire through the carelessness of some one in burning some tar to fumigate the steerage. Only 67 persons were saved—upwards of 60 by the Maurice, a French barque; the rest by a Norwegian barque. A heartrending account was given in the Times, 11 Oct. 1853, by Mr. Charles Brews, an English survivor.

AUSTRIA, Österreich (Eastern Kingdom), anciently Noricum and part of Pannonia, was annexed to the Roman empire about 13; was overrun by the Huns, Avars, &c., during the 5th and 6th centuries, and taken from them by Charlemagne, 791-796. He divided the government of the country, establishing margraves of Austria, Bavaria, and Austria. Louis the German, son of Louis le Débonnaire, about 817, subjugated Radeck, margrave of Austria; but in 853 the descendants of the latter raised a civil war in Bavaria against the emperor Charles the Fat, and eventually the margraves of Austria were declared immediate princes of the empire. In 1156 the margravate was made an hereditary dukedom by the emperor Frederick I.; and in 1453 it was raised to an archduchy by the emperor Frederick III. Rudolph, count of Hapsburg, elected emperor of Germany in 1273, acquired Austria in 1278; and from 1492 to 1806, his descendants were emperors. On 11 Aug. 1806, the emperor Francis II. renounced the title of emperor of Rome and King of Germany (popularly termed Augustus of Germany), and became hereditary emperor of Austria. The condition of Austria is now greatly improving.

under the enlightened rule of the present emperor. The political constitution of the empire is based upon—1. The pragmatic sanction of Charles VI., 1713, which declares the indivisibility of the empire and rules the order of succession. 2. The pragmatic sanction of Francis II., 1 Aug. 1804, when he became emperor of Austria only. 3. The diploma of Francis Joseph, 20 Oct. 1860, whereby he imparted legislative power to the provincial states and the council of the empire (Reichsrath). 4. The law of 26 Feb. 1861, on the national representation. Self-government was granted to Hungary, 17 Feb. 1867. Each country has its parliament, and a controlling body termed the Delegation, consisting of 120 members, half elected by Austria and half by Hungary, was also established in 1867. The empire was ordered to be named henceforth the Austro-Hungarian monarchy, or Austria-Hungary, by decree, 14 Nov. 1868. On 19 Oct. 1869, the army was ordered to be styled "Imperial and Royal." Population of the empire* in Oct. 1857, 35,018,928; reduced to 32,530,000 by the loss of Venetia, &c., in 1866 (about 16,000,000 Slavs of different dialects). Population, Austria and other Cis-Leithan provinces, 20,396,580 (31 Dec. 1869); Hungary and Trans-Leithan provinces, 15,509,455; the empire, in 1880, 37,884,712; in 1890, 41,345,330—revenue, 1890, 1,085,927,000 fl.; expenditure, 1,003,870,000 fl.

AUTO DA FE (Act of faith), the term given to the punishment of a heretic, generally burning alive, inflicted by the Inquisition (which see).

AUTOMATON FIGURES (or ANDROIDS), made to imitate living actions, are of early invention. Archytas' flying dove was formed about 400 B.C. Prior Bacon is said to have made a brazen head which spoke, A.D. 1264. Albertus Magnus spent thirty years in making another. A coach and two horses, with a footman, a page, a lady inside, were made by Canus for Louis XIV. when a child; the horses and figures moved naturally, variously, and perfectly, 1649. Vaucanson, in 1738, made an artificial duck, which performed many functions of a real one—eating, drinking, and quacking; and he also made a flute-player. The writing automaton, exhibited in 1769, was a pentagram worked by a confederate out of sight. The automaton chess-player, exhibited the same year, was also worked by a hidden person; so was the "invisible girl," 1800. Maelzel made a trumpeter about 1809. Early in this century, an automaton was exhibited in London which pronounced several sentences with tolerable distinctness. The "anthropogonism," an alleged talking-machine, exhibited at St. James's Hall, London, July 1864, was proved to be a gross imposition. The exhibition of the talking-machine of professor Faber of Vienna, in London, began 27 Aug. 1870, at the Palais Royal, Argyll-street, W. The automatic chess-player at the Crystal Palace, 1873. Poyche, an automaton card-player, invented by J. N. Makhelyns and John Algernon Clarke, exhibited in London, Jan. 1875. An automaton hare was hunted at Hendon, near London, 9 Sept. 1876.

AUTOTYPOGRAPHY, a process of producing a metal plate from drawings, made known by Mr. Wells, in April, 1863; it resembled Hellography (which see).

AUXERRE DECLARATION, see France, May, 1868.

AYA, the capital of the Burmese empire from 1354 to 1740, and from 1823 to 1838. Destroyed by an earthquake in 1839. See Burma.

AYABS, barbarians who ravaged Pannonia, and annexed the eastern empire in the 6th and 7th centuries, subdued by Charlemagne about 799, after an eight years' war.

AYEBURY, or AWURY (Wiltshire). Here are the remains of the largest so-called Druidical work in this country. They have been surveyed by Aubrey, 1648; Dr. Stukeley, 1730; and Sir E. C. Hoare, in 1812, and by others. Much information may be obtained from Stukeley's "Abury" (1743), and Hoare's "Ancient Wiltshire" (1812-21). Many theories have been put forth, but the object of these remains is still unknown. They are considered to have been set up during the "stone age," i.e., when weapons and implements were mainly formed of that material.

AYEN, or AYAINE (Luxemburg, Belgium). Here the French and Dutch defeated the Spaniards, 20 May, 1635.

"AVE MARIA!" the salutation of the angel Gabriel to the Virgin (Luke i. 28), was made a formula of devotion by pope John XXI. about 1326. In the beginning of the 15th century Vincentius Ferrerius used it before his discourses. Bingham.

AVENUE THEATRE, Thames Embankment, opened 11 March, 1882.

AVIGNON, a city, S. E. France, ceded by Philip III. to the pope in 1273. The papal seat was removed by Clement V. to Avignon, in 1309. In 1348 Clement VI. purchased the sovereignty from Jane, countess of Provence and queen of Naples. In 1408, the French, wearied of the schism, expelled Benedict XIII., and Avignon ceased to be the seat of the papacy. Here were held nine councils (1080-1457). Avignon was seized and restored several times by the French kings; the last time restored, 1773. It was claimed by the national assembly, 1791, and was confirmed to France by the congress of sovereigns in 1815. In Oct. 1791, horrible massacres took place here. See Pope, 1309-94.

AXE, WEDGE, LEVER, and various tools in common use, are said to have been invented by Dædalus, an artificer of Athens, to whom also is ascribed the invention of masts and sails for ships, 1240 B.C. Many tools are represented on the Egyptian monuments.

AYACUCHO (Peru). Here the Peruvians finally achieved their independence by defeating the Spaniards, 9 Dec. 1824.

AYDE, or ADN, the tax paid by the vassal to the chief lord upon urgent occasions. In France and England an aid was due for knighting the king's eldest son. One was demanded by Philip the Fair, 1312. The aid due upon the birth of a prince, ordained by the statute of Westminster (Edward I.) 1285, was not to be levied until he was fifteen years of age, for the case of the subject. The aid for the marriage of the king's eldest daughter could not be demanded in this country until her seventh year. In feudal tenures there was an aid for ransoming the chief lord; so when our Richard I. was kept a prisoner by the emperor of Germany, an aid of 20s. to redeem him was exacted upon every knight's fee; see Eschequer.

AYLESBURY, Buckinghamshire, was refounded by the West Saxons in 571. Incorporated by charter in 1554; absorbed into the county 1890. The ancient parish church was restored by Sir G. G. Scott, 1869-67. Visited by the queen 14 May, 1890. Population 1881, 7,795; 1891, 8,674.

AYLESFORD (Kent). Here, it is said, the Britons were victorious over the Saxon invaders, 455, and Horsa was killed.

AZOFF, SEA OF, the Palus Mæotis of the ancients, communication by the strait of Yenikals (the Bosphorus Cimmericus) with the Black Sea, and is entirely surrounded by Russian territory; Taganrog and Kertch being the principal places. An expedition, composed of British, French, and Turkish troops, commanded by Sir G. Brown, arrived at Kertch, 24 May, 1855, when the Russians retired, after blowing up the fortifications. On the 25th the allies marched upon Yenikals, which also offered no resistance. On the same evening the allied fleet entered the Sea of Azoff, and in a few days completed their occupation of it, after capturing a large number of merchant vessels, &c. An immense amount of stores was destroyed by the Russians to prevent them falling into the hands of the allies.

AZOIMIDE, a compound of hydrogen and nitrogen (azote), a very explosive gas, obtained from organic sources, such as benzoyl-glycollic acid and hippuric acid, by Prof. Curtius in 1890. It forms salts by combination with metals; it is described in Nature, 10 Dec. 1891.

AZORES, or WESTERN ISLES (N. Atlantic), belonging to Portugal, the supposed site of the ancient Atlantis, are said to have been discovered in the 15th century by Vanderberg of Bruges, who was driven on their coasts by the weather. Discovered by the Portuguese court, fall in with St. Mary's in 1432, and in 1457 they were all discovered and named Azores from the number of goshawks found on them. They were given by Alfonso V. to the duchess of Burgundy in 1466, and colonised by Flemings. They were subject to Spain 1580-1560. The Isle Terceira, during the usurpation of Dom Miguel, declared for Donna Maria, 1830, and a government was established at the capital Angra, 1830-33. A volcano at St. George's destroyed the town of Urzeline, May, 1808; and in 1811 a volcano appeared near St. Michael's, in the sea, where the water was eighty fathoms deep; an island thus formed gradually disappeared. A destructive earthquake lasting 12 days, happened in St. Michael's, 1591.

Sterndale Bennett, Sir G. Smart, J. Hullah, C. Potter, and other eminent musicians. The society was dissolved, 21 March, 1870, and the music given up to the Royal Academy of Music.

BACHELORS. The Roman censors frequently imposed fines on unmarried men; and men of full age were obliged to marry. The Spartan women at certain games laid hold of old bachelors, dragged them round their altars, and inflicted on them various marks of infamy and disgrace. Forcible. A tax laid upon bachelors in England, twenty-five years of age (varying from 12d to 1s for a duke, to 1s for a common person), lasted from 1695 to 1706. Bachelors (Romanist priests excepted) were subjected to an extra tax on their male and female servants in 1785. BAHAMA ISLES (N. America) were the first points of discovery by Columbus. San Salvador was seen by him on the night of 11 Oct. 1492; he landed next day. BAIL. By ancient common law, before and since the conquest, all felonies were bailable, till murder was excepted by statute; and by the 3 Edward I. (1275) the power of bailing in treason, and in divers instances of felony, was taken away. Bail was further regulated in later reigns. It is now accepted in all cases, except felony; and where a magistrate refuses bail, it may be granted by a judge. Acts respecting bail passed 1826 and 1852.

BAILIFF, or SHERIFF, said to be of Saxon origin. London had its shirvers prior to the conquest, and this officer was generally appointed for counties in England in 1079. Hen. Cornhill and Rich. Beynere were appointed bailiffs or sheriffs in London in 1180. Stow. Sheriffs were appointed in Dublin under the name of bailiffs, in 1308; and the name was changed to sheriff in 1548. There are still places where the chief magistrate is called bailiff, as the high bailiff of Westminster. Bambailiff is a corruption of bond-bailiff, every bailiff being obliged to enter into bonds of security for his good behaviour. Blackstone.

lecture in 1765. Latterly it has been the custom to nominate as the lecture a paper written by one of the fellows. Davy, Faraday, Tyndall, and other eminent men have given the lecture.

BAKU. See under Petroleum.

BALAKLAVA, a small town in the Crimea, with a fine harbour, 10 miles S. E. from Sebastopol. After the battle of the Alma, the allies advanced upon this place, 26 Sept. 1854.

Battle of Balaklava.—About 22,000 Russians, commanded by general Liprandi, appeared and took some redoubts in the vicinity, which had been entrusted to about 500 Turks. They next assailed the English, by whom they were compelled to retire, mainly through the charge of the heavy cavalry, led by brigadier Scarlett, under the orders of lord Lucan. After this, from an unfortunate misconception of lord Raglan's order, lord Lucan ordered lord Cardigan, with the light cavalry, to charge the Russian army, which had reformed on its own ground with its artillery in front. The order was most gallantly obeyed, and great havoc was made on the enemy: but of 600 British horsemen, only 198 returned. (Termed by Tennyson "The Charge of the Six Hundred.") The infantry engaged were termed a "thin red line."

BALANCE OF POWER, to assure the independency and integrity of states, and control the ambition of sovereigns; a principle said to have been first laid down by the Italian politicians of the 15th century, on the invasion of Charles VIII. of France, 1494. Robertson. It was recognized by the treaty of Münster, 24 Oct. 1648. The arrangements for the balance of power in Europe made in 1815, without the consent of the people of the countries concerned, have been nearly all set aside since 1830.

BALEARIC ISLANDS, in the Mediterranean, called by the Greeks Balariades, and by the Romans Baleares, from the dexterity of the inhabitants at slinging: they include Majorca, Minorca, Ivice, Formentera, Cabrera, Comero, and other islets. They were conquered by the Romans, 123 B.C.: by the Vandals, about A.D. 456, and formed part of Charlemagne's empire in 799. Conquered by the Moors about 1005, and held by them till about 1286, when they were annexed by Arragon; see Majores and Minors.

BALKANS, the ancient Hæmus, a range of mountains extending from the Adriatic to the Euxine. The passage, deemed impracticable, was completed by the Rumanians under Diebitch, during the Russian and Turkish war, 26 July, 1829. An armistice was the consequence; and a treaty of peace was signed at Adrianople, 14 Sept. following. The Balkans were crossed by the Russians under Gurok, 13 July, 1877, see Russo-Turkish War II. By the treaty of Berlin, 13 July, 1878, the Balkans became the frontier of the Sultan's European dominions.

The Balkan States are Servia, Bulgaria, and Roumelia (which see). In Sept. 1889, the Pan Slavist Committee at Moscow circulated leaflets termed "The Ten Commandments of Russia," proposing the enlargement of the Balkan States by the annexations from neighbouring territories.

BALLADS may be traced in the British history to the Anglo-Saxons. Turner. Adhelma, who died 709, is mentioned as the first who introduced ballads into England. "The harp was sent round, and those might sing who could." Bede. Alfred sung ballads. Malinesbury. Canute composed one. Turner. Minstrels were protected by a charter of Edward IV.; but by a statute of Elizabeth they were made punishable among rogues and vagabonds, and sturdy beggars. Viner. Fletcher, of Saltoun (died 1716) in a letter to Montrose expressed his opinion that making ballads was more important than law-making. The sea-ballads of Dibdin were very popular in the French war; he died 20 Jan. 1833. Mr. John Boosey's "Ballad Concerts," St. James's Hall, began 1866.

BALLOONS.* A just idea of the principle of the construction of balloons was formed by Albert of Saxony, an Augustine monk in the 14th century, and adopted by a Portuguese Jesuit, Francesco Manduca, who died at Lyons in 1626. The idea is also attributed to Bartolomeo de Gusmano, who died in 1724. The principles of aërostatique include:—1, the power of a balloon to rise in the air; 2, the velocity of its ascent; and 3, the stability of its suspension at any given height. In 1872 Helmholtz thought balloons might be steered, if moving slowly. Fatal accidents to the voyagers have been estimated at 2 or 3 per cent. BANK OF IRELAND. On 9 Dec. 1721, the Irish house of commons rejected a bill for establishing a national bank. Important failures in Irish banks occurred in 1727, 1733, and 1758: this led gradually to the establishment of the Bank of Ireland at St. Mary's abbey, Dublin, 1 June, 1783. The business was removed to the late parliament house, in College-green, in May, 1808. Branch banks of this establishment have been formed in most of the provincial towns in Ireland, all since 1828. Irish Banking Act passed, 21 July, 1845.

BANK OF SAVINGS, see Savings Banks.

BANKERS' BOOKS EVIDENCE ACT, 39 & 40 Vict. c. 48, passed 11 Aug. 1876; repealed by a fresh act 23 May, 1879.

BANKS OF SCOTLAND. The old bank of Scotland was set up in 1695, at Edinburgh, and began 1 Nov., the second institution of the kind in the empire: lending money to the crown was prohibited.

In 1858 paid dividend of 10 per cent. (total stock, £100,000); 1000 shareholders, very many in humble circumstances. The bank stopped 1 Oct. Investigation showed great fraud and false accounts. Estimated loss, £400,000, causing much distress and ruin to many. The directors, J. Stewart, Lewis Foster, R. Salmon, Wm. Taylor, M. Inglis, and J. I. Wright, and the manager, R. S. Strachan, were committed for trial, 20 Oct. Strachan and Foster were convicted of falsifying and fabricating balances

BANKS, JOINT STOCK. Since the act of 1826, a number of these banks have been established. In Ireland similar banks have been instituted, the first being the Hibernian bank. By the new Companies Act, passed 15 Aug. 1879, unlimited companies may register as limited. The

The liquidators reported that about 1819 contributors had paid about 4,500,000l. (13s. 6d. in the pound) 1 Dec. 1879: 20s. in the pound paid to depositors, 3 March, 1880.

Mr. James N. Fleming was arrested 25 Jan. for embezzlement, and sentenced to 8 months' imprisonment, 3 July, 1882.

Close of the liquidation; 13,644,856l. paid, announced Nov. 1882.

The receipts by subscription, &c., for the relief of the sufferers amounted to 380,000l.; interest 47,000l., making a total of 427,000l.

* THE ROYAL HIBERNIAN BANK was established in 1826, by Mr. John McGregor, M.P., and others, under Mr. Peel's joint-stock banking act, 7 & 8 Vict. c. 113 (1844); as an attempt to introduce the Scotch banking system of cash credits into England. On 3 Sept. 1856, it stopped payment, occasioning much distress and ruin to many small traders and others. In consequence of strong evidence of the existence of fraud in the management of the bank, elicited during the examination before the court of bankruptcy, the government instructed the attorney-general to file ex-officio informations against the manager, Mr. H. James Cameron, and several of the directors. They were convicted 27 Feb. 1858, after 13 days' trial, and sentenced to various degrees of imprisonment. Attempts to mitigate the punishment failed (May, 1858); but all were released except Cameron and Esdaile, in July, 1858. In April, 1860, dividends had been paid to the amount of 15s. in the pound. The attorney-general brought in a bill called the Prudent Trustees' Act, 20 & 21 Vict. c. 34, to prevent the recurrence of such transactions.

On 10 April, 1860, a deficiency of 263,000l. was discovered in the Union Bank of London. Mr. George Fallings, a cashier, confessed himself guilty of forgery and fraud, and was sentenced to 20 years' imprisonment.

On 28 Feb. 1861, it was discovered that John Durden, a clerk of the Commercial Bank of London, had robbed his employers of 67,000l., of which 46,000l. might be recovered.

In Dec. 1864, J. W. Terry and Thomas Burch, manager and secretary of the Unity Bank, were committed on a charge of conspiracy for fabricating accounts; but acquitted on their trial.

BANNATYNE OLUB, named after George Bannatyne (the publisher), was established in 1823 by Sir Walter Scott and others, for printing works illustrative of the history, antiquities, and literature of Scotland, of which about 113 volumes were issued: dissolved, 1860.

BANNER CROSS MURDER. See Trials, 1879.

BANNERET, KNIGHT, a dignity between baron and knight, anciently conferred by the king under the royal standard on the field of battle. Its origin is of uncertain time: Edmondson dates it 730; but it was probably created by Edward I. John Chandos is said to have been made a banneret by the Black Prince and the king of Castile at Najara, 3 April, 1367. The dignity was conferred on John Smith, who rescued the royal standard at Edgehill fight, 23 Oct. 1642. It fell into disuse, but was revived by George III. for Sir William Erskine, in 1761, and for Admiral Pyle and Captain Knight, Bickerton, and Vernon, in 1773.

BANNERS were common to all nations. The Jewish tribes had standards or banners.—Num. ii. (1490 B.C.). See Cross, Lurifamma, Standards, &c. The magical banner of the Danes (said to have been a black raven on a red ground) was taken by Alfred when he defeated Hubba, 878.

BANNOCKBURN (Stirlingshire), the site of two battles: (1) between Robert Bruce of Scotland and Edward II. of England, 24 June, 1314. The army of Bruce consisted of 30,000; that of Edward of 100,000 men, of whom 52,000 were archers. The English crossed a rivulet to the attack, and Bruce having dug and covered pits, they fell into them, and were thrown into confusion. The rout was complete: the English king narrowly escaped, and 50,000 were killed or taken prisoner. (2) At Sauchieburn, near here, James III. was defeated and slain on 11 June, 1465, by his rebellious nobles.

* According to a return to parliament made at the close of Feb. 1886, there had become bankrupt in the four months preceding, 59 banking-houses, comprising 144 partners: and another banking establishment had been declared insolvent. Every succeeding week continued to add from seventy to a hundred merchants, traders, and manufacturers to the bankrupt list. This was the period of bubble speculation, and of unprecedented commercial embarrassment and ruin.

† Liquidations now preferred to bankruptcy.

BANES, in the feudal law, were a solemn proclamation of any kind; hence, across the present custom of asking banns, or giving notice before marriage; said to have been introduced into the English church about 1200. The proper time of publishing banns in the church was the subject of much discussion in 1867.

BANQUETING-HOUSE, Whitehall, London, built by Inigo Jones, about 1619.

BANTAM (Java). Here a British factory was established by captain Lancaster, in 1603. The English and Dutch were driven from their factories by the Dutch in 1683. Bantam surrendered to the British in 1811, but was restored to the Dutch at the peace in 1814.

BANTINGISM, see Corporalism.

BANTRY BAY (S. Ireland), where a French fleet, bringing succour to the adherents of James II., attacked the English under admiral Harbert, 1 May, 1689: the latter retired to form in line and was not pursued. A French squadron of seven sail of the line and two frigates, armed as 24s, and seventeen transports, anchored here for a few days, without effect, Dec. 1796. MUTINY of the Bantry Bay squadron under admiral Mitchell was in Dec. 1801. In Jan. 1802, twenty-two of the mutineers were tried on board the Gladiator, at Portsmouth, when seventeen were condemned to death, of whom eleven were executed; the others were sentenced to receive each 200 lashes. The executions took place on board the Majestic, Cerberus, Fermeide, Téméraire, and L'Achille, 8 to 18 Jan. 1802. Mock battle here, 30 June, 1885.

BAPAUME, N. FRANCE, the site of severe indecisive engagements between the French army of the north under Faudherbe, and the Germans under Manteuffel; the French retreated, 2, 3 Jan. 1871.

BAPTISM, the ordinance of admission into the church, practised by all Christian sects except Quakers. John the Baptist baptized Christ, 30. (Matt. iii.) Infant baptism is mentioned by Irenæus about 97. In the reign of Constantine, 319 baptisteries were built and baptism was performed by dipping the person all over. In the west sprinkling was adopted. Much controversy has arisen since 1831 (particularly in 1849 and 1850), in the church of England, respecting baptismal regeneration, which the Archææ Court of Canterbury decided to be a doctrine of the church of England. See Trials, 1849, and note. Demanding fees for baptism was made unlawful by an act passed 18 July, 1872.

BAPTISTS (see Anabaptists). A sect distinguished by their opinions respecting (1) the proper scripture, and (2) the proper mode of baptism: the former they affirm to be those who are able to make a profession of faith; the latter to be total immersion. There are seven sections of Baptists—Arminian, Calvinistic (or Particular), &c. The first Baptist church formed in London was about 1608. They published their confession of faith in 1643; revised in 1689. In 1851 they had 130 churches in London and 2790 (with sittings for 722,753 persons) in England and Wales. Rhode Island, America, was settled by Baptists in 1633.

BARBARY in N. Africa, considered to comprise Algeria, Morocco, Fez, Tunis, and Tripoli, with their dependencies. Piratical states (nominally subject to Turkey), were founded on the coast by Barbarians, about 1518.

BARBERS lived in Greece in the 5th century, and at Rome in the 3rd century B.C. In England, formerly, the business of a surgeon was united to the barber's, and he was denominated a Barber-Surgeon. A London company was formed in 1308, and incorporated, 1468. This union was partially dissolved in 1540, and wholly so in 1745. No person using any shaving or barbery in London shall exercise any surgery, letting of blood, or other matter, except only drawing of teeth. 32 Hen. VIII. 1540.

It was held by the Romans, Goths, Moors, and Franks, and, with the province of which it is the capital, was made an independent country about A.D. 864, and incorporated with Aragon, 1164, the last count becoming king. The city has suffered much by war. The siege by the French in 1604, was relieved by the approach of the English fleet, commanded by admiral Russell; but the city was taken by the earl of Peterborough in 1706. It was bombarded and taken by the duke of Berwick and the French in 1714, and was taken by Napoleon in 1808, and retained till 1814. The Welsh bards formed an hereditary order, regulated, it is said, by laws enacted about 940 and 1076. They had their privileges as the vassals of Edward I. in 1284. The institution was revived by the Tudor sovereigns; and their Eisteddfods (properly Eisteddfodau), meetings of 4 days, have been and are still frequently held; at Swansea, Aug. 1863; at Llandudno, Aug. 1864; in the vale of Conway, 7 Aug. 1865; at Chester, 4 Sept. 1866; at Carnarvon, 3 Sept. 1867; at Ruthin, 5-7 Aug. 1868; at Rhyl, 8-12 Aug. 1870; at Portmadoc, Aug. 1872; at Mold, Aug. 1873; at various places in 1874-1876; at Carnarvon, 21 Aug. 1877; at Llanwrst, 1-3 Aug.; at Menai Bridge, Aug. 1878; at Conway, 6 Aug. and at other places, 1879. The Gymnædion Society of Barda was founded in 1770. Tynghof O'Carolan, the last of the Irish bards, died in 1738. Members. Evan Davies, termed the Arch-Droid of Wales, an eminent Welsh scholar, aged 89, died at Pontypool 23 February, 1883. In 1880 the bards determined that the Annual National Eisteddfod should be held alternately in North and South Wales. Above 100 Eisteddfodau are held every year.

BARBONE'S PARLIAMENT. Cromwell, supreme in the three kingdoms, summoned 122 persons, such as he thought he could manage, who, with six from Scotland and five from Ireland, met, as a parliament, 4 July, 1653. It obtained its appellation from a nickname given to one of its members, a leather-seller, named "Praise-God Barbon." The majority evinced much sense and spirit, proposing to reform abuses, improve the administration of the law, &c. The parliament was suddenly dissolved, 13 Dec. 1653, and Cromwell made lord protector.

BARILLY, province of Delhi (N. W. India), ceded to the East India company by the ruler of Oude in 1801. A mutiny at Barilly, the capital, was suppressed in April, 1816. On 7 May, 1853, it was taken from the cruel sepoy rebels.

BARFLEUR (N. France), where William, duke of Normandy, equipped the fleet by which he conquered England, 1066. Near it William, duke of Normandy, son of Henry I., in his passage from Normandy, was shipwrecked, 25 Nov. 1120, when the prince, his bride, and many others perished. Barfleur was destroyed by the English in the campaign in which they won the battle of Crecy, 1346. The French navy was destroyed near the cape by admiral Russell, after the victory of La Hogue, 19 May, 1692.

BARI (S. Italy), the Barium of Horace, was, in the 6th century, a stronghold of the Saracens, and was captured by the emperor Louis II., a descendant of Charlemagne, in 871. In the 10th century it became subject to the eastern empire, and remained so till it was taken by Robert Guiscard, the Norman, about 1060. A great ecclesiastical council was held here on 1 Oct. 1059, when the Aliquis article of the creed and the procession of the Holy Spirit were the subjects of discussion.

BARING ISLAND, Arctic Sea, discovered by captain Penny in 1850-1, and so named by him after sir Francis Baring, first lord of the admiralty in 1849.

BARIUM (Greek, barys, heavy), a metal found abundantly as carbonate and sulphate. The oxide baryta was first recognized as an earth distinct from lime by Scheele, in 1774; and the metal was first obtained by Humphry Davy, in 1808. Watts.

BARB, see Jessie's Barb.

BARLAAMITES, followers of Barlaam, a learned Calabrian monk of the order of St. Basil, who maintained various peculiar tenets, attacked the Greek monks, supported the Latin against the Greek church in a controversy at Constantinople, 1337, and acted as the emperor's envoy in an attempt to reconcile the churches in 1339. He died about 1348.

BARMECIDES, a powerful Persian family, celebrated for virtue and courage, were massacred through the jealousy of the caliph Haroun-al-Raschid, about 802. His vizir Qasfar was a Barmecide. The phrase Barmecide (or imaginary) feast originated in the story of the barber's sixth brother, in the Arabian Nights' Entertainment.

BARNABITES, an order of monks, established in Milan about 1530, were much engaged in instructing youth, relieving the sick and aged, and converting heretics.

BARNARD'S, Sir JOHN, ACT (7 Geo. II., c. 24), entitled, "an act to prevent the infamous practice of stock-jobbing," was passed in 1734, and repealed in 1860. Sir John Barnard (born 1685, died 1764) was an eminent lord mayor of London. Barnard's Fittings case, see Trials, 30 May, 1802.

BARNARDO HOMES, Dr. T. J. Barnardo, of German extraction, born in Ireland, came to London, and in 1856 began energetically to promote the welfare of homeless children.

His home for boys at Stepney, founded 1870, was followed by one for girls, at Barkingdale, Essex, with infirmaries, schools, &c.; all were reported successful in 1874.

B. Baskin's Castle at Hawkhurst, Kent, for 100 infants, opened 9 Aug. 1866.

His dishonesties and management having been impugned, he gave up the management to trustees, and furnished investigation. The auditors (Canon Miller and Messrs. J. B. Maule and Wm. Graham) in their report, after commenting on the imperfect evidence, commended the charities, and generally exonerated Dr. Barnardo, 15 Oct. 1877.

See Coffer Princes and East End Juvenile Mission.

Several legal decisions, requiring Dr. Barnardo to produce children who had been committed to his charge, were pronounced, 188-92.

Dr. Barnardo's appeal to the House of Lords was dismissed, 30 July, 1891; again, 25 July, 1892. Occupants of the houses at Stepney, 3,785 boys and girls, Jan. 1891.

BARNET, Hertfordshire. Here, at Gladmore Heath, Edward IV. gained a decisive victory over the Lancastrians, on Easter-day, 14 April, 1471, when the earl of Warwick and his brother the marquis of Montacute, or Montague, were killed. A column commemorative of this battle has been erected at the meeting of the St. Alban's and Hatfield roads.

BARNUM'S SHOW. The great show of Messrs. P. T. Barnum and Mr. J. A. Bailey, conveyed from Brooklyn, New York, arrived at Olympia 1 Nov., opened 11 Nov. 1889, closed Feb. 1890.

The show included a Roman hippodrome and a triple American circus, a museum of living human curiosities termed "frocks of nature," a double amputee, Jimbo's skeleton and stuffed skin, performing men and animals of many kinds (17 elephants), Mme. Kiraly's grand equitales, "Mero, or, the destruction of Rome" (1,200 Roman characters, wild beasts, &c.). A great many simultaneous performances.

The establishment included about 1,200 people and 350 horses.

Barnum, born at Bethel, Connecticut, U.S.A., 5 July, 1810, died at Bridgeport, 7 April, 1897. Besides very diverse occupations, he specially devoted himself to catering for the amusement of the people, by setting up museums, shows and other entertainments: in 1842, he brought out Charles S. Stanton, generally termed Tom Thumb (see Dwarf), and in 1856 he engaged the celebrated vocalist, Jenny Lind, afterwards Miss. Guldsten. In 1857, his great museum was destroyed by fire, but was speedily reconverted. His life, by himself, published 1880, and other works since.)

BABODA. See India, 1874-5, 1892.

BAROMETERS. Torricelli, a Florentine, knowing that water did not rise in a pump through what was supposed to be nature's abhorrence of a vacuum, imitated the action of a pump with mercury, and made the first barometer about 1643. Boyle's experiments (1666) enhanced the value of this discovery by applying it to the measurement of height. Glass barometers were invented in 1668; and pendent barometers in 1695; marine in 1700; and many improvements have been made since. In the aneroid barometer (from a, not, and neros, watery) no liquid is employed; the atmospheric pressure being exerted on a metallic spring. Its invention (attributed to Fortin, in 1793, but due to Vidi, who died in April, 1866), excited much attention in 1843-9. Barometers were placed at N.E. coast stations in 1860, by the duke of Northumberland and others.

Mr. James B. Jordan's very delicate glycerine barometer, in which one inch is expanded to nearly eleven inches, was described to the Royal Society 20 Jan., 1880, and was set up during the year at Kew and other places. The publication of two-hourly variations of cuts at the office begun in the Times 25 Oct. 1880.

BARON, formerly the only title in our peerage, now the lowest. Its original name in England, Vassager, was changed by the Saxons into Thane, and by the Normans into Baron. The council of the realm was composed of the greater barons, the lesser barons were merely tenants of the crown. Many barons had undoubtedly assisted in, or been summoned to parliament (in 1205); but the first precept found is of no higher date than the 49 Hen. III. 1265. The first raised to this dignity by patent was John de Beauchamp, created baron of Kidderminster, by Richard II., 1387. The barons took arms against king John, and compelled him to grant the great charter of our liberties, and the charter of our forests, at Runnymede, near Windsor, June, 1215. Charles II. granted a coronet to barons on his restoration, 1660.

BARONETS, the first in rank among the gentry, and the only knighthood that is hereditary, were instituted by James I., 1611. The rebellion in Ulster seems to have given rise to this order; it having been required of a baronet, on his creation, to pay into the exchequer as much as would maintain "thirty soldiers three years at eightpence a day in the province of Ulster in Ireland." It was further required that a baronet should be a gentleman born, and have a clear estate of 1000*l.* per annum. The first baronet was sir Nicholas Bacon (whose successor is therefore styled Primus Baronetorum Anglie), 22 May, 1611. The baronets of Ireland were created in 1619; the first being sir Francis Blundell.—Baronets of Nova Scotia were created, 1625; sir Robert Gordon the first baronet.—All baronets created since the Irish union in 1801 are of the United Kingdom. Betham's "Baronetage of England," 5 vols. 4to. 1801-5.

BARONS' WAR, arose in consequence of the faithlessness of Henry III. and the oppression of his favourites in 1258. The barons, headed by Simon de Montfort, earl of Leicester, and Gilbert de Clare, earl of Gloucester, met at Oxford in 1262, and enacted statutes to which the king objected. In 1263 their disputes were in vain referred to the decision of Louis IX. of France. War broke out, and on 14 May, 1264, the king's party was totally defeated at Lewes; and De Montfort became the virtual ruler of the kingdom. The war was renewed; and at the battle of Evesham, 4 Aug. 1265, De Montfort was slain, and the barons were defeated; but they did not render their final submission till 1266. A history of this war was published by Mr. W. H. Blaauw, in 1844, and ed., 1871.

BAROSSA, see Barraco.

BARRACKS (from "Barraco—Huile que font les soldats en campagne pour se mettre à couvert") were not numerous in this country until about 1789. A superintendent-general was appointed in 1793, since when commodious barracks have been built in the various garrison towns and central gulate of the empire.—A report, censuring the conduct of many barracks, was presented to parliament in 1858; and great improvements were effected under the direction of Mr. Sidney (afterwards lord) Herbert; see Aldershot. Mr. E. Stanhope's scheme for increase and improvement of barracks, camps, &c. (to cost about 4,100,000*l.*) submitted to the Commons, 27 Feb.; the Barracks Act passed, 25 July, 1860.

BARRATRY, is a general term for the stirring up suits and quarrels among the people. Maintenance is an officious intermeddling in a quarrel or suits by assisting either party with money or otherwise. It is punishable by old statutes (of Richard II., and others), with fine and imprisonment. ChamPERTY is an illegal bargain with either plaintiff or defendant to share in the profits of the matter in dispute.

Mr. Bradlaugh's action against Mr. Newdegate for maintenance in the case of Clarke v. Bradlaugh (see Parliament, 1881) was dismissed, 30 Sept. 1881.

BARREL-ORGANS, see Organs.

BARRICADES, mounds formed of trees and earth, for military defence. During the wars of the League in France, in 1588, the people made barricades by means of chains, casks, &c., and compelled the royal troops to retire. During the war of the Fronde, a barricade was erected in Paris on 27 Aug. 1648. Barricades composed of overturned vehicles, &c., were erected in Paris in the insurrections of 27-30 July, 1830, and 23-26 June, 1848, when sanguinary conflicts took place; and also 2 Dec. 1851.

BARRIER TREATIES. The first, between England and the Netherlands, was signed at the Hague, 29 Oct. 1709, for mutual support; annulled 1712; another treaty was concluded at Utrecht, 29 Jan. 1713. The third, by which the Low Countries were ceded to the emperor Charles VI., was signed by the British, Imperial, and Dutch ministers, 15 Nov. 1715.

BARRISTERS are said to have been first appointed by Edward I., about 1201, but there is earlier mention of professional advocates. They are of various ranks, as king's or queen's counsel, serjeants, &c., which see. Students for the bar must keep a certain number of terms at the Inns of court, provisionally to being called; and by the regulations of 1853 must pass a public examination.

BARROSA, or BAROSSA (S. Spain). The British army, commanded by major-general sir Thomas Graham, afterwards lord Lynedoch, totally defeated the French under marshal Victor, 5 March, 1811, the French leaving nearly 3000 dead, six pieces of cannon, and an eagle, the first that the British had taken; the loss of the British was 1169 men killed and wounded.

On 19 Sept. 1867, new docks were opened in the presence of the duke of Devonshire and Buccleuch (proprietors of the land), Mr. Gladstone, and others. Barrow was made a municipal borough in 1867. Population in 1881, 47,459; 1891, 51,712.

BARROW'S STRAITS (N. Arctic Sea), explored by Edw. Farry, as far as Melville island, lat. 74° 25' N., and long. 113° 47' W. The strait, named after sir John Barrow, was entered on 3 Aug., 1819. The thermometer was 55° below zero of Fahrenheit.

BARROWISTS, a name given to the Brownists, which see.

BARROWS, circular or oblong mounds, found in Britain and other countries, were ancient sepulchres. Sir Richard Hoare caused several barrows near Stonehenge to be opened; in them were found Celtic ornaments, such as beads, buckles, and brooches, in amber, wood, and gold: Nov. 1808, 230 barrows were opened and discoveries made, chiefly in Yorkshire, 1866 et seq., under the superintendence of the Rev. Canon Wm. Greenwell, who published his elaborate work, "British Barrows," in December, 1877.

Barrows at Aldbourne, North Wilts, were opened by Canon Greenwell and Rev. Walter Mooney, Sept.-Oct. 1878.

Canon Greenwell gave urns and other results of his explorations to the British Museum in 1879. He was still engaged in his researches Oct. 1889.

The MARRIAGE OF ST. BARTHOLOMEW commenced at Paris on the night of the festival . . . 12 Aug. 1579
According to Sully, 70,000 Huguenots, or French Protestants, including women and children, were murdered throughout the kingdom by secret orders from Charles IX., at the instigation of his mother, the queen dowager, Catherine de Medici.

La Popelière calculates the victims at 50,000; Adriani, De Serres, and De Thou say 50,000; Davila states them at 40,000; and Pœrtius makes the number 100,000. Above 500 persons of rank, and 10,000 of inferior condition, perished in Paris alone, besides those slaughtered in the provinces. Pope Gregory XIII. ordered a Te Deum to be performed, with other rejoicings.

BARTHOLOMEW, ST., a West Indian island, held by Sweden. It was colonized by the French in 1648; and has been several times taken and restored by the British. It was ceded to Sweden by France in 1785; captured by the English and restored, 1801; ceded to France, 1877.

BASQUE BOATS (W. France). Fourteen French ships of the line, riding at anchor here, were attacked by lords Gambier and Cochrane (the latter commanding the fleet), and all were destroyed, 21-29 April, 1809. BATHS were early used in Asia and Greece, and introduced by Agrippa into Rome, where many were constructed by Augustus and his successors. The thermae of the Romans and gymnasia of the Greeks (of which baths formed merely an appendage) were sumptuous. BATTERIES along the coasts were constructed by Henry VIII. (who reigned 1509-47). The ten floating batteries with which Gibraltar was attacked, in the siege of that fortress, were invented by D'Arcon, a French engineer. They resisted the heavy shells and 32-pound shot, but ultimately yielded to red-hot shot, 13 Sept. 1782; see Gibraltar. Formidable floating batteries are now constructed. See Naval, Electricity.

It was dedicated to St. Martin, and given to Benedictine monks, who were to pray for the souls of the slain. The original name of the place was Hothelund; see Hastings. After the battle of Hastings, a list was taken of William's chiefs, amounting to 629, and called the "BATTLE-ROLL"; and among these chiefs the lands and titles of the followers of the defeated Harold were distributed. "The Roll of Battle Abbey," edited by the duchess of Cleveland, was published, with notes, &c., in 1880.

They were originally attendants upon the king's buffet; see Yeoman of the Guard.

BATTLEFIELD, BATTLE OF, see Shrewsbury.

BATTLES. Palamedes of Argos is mythically said to have been the first who ranged an army in a regular line of battle, placed sentinels round a camp, and excited the soldier's vigilance by giving him a watchword, and to have been treacherously slain by the Greeks before Troy. See Naval Battles, British. The following are the most memorable battles, arranged in chronological order; further details of the greater part are given in separate articles; n. signifies naval.

BAYEUX TAPESTRY, mythically said to have been wrought by Matilda, queen of William I., or to have been made under the direction of his brother Odo, bishop of Bayeux. It is 19 inches wide, 214 feet long, and is divided into compartments showing the events from the visit of Harold to the Norman court to his death at Hastings; it is now preserved in the public library of Bayeux near Caen. A copy, drawn by C. Stothard, and coloured after the original, was published by the Society of Antiquaries in 1821-3. It was reproduced by auto-type process by F. E. Fowke, with notes, 1875.

BAYLEN (S. Spain), where on 20 July, 1808, the French, commanded by generals Dupont and Wedel, were defeated by the Spaniards under Reding, Cuvigny, and other generals.

BAYONET, the short dagger fixed at the end of fire-arms, said to have been invented at Bayonne, in France, about 1647, 1670, or 1690. It was used at Killbuck in 1689, and at Maraglia by the French, in 1693, "with great success, against the enemy unprepared for the encounter with so formidable a novelty." The ring-bayonet was adopted by the British, 24 Sept. 1693.

* The abduction of Charles-Louis was mainly caused by his attachment to an intriguing woman, known throughout Europe by the assumed name of Lola Montes, who, in the end, was expelled the kingdom for her interference in state affairs, and afterwards led a wandering life. She delivered lectures in London, in 1849; thence proceeded to the United States; and died at New York, 27 Jan. 1866.

New pattern of bayonets adopted in 1876; asserted to be defective in the Bosnian campaign 1864-5. Strict examination ordered 1865. See under Arms.

BAYONNE (S. France), an ancient city. It was held by the English from 1295 till it was taken by Charles VII. The queens of Spain and France met the cruel duke of Alva here, June, 1556, it is supposed to arrange the massacre of St. Bartholomew. Charles IV. of Spain abdicated here in favour of "his friend and ally" the emperor Napoleon, 4 May, and his sons, Ferdinand prince of Asturias, don Carlos, and don Antonio renounced their rights to the Spanish throne, 6 May, 1808. In the neighbourhood of Bayonne was much desperate fighting between the French and British armies, 9-13 Dec. 1813. Bayonne was invested by the British, 14 Jan. 1814; on 14 April, the French made a sally, and attacked the English with success, but were at length driven back. The loss of the British was considerable, and Lieut.-gen. Sir John Hope was wounded and taken prisoner.—A Franco-Spanish industrial and fine arts exhibition was opened at Bayonne in July, 1864.

BAYREUTH (N. Germany), a margraviate, held formerly by a branch of the Brandenburg family, was with that of Anspach abdicated by the reigning prince in favour of the king of Prussia, 1790. The archives were brought (in 1783) from Plassenburg to the city of Bayreuth, which was incorporated with Bavaria by Napoleon in 1806.

BAZAAR, or covered market, a word of Arabic origin. The magnificent bazaar of Isfahan was excelled by that of Tauris, which has held 30,000 men in order of battle. In London the Soho-square bazaar was opened by Mr. Trotter in 1816 to relieve the relatives of persons killed in the war. The Queen's Bazaar, Oxford-street, a very extensive one, was (with the Diorama) burnt down, and the loss estimated at 50,000*l.*, 27 May, 1829. It was rebuilt, and converted into the Princess's Theatre, opened 30 Sept. 1841. The St. James's bazaar (built by Mr. Crookford) in 1812. The Pantheon, made a bazaar in 1834; see Pantheon. The London Crystal-palace bazaar, 1858. The most imposing sale termed a bazaar was opened for the benefit of the Anti-Corn-Law League, in Covent-garden theatre, 5 May, 1845; in six weeks 25,000*l.* were obtained, mostly by admission money. BAZAINE, MARSHAL, trial, &c., Dec. 1873, and Aug. 1874. See Mets and France.

BAZEILLES, a village in the Ardennes, N.E. France. During the dreadful battle of Sedan, 1 Sept. 1870, Bazailles was burnt by the Bavarians, and atrocious outrages were said to have been committed. Of nearly 2000 inhabitants it was asserted scarcely fifty remained alive, and these indignantly denied having given provocation. Much controversy ensued, and in July, 1871, gen. Von der Tann asserted correctly that the number of deaths had been grossly exaggerated, that there had been much provocation, and denied the alleged atrocities.

defeated after a severe action, by the Germans under the grand-duke of Mecklenburg, 2 Dec. 1870. See Ostend.

BEACHY HEAD, a promontory, S. E. Sussex, near which the British and Dutch fleet, commanded by the earl of Torrington, was defeated by a superior French force under admiral Tourville, 30 June, 1690; the allies suffered very severely. The Dutch lost two admirals, 500 men, and several ships—sunk to prevent them from falling into the hands of the enemy; the English lost two ships and 400 men. The admirals on both sides were blamed; ours, for not fighting; the French for not pursuing the victory.

BEACONS, see Lighthouses, Jubilee, 1887.

BEACONSFIELD ADMINISTRATION, see Dorset and People's Tributes.

BEADS were early used in the east for reckoning prayers. St. Augustine mentions them 366. About 1090, Peter the Hermit is said to have made a series of 55 beads. To Dominic de Guzman is ascribed the invention of the Rosary (a series of 15 large and 150 small beads), in honour of the Blessed Virgin, about 1202. Beads soon after were in general use. The Bead-roll was a list of deceased persons, for the repose of whose souls a certain number of prayers was recited. Beads have been found in British barrows.

BEAM AND SCALES. The apparatus for weighing goods was so called, "as it weighs so much at the king's beam." A public beam was set up in London, and all commodities ordered to be weighed by the city officer, called the weigh-master, who was to do justice between buyer and seller, stat. 3 Edw. II. 1309. Sic. Beams and scales, with weights and measures, were ordered to be examined by the justices at quarter sessions, 35 Geo. III. 1794; see Weights and Measures.

BEANS, BLACK AND WHITE, were used by the secretists in gathering the votes of the people for the election of magistrates. A white bean signified absolution, and a black one condemnation. The precept of Pythagoras to abstain from beans, abstine a fabis, has been variously interpreted. "Beans do not favour mental tranquillity." Cicero. The finer kinds of beans were brought here with other vegetables, in Henry VIII.'s reign.

BEAR-BATTING, an ancient popular English sport, prohibited by parliament in 1835.

BEARDS. The Egyptians did not wear beards; the Assyrians did. They have been worn for centuries by the Jews, who were forbidden to mar their beards, 1490 A.C. Lev. xix. 27. The Tartars wore a long war with the Persians, declaring them infidels, because they would not cut their beards, after the custom of Turkey. The Greeks wore their beards till the time of Alexander, who ordered the Macedonians to be shaven, lest the beard should give a handle to their enemies.

* A bearded woman was taken by the Russians at the battle of Poltava, and presented to the Czar, Peter I. 1709; her beard measured 1½ yard. A woman is said to have been seen at Paris with a bushy beard, and her whole body covered with hair. Dut. de France. The great Margaret, princess of the Netherlands, had a very long stiff beard. In Savaria, in the time of William, a virgin had a long thick beard. Mémoires de l'Académie, torn at Geneva (it was said) in 1794, was exhibited in London, in 1803-4, when, consequently, eighteen years of age; she had a golden head of hair, a strong black nose which cut thick hair on her nose and down from her neck on her back, and masculine features.

1300 A.C. Beards were worn by the Romans, 999 A.C. The emperor Julian wrote a diatribe (entitled "Misopogon") against wearing beards, A.D. 364. In England, they were not fashionable after the conquest, 1066, until the 13th century, and were discontinued at the Restoration. Peter the Great enjoined the Russians, even of rank, to shave, but was obliged to keep officers on foot to cut off the beard by force. Since 1851 the custom of wearing the beard gradually increased in Great Britain.

BÉARN, S. France, the ancient Benechaurum, was held successively by the Romans, Franks, Goths, and Gascons, and became a hereditary viscounty in 819, under Centule I., son of Loup, duke of Gascony. From his family it passed to the houses—of Gabaret, 1134; of Montcade, 1170; of Foix, 1290; and of Bourbon, 1550. Its annexation to France was decreed by Henry IV., 1594; affirmed by Louis XIII., 1620.

Near here a part of the army of marshal MacMahon under de Failly, which, after vainly endeavouring to reach Metz, was retreating before the Germans under the crown prince of Prussia, was surprised, defeated, and driven across the Meuse at Mouzon, 30 Aug. 1870. The French loss included about 7000 prisoners, many guns, and much camp equipment. The victory was chiefly gained by the Bavarians.

Mr. John Thomas Barber Beaumont, artist, swimmer, founder of the London and County Fire Office (born 1774, died 1840), bequeathed £2,500, to establish an institution for the moral and intellectual improvement of the working classes of east London, which was opened in Beaumont Square, Mile End.

By the munificence of the Drapers' Company, the Royal Family, the duke of Westminster, and many others, the fund in June, 1886 amounted to 75,000. The trustees proposed the erection of a "People's Palace," to include a public library and reading rooms, technical schools, summer and winter gardens, a concert hall, swimming baths and gymnasium. The Queen is patron of the undertaking, which is partly supported by subscription.

The foundation stone of the "Queen's Hall" was laid by the prince of Wales at June, 1886; opened by the Queen (who also laid the foundation of the Technical schools) 2 May, 1887; Mr. John Rogers Jennings, Master of the Drapers' Company, knighted. Emile d'Hainault, the director, proposed annual competitions. The first prize to Mlle. Berthe Soucaret, a creole of Guadeloupe, aged 18, 29 Sept. 1888. BECKET'S MURDER. * Thomas Becket, archbishop of Canterbury, was murdered at the altar, 29 Dec. 1170. The king was absolved of guilty knowledge of the crime in 1172, and did penance at the tomb in 1174. The bones of Becket were enshrined in gold and jewels in 1220. They were ordered to be burned in the reign of Henry VIII. 24 April, 1538. A stone coffin, supposed by some persons to contain Becket's bones (?), discovered in a crypt at Canterbury Cathedral, Jan. 1888. The Merchant Adventurers were at one time termed "the Brotherhood of St. Thomas a Becket." A Roman catholic church at Canterbury, dedicated to him, was opened by cardinal Manning, 13 April, 1875.

* Thomas Becket was born in 1119. His father Gilbert was a London trader and his mother is stated to have been a convert from Mahomedanism. He was educated at Oxford, and made archdeacon by Theobald, archbishop of Canterbury, who introduced him to the king, Henry II. He became chancellor in 1155, but on being elected archbishop of Canterbury in 1162, he resigned the chancellorship, to the great offence of the king. He opposed strenuously the constitutions of Clarendon in 1164, and fled the country; and in 1166, communicated all the clergy who agreed to abide by them. He said the king met at Freville, in Touraine, on 24 July, 1170, and was formally reconciled. On his return he re-commenced his struggle with the king, which led to his tragical death, after which he was canonized.

An air-cushion is said to have been used by Helio-gabalus, 218-222; air-beds were in use in the 16th century. Feather-beds were in use in England in the reign of Henry VIII. The bedsteads of the Egyptians and later Greeks, like modern couches, became common among the Roman upper classes.

A bedstead of gold was presented to the queen on a Nov. 1859, by the Maharajah of Cashmere.

It became extinct in 1867, its last place of meeting being 4 room in the Lyceum theatre. Its history was published by Brother Arnold in 1871.

BEES. Mount Hybla, on account of its odoriferous flowers, thyme, and abundance of honey, has been poetically called the "empire of bees." Mycæna, in Attica, was also famous for its bees and honey. The economy of bees was admired in the earliest ages; and Eumelus, of Corinth, wrote a poem on bees, 741 B.C. Bees were introduced into Boston, New England, in 1670, and have since spread over the continent. Mandeville's satirical "Fable of the Bees" appeared in 1723. Huber published his observations on bees in 1792. The Apimarian Society had an establishment at Muswell Hill, near London (1860-2). BEET-ROOT is of recent cultivation in England. Beta vulgaris, red beet, is used for the table as a salad. Margraff first produced sugar from the entire beet-root in 1747. M. Achard produced excellent sugar from it in 1799; and the chemists of France, at the instance of Bonaparte, largely extracted sugar from the beet-root in 1800. 60,000 tons of sugar, about half the consumption, are now manufactured in France from beet. It is also largely manufactured in other countries. A refinery of sugar from beet-root has been erected at the Thames bank, Chelsea. The cultivation of beet-root in England and Ireland much advocated, 1871, and again, in 1884, when great improvements were proposed, especially at Lavenham, Suffolk, by Messrs. Bolson, of Westminster.

BEGGARS were tolerated in ancient times, being often musicians and ballad-singers. In 1388, 1530, 1535, 1547-50 severe laws were passed against them. By 14 Eliz., c. 5, 1572, sturdy beggars were ordered to be "grievously whipped and burnt through the right ear;" punished capitally for the third offence, acts consolidated 1731. BEHEADING, the Decollatio of the Romans, introduced into England from Normandy (as a less ignominious mode of putting high criminals to death), by William the Conqueror, 1076, when Walthoof, earl of Huntingdon, Northampton, and Northumberland, was first so executed. Since then this mode of execution became frequent, particularly in the reigns of Henry VIII., Mary, and Elizabeth, when even women of the noblest blood thus perished; the aged countess of Salisbury, 27 May, 1541; lady Jane Grey, 12 Feb. 1554.

Rawlinson in 1844-6, and published in the Journal of the Royal Asiatic Society. Each paragraph commences with "I am Darius the Great King."

BEHRING'S STRAIT, discovered by captain Vitus Behring, a Danish navigator in the service of Russia. He thus proved that the continents of Asia and America are distant from each other about thirty-nine miles, 1728. He died at Behring's island in 1741. In 1773 captain James Cook surveyed the coasts of both continents. See United States, 1889-91.

The czar Alexander I., in 1821, declared the Behring sea closed to foreign fishing; this was at once repudiated by Mr. J. Quincy Adams, secretary of the United States. Alaska was purchased in 1867 from Russia, by the States, who afterwards assumed the Russian claim upon the sea, and seized the British Columbia's sealing vessels. The seizure of the Black Diamond sealer by the U.S. revenue cutter Rush, 3 July, was declared legal by Mr. Secretary Blaine, U.S., 2 Aug. 1869; while the British government claimed, as heretofore, the right of fishing in waters beyond the territorial limits. The governments agreed to refer the question to arbitration, Feb. 1890. President Harrison proclaimed the Behring sea closed to unlicensed seal fishing, 15 March. A Blue Book was published, 15 Aug., containing the correspondence between the two governments from 1 Sept. 1886, to 2 Aug. 1890. The marquis of Salisbury demanded that, pending arbitration, British sealing vessels should not be molested, adding that if so, they should be protected, 2 Aug. 1890.

Negotiations resumed, arbitration refused by Mr. Blaine, 25 Aug., and of Oct. 1890.

Correspondence referred to the U.S. congress, 1891.

The owner of the British sealing schooner, W. P. Seaward (which was seized and condemned in 1889), supported by the Canadian government, brings the Behring sea difficulty before the U.S. Supreme Court at Washington, 23 Jan., case opens, 27 Jan.; the court decides to hear the appeal on 13 April, 2 Feb. 11

BELGRADE, an ancient city in Servia, on the right bank of the Danube. It was taken from the Greek emperor by Solomon, king of Hungary, in 1073; gallantly defended by John Huniades against the Turks, under Mahomet II., July to Sept. 1456, when the latter was defeated, with the loss of 40,000 men. Belgrade was taken by sultan Solymann, Aug. 1521, and retaken by the Imperialists in 1688, from whom it was again taken by the Turks, 1690. It was besieged in May, 1716, by prince Eugene. In that year the Turkish army, 200,000 strong, approached to relieve it, and on 5 Aug. a sanguinary battle was fought at Peterwaradin, in which the Turks lost 20,000 men. Eugene defeated the Turks here, 16 Aug. 1717, and Belgrade surrendered 18 Aug. In 1739 it was ceded to the Turks, after its fine fortifications had been demolished. It was retaken in 1789, and restored at the peace of Belshenbach, in 1790. The Servian insurgents had possession of it 1806-13. In 1815 it was placed under prince Milosch, subject to Turkey. The fortifications were restored in 1820.

* Leopold married, in May, 1816, the princess Charlotte of Wales, daughter of the prince regent, afterwards George IV. of England; she died in childbirth, 8 Nov. 1817.

On 19 June, 1862, the Turkish pasha was dismissed for firing on the towns during a riot. The university was established by private munificence, 1862. The fortress was surrendered by the Turks to the Servians, 18 April, 1867. The independence of Servia proclaimed here, 22 Aug. 1878. The mayor of Belgrade received by the lord mayor of London, 19 Dec. 1884. Population in 1890, 54,458. See Servia.

BELGRAVIA, a south-western district of the metropolis, built between 1826 and 1852 upon land belonging to the marquis of Westminster, who is also viscount Belgrave.

BELIZE, see Honduras.

BELL, BOOK, AND CANDEN: in the Romish ceremony of excommunication (which see), the bell is rung, the book is closed, and candle extinguished; the effect being to exclude the excommunicated from the society of the faithful, divine service, and the sacraments. Its origin is ascribed to the 8th century.

BELL BOOK LIGHTHOUSE, nearly in front of the Frith of Tay, one of the finest in Great Britain; it is 115 feet high, is built upon a rock that measures 427 feet in length, and 200 feet in breadth, and is about 12 feet under water.* It was erected in 1806-10. It has two bells for hazy weather.

BELLAIR, North America. The town was attacked by the British forces under sir Peter Parker, who, after an obstinate engagement, was killed, 30 Aug. 1814.

BELLEISLE, an isle on the south coast of Brittany, France, erected into a duchy for marshal Belleisle, in 1742, in reward of his military and diplomatic services, by Louis XV. Belleisle was taken by the British forces under commodore Keppel and general Hodgson, after a desperate resistance, 7 June, 1761, but was restored to France in 1763.

BELLITE, a new Swedish explosive invented by Mr. Carl Lamm in 1885.

BELLMEN, appointed in London to proclaim the hour of the night before public clocks became general, were numerous about 1556. They were to ring a bell at night, and cry, "Take care of your fire and candle, be charitable to the poor, and pray for the dead."

BELLOWS. Anachardus, the Scythian, is said to have been the inventor of them, about 569 a.c.; and to him is ascribed the invention of tinner, the potter's wheel, anchors for ships, &c. Bellows were not used in the furnaces of the Romans. The great bellows of our foundries must have been early used; see Blowing Machines.

BELLS were used among the Jews, Greeks, and Romans. The responses of the Dodonæan oracle were in part conveyed by bells. Strebo. The monument of Porcenna was decorated with pinacles, each surmounted by bells. Piny. Said to have been introduced by Paulinus, bishop of Nola, * Upon this rock, it is said, the abbots of Abbeys took the impulse of the sea, thus warning mariners. It is also said that a Dutchman, who took the appearance of a sea, was here lost with his ship and crew.

in Campaign, about 900, and first known in France in 550. The army of Clothaire II., king of France, was frightened from the siege of Sens by the ringing of the bells of St. Stephen's church. The second description of our king Egbert commands every priest, at the proper hours, to sound the bells of his church. Bells were used in churches by order of pope John IX., about 900, as a defense, by ringing thunder and lightning. Bells are mythically said to have been cast by Turketul, archbishop of England, about 941. The celebrated "Song of the Bell," by Schiller (died 1805), has been frequently translated. The following list is that given by Mr. E. Beckett Denison (afterwards Lord Grimthorpe) in his discourse on bells at the Royal Institution, 6 March, 1857. The lecture of the Rev. H. R. Haweis, at the same place, 7 Feb., 1879, was well illustrated.

The clapper weighs 6 cwt.—half that of the former bell. The note of the bell is E natural; the quarter-bells being G, B, E, F. On 1 Oct. 1869, this bell was also found to be cracked.

¶ The clapper of St. Paul's bell weighs 16 cwt.; the diameter of the bell is 10 ft. (Mr. Walcey says 6 ft. 6 in.), and its thickness 10 in. The hour strikes upon the last, the quarters upon two smaller ones: see Clocks.

750 changes can be rung in an hour upon 12 bells; 479,000 changes rung upon these, require 75 years, to months, and so days.

Nell Gwynne laid the rings of the bells of St. Martin's-in-the-fields money for a weekly entertainment, 1687, and many others have done the same.

A central council of Church Bell Ringers, representing many societies, was established at the Inns of Court hotel, London, 20 April, 1860.

CARILLONS, a collection of bells, arranged in two or three chromatic scales, played by pedals or keyboards, or by machinery. The first set is said to have been made at Abbot in Flanders, in 1487, and that country and Holland are renowned for carillons. Mathias van den Gheyn was an eminent maker (1721-85). Excellent carillon machines are now made by Messrs. Gillet, Bland & Co., Craydon. One at Manchester was started 1 Jan. 1879. It plays 35 tunes on 20 bells.

BELOOCHISTAN, the ancient Gedrosia (S. Asia). Khrat, the capital, was taken by the British in the Afghan war, 1839; abandoned, July, 1840; taken and held a short time, Nov. 1840.

The khan was subdued in 1856, under certain conditions, which were not observed; the arrangement was broken up in 1873; the negotiations of Major (after Sir Robert) Sandeman in 1875 were successful, and Quetta was occupied by the British in 1877, and has since become a prosperous station. BENARES, in India, a holy city of the Hindoos, abounding in temples. It was ceded by the nabob of Oude, Asaph-ud-Dowlat, to the English, in 1775. An insurrection took place here, which had nearly proved fatal to the British interests in Hindostan, 1781. The rajah, Chert Sing, was deposed in consequence of it, in 1783. Mr. Cherry, capt. Conway, and others, were assassinated at Benares, by vixen Ali, 14 Jan. 1799. In June, 1857, Col. Neil succeeded in suppressing attempts of the native infantry to join the mutiny; see India. Visit of prince of Wales, 5 Jan. 1876.

BENBURB, near Armagh (N. Ireland). Here O'Neill totally defeated the English under Monroe, 5 June, 1646. Moore says that it was "the only great victory since the days of Brian Boru, achieved by an Irish chieftain in the cause of Ireland."

BENOOLEN (Sumatra). The English East India company made a settlement here which proved to them the pepper trade after the Dutch had dispossessed them of Bentam, 1682. Anderson. York fort was erected by the East India company, 1690. In 1693 a dreadful mortality raged here, occasioned by the town being built on a pestilential morass; among others the governor and council perished. The French, under count D'Etalga, destroyed the English settlement, 1760. Benocoolen was reduced to a residency under the government of Bengal, in 1801, and was ceded to the Dutch, in 1824, in exchange for their possessions in Malacca; see India.

BENDER, Benaresia, European Russia. Near it was the asylum of Charles XII. of Sweden, after his defeat at Pultowa by the czar Peter the Great, 8 July, 1709. The peace of Bender was concluded in 1711. Bender was taken by storm, by the Russians, 28 Sept. 1770; was taken by Potemkin in 1789, and again in 1809. It was restored at the peace of Jassy, but returned at the peace of 1812.

BENEDICTINES, an order of monks founded by St. Benedict (lived 480-543), who introduced the monastic life into Western Europe, in 529, when he founded the monastery on Monte Casino in Campania, and eleven others afterwards. His Regula Monachorum (rule of the monks) soon became the common rule of western monachism. No religious order has been so remarkable for extent, wealth, and men of note and learning, as the Benedictines. Among its branches the chief were the Cluniacs, founded in 912, the Cistercians, founded in 1098, and reformed by St. Bernard, abbot of Clairvaux, in 1116, and the Carthusians, from the Chartreux (herm. Charter-house), founded by Bruno about 1080. The Benedictine order was introduced into England by Augustin, in 596, and William I. built an abbey for it on the plain where the battle of Hastings was fought, 1066, see Battle-Abbey. William de Warrene, earl of Warenne, built a convent at Lewes, in Sussex, in 1077. Of this order it is reckoned that there have been 40 popes, 200 cardinals, 50 patriarchs, 116 archbishops, 4600 bishops, 4 emperors, 12 empresses, 46 kings, 41 queens, and 3600 saints. Their founder was canonised. Baronius. The Benedictines have taken little part in politics, but have produced many valuable literary works. The congregation of St. Maur published the celebrated "L'Art de vérifier les Dates," in 1750, and edited many ancient authors.

The Benedictines with other orders were expelled from France by decree 29 March, 1880. The 14th centenary of the birth of St. Benedict was kept at Monte Casino and other places 4 April, ..

BENEFICE (literally a good deed or favour), or FIFE. Clerical benefices originated in the 12th century, when the priesthood began to imitate the feudal lay system of holding lands for performing certain duties, till then the priests were supported by alms and oblations at mass. Vicarages, rectorias, perpetual curacies, and chaplancies, are termed benefices, in contradistinction to dignities, such as bishoprics, &c. A rector is entitled to all the tithes, a vicar, to a small part or to none.—All benefices that should become vacant in the space of six months, were given by pope Clement VII. to his nephew, in 1534. Notitia Monasteria. An act for the augmentation of poor benefices by the sale of some of those in the presentation of the lord chancellor, was passed in 1863, and an act respecting the sequestration of benefices and their union passed, 1871.

The Commission on Ecclesiastical Benefices reported, recommending amendments in sales of advowsons, discontinuance of sale by auction, &c.

about 3 Nov. 1879.

Near it was erected the triumphal arch of Trajan, A.D. 114. Benevento was formed into a duchy by the Lombards, 571. At a battle fought here, 26 Feb. 1266, Manfred, king of Sicily, was defeated and slain by Charles of Anjou, who thus became virtually master of Italy. The castle was built 1323; the town was nearly destroyed by an earthquake, 1688, when the archbishop, afterwards pope Benedict XIII., was dug out of the ruins alive, and contributed to its subsequent rebuilding, 1703. It was seized by the king of Naples, but restored to the pope on the suppression of the Jesuits, 1773. Talleyrand de Périgord, Bonaparte's arch-chancellor, was made prince of Benevento, 1806. Benevento was taken by the French, 1798, and restored to the pope in 1815.

Mansfeld in coal tar (1848), the latter of whom unfortunately died in consequence of being severely burnt while experimenting on it (26 Feb. 1855). Benzole has become useful in the arts. Chemical research has produced from it aniline (which see), the source of the celebrated modern dyes, mauve, magenta, and many others; see Alicurine and Indigo.

Aromatic essences and perfumes have been obtained from benzole by Perkin, Tiemann, Hermann, and others. Fehling's medicines, by O. Fischer, Dewar, McKendrick and others, in 1881. BETHLEHEM now contains a large convent, enclosing, as is said, the very birthplace of Christ; a church erected by the empress Helena in the form of a cross, about 325; a chapel, called the Chapel of the Nativity, where they pretend to show the manger in which Christ was laid; another, called the Chapel of Joseph; and a third, of the Holy Innocents. Bethlehem is much visited by pilgrims.—The Bethlehemite monks existed in England in 1257.

BETHLEHEM HOSPITAL (so called from having been originally the hospital of St. Mary of Bethlehem), a royal foundation for the reception of lunatics, incorporated by Henry VIII. in 1547. The old Bethlehem Hospital, Moorfields, erected in 1676, pulled down in 1814, was built in imitation of the Tuilleries at Paris. The present hospital in St. George's-fields was begun April, 1812, and opened in 1815. In 1856 extensive improvements were completed under the direction of Mr. Sydney Smirke. Income 1876, 25,184*l*.

BETHNAL GREEN, E. London, a poor, populous parish; said to have been the seat of Henry the Merchant, one of the "Black Legends of Bethnal Green" (Procy Bellads). Many churches have been recently erected by the instrumentality of bishop Blomfield and others, and the district has been much favoured by the baroness Burdett-Coutts. The East London Museum here, a branch of that at South Kensington, was opened by the prince of Wales, 24 June, 1872. Sir Richard Wallace lent to it for a time a collection of fine pictures and valuable curiosities collected by his father, the marquis of Hertford. He died 20 July, 1890. The gardens opened 19 May, 1875. See Perks. Returns two M.P.'s by Act of 1885. Population 1881, 126,961; 1891, 129,134.

BETHUNE, France, an independent lordship since the 11th century, was annexed to the monarchy by the treaty of Utrecht, 1713, after several changes.

BETTERMENT, is a term in American law, applied to the improvement of property in any locality, by the expenditure of public money or otherwise, and it is therefore held, that such property ought to be called upon to contribute more to taxation. The question was much discussed in 1889-90 in relation to the Strand Improvement bill.

BETTING-HOUSES, affording much temptation to gaming, and consequent dishonesty, in the lower classes, were suppressed by an act passed in 1853 (16 & 17 Vict. c. 119). A Peri-mutuel, or mutual betting machine, in Aug., and the "Knightsbridge Exchange," a betting company, 2 Nov. 1870, were declared illegal, see Races. New Betting Act passed 8 June, 1874.

In 1874 this Act was applied to betting stations at races; legal proceedings against Mr. H. Chaplin, as steward of the Jockey Club, were quashed by the magistrates at Newmarket.

Betting reported to have greatly increased, 1889, 1892.

BEVERLEY, E. Yorkshire, the Saxon Beverlic, or Beverleaga. St. John of Beverley, archbishop of York, founded a stately monastery here, and died 721; and on his account the town received honours from Athelstan, William I., and other sovereigns. It was disfranchised for corruption in 1870, after a long investigation. Population 1881, 11,425; 1891, 12,539.

BEYROUT (the ancient Berytus), a seaport of Syria, colonised from Sidon. It was destroyed by an earthquake, 646; was re-built, and was alternately possessed by the Christians and Saracens; and after many changes, fell into the power of Amruth IV. It was taken during the Egyptian revolt by Ibrahim Pacha, in 1832. The total defeat of the Egyptian army by the allied British, Turkish, and Austrian forces, and evacuation of Beyrout (the Egyptians losing 7000 in killed, wounded, and prisoners, and twenty pieces of cannon), took place 10 Oct. 1840. Sir C. Napier was the English admiral engaged. Beyrout suffered greatly in consequence of the massacres in Syria in May, 1860. In Nov. 1860 above 27,000 persons were said to be in danger of starving. Population in 1885, 85,000. See Syria.

BHOOTAN, a country north of Lower Bengal, with whom a treaty was made 25 April, 1774. After fruitless negotiations, Bhootan was invaded by the British in Dec. 1864, in consequence of injurious treatment of an envoy. See India, 1864-5. By an insurrection the Deb Rajah was deposed, Aug. 1889.

BHOPAL, capital of a native state in Central India, founded in 1723 by Dost Mohammed Khan, and made dependent on the British government in 1818. The able female sovereign, the begum Shah Jahan, received the grant of the Star of India in 1872. Bhopal was visited by the viceroy of India, Nov. 1891: when the begum welcomed him with a very loyal address.

BHUTPORE (India), capital of Bhutpoore, was besieged by the British, 3 Jan. 1805, and attacked five times up to 21 March, without success. After a desperate engagement with Holkar, the Mahatta chief, 2 April, 1805, the fortress was surrendered to general Lake. By a treaty, the rajah of Bhutpoore agreed to pay twenty lacs of rupees, ceded territories that had been granted to him, and delivered his son as hostage, 17 April, 1805. On the rajah's death, during a revolt against his son, Bhutpoore was taken by storm, by lord Combermere, 18 Jan. 1826; see India.

BIANCHI (Whites), a political party at Florence, in 1300, in favour of the Ghibelines or imperial party, headed by Vieri de' Cerchi, opposed the Neri (or Blacks), headed by Corso de' Donati. The latter banished their opponents, among whom was the poet Dante, in 1302. "Bianchi" were also male and female penitents, clothed in white, who travelled through Italy in Aug. 1399, and were suppressed by pope Boniface IX., 1400.

BIAROHY. When Aristodemus, king of Sparta, died, he left two sons, twins, Eurysthenes and Procles; and the people, not knowing to whom precedence should be given, placed both upon the throne, and thus established the first biarchy, 1102 B.C. The descendants of each reigned for about 800 years. Herodotus.

BIARRITZ, a bathing-place near Bayonne. Here resided the comtesse de Montijo and her daughter Eugénie, empress of the French, till her marriage, 29 Jan. 1853. It was frequently visited by the emperor and empress.

Visited by Queen Victoria. 7 March—2 April, 1859.

BIBERACH (Württemberg). Here Moreau twice defeated the Austrians,—under Latour, 2 Oct. 1796, and under Kray, 9 May, 1800.

BIBLE (from the Greek biblos, a book), the name especially given to the Holy Scriptures. The Old Testament is said to have been collected and arranged by Ezra between 458 and 450 A.C. The Apocrypha are considered as inspired writings by the Roman Catholics, but not by the Jews and Protestants; * see Apocrypha.

* In April, 1865, was published a proposal for raising a fund for exploring Palestine in order to illustrate the Bible by antiquarian and scientific investigation. The first meeting was held 22 June, 1865, the archbishop of York in the chair: see Palestine.

† The division of the Bible into chapters has been ascribed to archbishop Lanfranc in the 11th, and to archbishop Langton in the 13th century; but T. Hartwell Horne considers the real author to have been cardinal Hugo de Sancto Caro, about the middle of the 13th century. The division into sections was commenced by Rabbi Nathan (author of a Concorde), about 1445, and completed by Astruc, a Jew, in 1661. The present division into verses was introduced by the celebrated printer, Robert Stephens, in his Greek Testament (1552) and in his Latin Bible (1556-7).

‡ Fragments of portions of this book, on leather, ascribed to have been written about the 8th century A.C., obtained from Arabs in Jerusalem by M. Shapira, were exhibited in the British Museum, Aug. 1883, and after a critical examination by Dr. Ginsburg and others, declared to be forged. M. Shapira, probably insane, committed suicide at Rotterdam, 9 March, 1884. Dr. Harkavy, of St. Petersburg, published a report, about

The most ancient copy of the Hebrew Scriptures existed at Toledo, called the Codex of Hilali; it was of very early date, probably of the 4th century after Christ; some say about 60 years before Christ. The copy of Ben Asher, of Jerusalem, was made about 1100.

The reputed oldest copy of the Old and New Testament in Greek, is that in the Vatican, which was written in the 4th or 5th century. Mal's edition appeared in 1857. The next in age is the Alexandrian Codex (referred to the 5th century) in the British Museum, presented by the Greek patriarch to Charles I. in 1628. It has been printed in England, edited by Woide and Baber, 1786—1826; Codex Ephraemi, or Codex Regius, ascribed to the 6th century, in the Royal Library, Paris; published by Eichendorf in 1843.

The Codex Sinaiticus, probably written in the 4th century, was discovered by M. Constantine Tischendorf, at St. Katherine's monastery in 1844 and 1859, and presented to the czar of Russia, at whose cost a splendid edition was published in 1862.

The Hebrew Psalter was printed at Bologna in 1477. The complete Hebrew Bible was first printed by Soncino in Italy in 1488, and the Greek Testament (edited by Erasmus) at Rotterdam, in 1516. Aldus's edition was printed in 1524; Stephens's in 1556; and the sextus septuagintæ (or received text) by the Elzevirs in 1644.

TRANSLATIONS.

The Old Testament, in Greek, termed the Septuagint (which see), generally considered to have been made by order of Ptolemy Philadelphus, king of Egypt, about 286 or 285 B.C.; of this many fabulous accounts are given.

Aug. 1884, describing some apparently ancient Hebrew MSS. rolls of Lamentations and other books, said to have been found near Tenos in Rhodes about 1830.

Origen, after spending twenty-eight years in collating MSS., commenced his palimpsest Bible at Caesarea in A.D. 240; it contained the Greek versions of Aquila, Symmachus, and Theodotion, all made in or about the first century after Christ.

The following are ancient versions:—Syriac, 1st or 2nd century; the old Latin version, early in the 2nd century, revised by Jerome, in 384; who, however, completed a new version in 405, now called the Vulgate (which see); the first edition was printed (without date) about 1456; the first dated 1469;—Coptic, 4th or 5th century; Athiopic;—Armenian, 4th or 5th century; Slavonic, 9th century, and the Miss-Gothic, by Ulfilas, the apostle of the Goths, about 360, a manuscript copy of which, called the Codex Argenteus, is at Upsal. The Psalms were translated into Slovak by bishop Adalbert, about 1000; Orosius's metrical paraphrase of a portion of the Bible, about 680; and the Gospels by bishop Egbert, about 721; parts of the Bible by Bede, in the 8th century.

Fish by land-carriage, as well as sea-borne, now arrives daily here. In 1849, the market was extended and improved, and a new one was erected in 1852, Mr. Bunning, architect. Another new one, erected by Horace Jones, founded 27 Oct. 1874; completed Sept. 1876; lit by electric light, 25 Nov. 1878. BILLS OF EXCHANGE were invented by the Jews as a means of removing their property from nations where they were persecuted, 1160. Anderson. Bills are said to have been used in England, 1307. The only legal mode of sending money from England, 4 Richard II. 1381. Regulated, 1603; first stamped, 1782; duty advanced, 1797; again, June 1801; and since. It was made capital to counterfeit bills of exchange in 1734. In 1825, the year of disastrous speculations in bubbles, it was computed that there were 400 millions of pounds sterling represented by bills of exchange and promissory notes. The present amount is not supposed to exceed 50 millions. The many statutes regarding bills of exchange were consolidated by act 9 Geo. IV. 1828. An act regulating bills of exchange passed 3 Vict. July, 1839. Great alterations were made in the law on the subject by 17 & 18 Vict. c. 83 (1854), and 18 & 19 Vict. c. 67 (1855). Days of grace were abolished in the case of bills of exchange payable on sight in Aug. 1871. BILLS OF MORTALITY FOR LONDON. These bills were first compiled by order of Cromwell, about 1538, 30 Hen. VIII., but in a more formal and recognised manner in 1603, after the great plague of that year. No complete series of them has been preserved. The instances of four children at a birth are numerous; but it is recorded that a woman of Königsberg (3 Sept. 1784), and the wife of Nelson, a tailor, of Oxford-market, London (Oct. 1800), had five children at a birth. The queen usually presents a small sum of money to a poor woman giving birth to three or more living children at one time. See Bills of Mortality and Registers.

[By this statute, of the four archbishoprics of Armagh, Dublin, Tuam, and Cashel, the last two were to be abolished on the decease of the then archbishops, which has since occurred, and it was enacted that eight of the then sixteen bishoprics should, as they became void, be henceforth united to other sees, which was accomplished in 1860; so that the Irish church at present consists of two archbishoprics and ten bishoprics.]

* An order in council, Oct. 1833, directed the sees of Bangor and St. Asaph to be united on the next vacancy in either, and Manchester, a new see, to be created thereupon; this order, as regarded the union of the sees, was rescinded 1846.

BISHOPS IN SCOTLAND were probably nominated in the fourth century

The Reformers styling themselves the Congregation of the Lord having taken up arms and defeated the queen mother Mary of Guise called a parliament which set up a new form of church polity on the Geneveve model in which bishops were replaced by superintendents

Episcopacy restored by the regent Morton (see see Iul then Bishop)

Three prelates for Scottish sees consecrated at Lambeth (John Spotswood Gavin Hamilton and Andrew Lamb) for Glasgow Galloway and Brechin 21 Oct 1560

Episcopacy abolished the bishops in a body deposed, and four excommunicated by a parliament elected by the people (covenanters) which met at Glasgow Dec 1638

Episcopacy restored an archbishop (James Sharp) and three bishops consecrated by Skeldon bishop of London 15 Dec 1661

The Scottish convention expelled the bishop, abolished episcopacy declared the throne vacant drew up a claim of right and proclaimed William and Mary 11 April 1689

Episcopacy formally abolished and the bishops revenues sequestrated 19 Sept "

The Episcopal church was thus reduced to the condition of a nonconformist body at first barely tolerated. It opened its first congress 19 May 1874

Bishop Ross connected the established episcopal church of Scotland with that form of it which is now merely tolerated, he having been bishop of Edinburgh from 1687 till 1720 when, on his death, Dr Fullarton became the first post-revolution bishop of that see. Fife (now St Andrews so called in 1844) now unites the bishopric of Dunkeld (re-instituted in 1727) and that of Dunblane (re-instituted in 1731). Ross (of uncertain date) was united to Moray (re-instituted in 1727) in 1838. Argyll and the Isles now existed independently until 1847 having been conjoined to Moray and Ross or to Ross alone previously to that year. Galloway has been added to the see of Glasgow

Several American bishops formed part of the Pan-Anglican synod, at Lambeth, 24-27 Sept. 1867. The first Roman Catholic bishop of the United States was Dr Carroll, of Maryland, in 1780

BISHOPS, SUPFRAGAN, to assist metropolitans, existed in the early church. Twenty-six, appointed by Henry VIII 1534, were abolished by Mary, 1553, and restored by Elizabeth, 1558. The last appointed in aid to have been Sterna, bishop of Colchester, 1606. The appointment of suffragan bishops was revived in 1869, and archdeacon Henry Mackenzie, suffragan bishop of Nottingham (diocese of Lincoln) was consecrated 2 Feb 1870, and archdeacon Edward Parry, suffragan bishop of Dover (diocese of Canterbury), 23 March, 1870. Others have been appointed since; there were 9 in 1889; 16 in 1892.

* Between 1847-59, Miss (now becomes) Burdett Coutts gave 60,000 l. to endow colonial bishoprics. In 1866 she petitioned parliament, on account of some of the bishops professing independence of the church of England. Since then, colonial bishops have been appointed without intervention of the civil power. Much discontent took place in 1866, through the appointment of Dr. Bishop of Natal, by his metropolitans, Dr. Gray, Bishop of Capetown, and the attempt of the latter to consecrate a new bishop, in opposition to the law, was rejected by the Church of England.

BISSEXTILE, see Calendar and Leap Year.

BITHYNIA, an ancient province in Asia Minor, is said to have been invaded by Thracian tribes, some named Bithyni, who gave it the name of Bithynia. It was subject successively to the Assyrians, Lydians, Persians, and Macedonians. Most of the cities were rebuilt by Grecian colonists. Dydaneus revolted and reigned, about A.C. 430-440. Bolyra, his son, succeeds him, 378. Baa, or Baa, son of Bolyra, 376, repulses the Greeks.

Epistates, son of Bias, resists Lygimachus 368. He dies, leaving four sons, of whom the eldest, Nicomedes I., succeeds (he invites the Gauls into Asia) 358. He rebuilds Antioch, and names it Nicomedea 354. Zelas, son of Nicomedes, reigns about 350. Intending to massacre the chiefs of the Gauls at a feast, Zelas is detected in his design, and is himself put to death, and his son Prusias I. succeeds him, about 328. Prusias defeats the Gauls, and takes cities 323. Prusias allies with Philip of Macedon, and marries Agathia, his daughter 308. He receives and employs Hannibal, then a fugitive, 187; who poisons himself to escape betrayal to the Romans 183. Prusias II. succeeds 180. Nicomedes II. kills his father Prusias and reigns 149. Nicomedes III., surnamed Philopator 92. Deposed by Mithridates, king of Pontus 88. Restored by the Romans 84. Rejoins his kingdom to the Romans 74. Flavius, the younger, pre-consul A.D. 103. The Ophianes, fortress of the Bithynia 123. The Ophianes take Treas, the capital (and make it the seat of their empire till they possess Constantinople) 1387.

The name was given to the list of penitences assigned 1511; and to other books, see 1565, 1576. The title Black Book was given to a list of National Contributions, 1860-76; published by Lieut.-col. De Cress of Bristol, March, 1899.

Blackburn cheque, carried on in 1650, was superseded by Blackburn greys. In 1767, James Hargreaves, of this town, invented the spinning-jenny, for which he was eventually expelled from the county. About 1810 or 1812, the townspeople availed themselves of his discoveries, and engaged largely in the cotton manufacture, now their staple trade. Blackburn murder, see Tricks, July, 1876. In 1864 it was pulled down, and a temporary bridge erected. The foundation of a new five-arched bridge, designed by Mr. Joseph Cubitt, was laid by lord mayor Hale, 20 July, 1865, and the bridge was opened by the queen 6 Nov. 1869. Here the Cornish rebels were defeated and Flammeock's insurrection quelled, 22 June, 1497. The ancient cavern, on the ascent to Blackheath, popularly termed "the retreat of Cade," and of banditti in the time of Cromwell, was rediscovered in 1780. BLACK-MAIL, a compulsory payment for protection of cattle, &c., made in the border counties, was prohibited by Elizabeth in 1601. It was exacted in Scotland from the lowlanders by the highlanders,

BLACK ROD has a gold lion at the top, and is carried by the usher of the order of the knights of the garter (instituted 1349), instead of the mace. He also keeps the door when a chapter of the order is sitting, and during the sessions of parliament attends the house of lords and acts as their messenger to the commons.

BLACK SEA, THE EUXINE (Pontus Euxinus of the ancients), a large internal sea between the S. W. provinces of Russia and Asia Minor, connected with the sea of Azoff by the straits of Yenikalé, and with the sea of Marmora by the channel of Constantinople.

This sea was much frequented by the Greeks and Italians, till chased to all nations by the Turks after the fall of Constantinople in 1453.

The Russians obtained admission by the treaty of Kainardji.

It was partially opened to British and other traders, (since which time the Russians gradually obtained the preponderance).

Entered by the British and French fleets, at the requisition of the Porte, after the destruction of the Turkish fleet at Sinope by the Russians, 30 Nov. 1853. 3 Jan. 1854

A dreadful storm in this sea raged, and caused great loss of life and shipping, and valuable stores for the allied armies. See Russo-Turkish War.

The Black Sea was opened to the commerce of all nations by the treaty of 1856. 12 to 16 Nov. "

The article of the treaty of Paris, 30 March, 1856, by which the sea was opened to the commerce of all nations, and interdicted to any ships of war; and the erection of military maritime arsenals forbidden, was repudiated by a Russian circular, dated 31 (19) Oct. 1870

After some correspondence, the meeting of a conference on the subject, in London, was agreed to by all the powers concerned in the treaty. The conference met in London 17 Jan. 1871, and a treaty was signed by which the neutralization of the sea was abrogated; but it was agreed by a special protocol, that no nation shall liberate itself from the obligations of a treaty without the consent of the others who signed it. 13 March, 1871

BLACK WATCH, armed companies of the loyal clans (Campbells, Monros, &c.) employed to watch the Highlands from about 1725 to 1739, when they were formed into the celebrated 42nd regiment, enrolled as "The Royal Highland Black Watch." Feb. 1874, and in Egypt, 1882-5.

BLACKWATER, BATTLE OF, in Ireland, 14 Aug. 1798, when the Irish chief O'Neil defeated the English under sir Henry Bagnall. Pope Clement VIII. sent O'Neil a consecrated plume, and granted to his followers the same indulgence as to crusaders.

BLANKETEERS. A number of operatives who, on 10 March, 1817, met in St. Peter's field, near Manchester, many of them having blankets, rugs, or great coats rolled up and fastened to their backs. This was termed the Blanket meeting. They proceeded to march towards London, but were dispersed by the magistracy. It is stated that their object was to commence a general insurrection. See Derby. Eventually the ringleaders had an interview with the cabinet ministers, and a better understanding between the working classes and the government ensued.

BLANKETS are said to have been first made at Bristol by Thos. Blanket, in the 14th century. This is doubtful.

BLASPHEMY was punished with death by the law of Moses (Lev. xxiv. 1491 A.C.; and by the code of Justinian, A. D. 529. It is punishable by the civil and canon law of England, regulated by 60 Geo. III. c. 8 (1810). Daniel Isaac Eaton was tried and convicted in London of blasphemy, 6 March, 1812. Robert Taylor, a protestant clergyman, was tried twice for the same crime. He was sentenced to two years' imprisonment, and largely fined, July, 1831. In Dec. 1840, two publishers of blasphemous writings were convicted.

BLASTING GELATINE, (a mixture of nitro-glycerine and gun-cotton), a violent explosive prepared by Alfred Nobel, and modified by professor Abel, 1879.

BLAZONRY. Bearing coats-of-arms was introduced and became hereditary in France and England about 1192, owing to the knights painting their banners with different figures, thereby to distinguish them in the crusades. Dugdale.

BLEACHING was known in Egypt, Syria, India, and Gaul. Stow. An improved process system was adopted by the Dutch, who introduced it into England and Scotland in 1768. There were large bleach-works in Lancashire, Fife, Forfar, and Renfrew, and in the vale of the Lozen, in Dumfriesshire. The application of the gas chlorate to bleaching is due to Berthollet's discovery, about 1785. Its combination with lime (as chloride of lime) was devised by Mr. Tennant, of Glasgow, who took out a patent for the process in 1798, and by his firm it is still extensively manufactured. In 1822 Dr. Ure published an elaborate series of experiments on this substance. A new more rapid process invented by Mr. Jacob Baynes Thompson, tried at Bolton, and reported successful, April, 1884. Improvements made by Mr. William Mather, 1885. In 1860 bleaching and dyeing works were placed under the regulations of the Factories Act.

BLENHEIM (or Plintheim) a village in Bavaria on the left bank of the Danube, near the town of Hochstett, the site of a battle fought 2 Aug. (new style, 13), 1704, between the English and confederates, commanded by the duke of Marlborough, and the French and Bavarians, under marshal Tallard and the elector of Bavaria. The latter were defeated with the loss of about 12,000 killed, and 13,000 prisoners (including Tallard). Bavaria became the prize of the conquerors. The British parliament gave Marlborough the honour of Woodstock and hundred of Wotton, and erected for him the house of Blenheim.*

BLIND. The first public school for the blind was established by Valentine Haüy, at Paris in 1784. The first in England was at Liverpool, in 1791; in Scotland, at Edinburgh, in 1792; and the first in London in 1797. Printing in raised or embossed characters for the use of the blind was begun at Paris by Haüy in 1786. The whole Bible was printed at Glasgow in raised Roman characters about 1843. A sixpenny magazine for the blind, edited by the late rev. W. Taylor, F.R.S., so eminent for his forty years' exertions on behalf of these sufferers, was published in 1855-6. He aided the establishment of a college for the blind of the upper classes at Worcester, in 1866. There is hardly any department of human knowledge in which blind persons have not obtained distinction. Laura Bridgman, born in 1829, became dumb and blind two years after. She was so well taught by Dr. Howe, of Boston, U.S., as to become an able instructor of blind and dumb persons; she died 24 May, 1889. By the census of 1851, there were in Great Britain, 21,487 blind persons; 11,273 males, 10,214 females; about one in 975 blind. The number of the blind in Great Britain has proportionally decreased since 1851, according to the census, 22,800 in 1881. In 1881 about one in 1138 blind. Royal Normal College and Academy of Music for the Blind, established 1872. There are 29 societies for the blind in London (1889).

Royal Commission on the condition of the blind; attended to the deaf and dumb, Jan. 1866.

According to the census of 1851, the number of blind in the United Kingdom was about 25,000, England and Wales 21,487, Scotland 3,131, Ireland 6,372. The royal commission to enquire into their condition was appointed 24 July, 1855, and on the 20th Jan. 1856, additional members were appointed, and its inquiries were extended to the deaf, dumb, and imbeciles in the United Kingdom, Paris, Germany, Switzerland, and Italy. The commission, after 116 sittings, and many visitations and examinations of witnesses, issued their first report July, 1859. The number of the deaf under instruction in the United Kingdom was in 1851 1,300, in 1858 2,178. The commission met with great uncertainty in regard to idiots and imbeciles.

BLINDING by consuming the eyeballs with lime or scalding vinegar, was a punishment inflicted anciently on adulterers, perjurers, and thieves. In the middle ages the penalty was frequently changed from total blindness to a diminution of sight. A whole army of Bulgarians was deprived of sight by the emperor Basil, 104. Several of the eastern emperors had their eyes torn from their heads.

BLISTERS, used by Hippocrates (460-357 B.C.), made, it is said, of cantharides (see cantharides).

BLIZZARD, an old term applied in the Midland counties to the snow-blast, also signifying anything blazing, blinding, or stifling. Of late years violent snow-storms have been termed blizzard in the United States of North America, as well as in Britain. See Storms, 11-13 Jan.; and 11-13 March, 1888, and since.

BLOCKADE is the closing an enemy's ports to all commerce; a practice introduced by the Dutch about 1584. The principle recognized by the European powers is that every blockade, in order to be binding, must be effective. Cadix blockaded 1797-9; the Elbe was blockaded by Great Britain, 1803; the Baltic, by Denmark, 1843-49 and 1864; the gulf of Finland by the Allies, 1854; and the ports of the Southern States of North America by president Lincoln, April 19, 1861. See Orders in Council, and Berlin. Part of the east coast of Africa was blockaded by England and Germany on account of the slave trade; 2 Dec. 1883--1 Oct. 1889: see Zanzibar.

BLOCK BOOKS, see Printing.

BLOCKS employed in the rigging of ships were much improved in their construction by Walter Taylor, about 1781. In 1801, Mark I. Brunel invented a mode of making blocks by machinery, which was put into operation in 1808, and in 1815 was said to have saved the country 20,000 a year.

BLOIS, France, the Roman Blesum. The count Guy II. sold it with his domains to Louis duke of Orleans in 1391, and eventually it accrued to the crown. The states-general were held here 1576 and 1588, on account of the religious wars; and here Henry duke of Guise was assassinated by order of the king, Henry III., 23 Dec. 1588. The empress Maria Louisa retired here in 1814.

BLOOD. The circulation of the blood through the lungs was known to Michael Servetus, a Spanish physician, in 1543. Camalpines published an account of the general circulation, of which he had some confused ideas, improved afterwards by experiments, 1560. Paul of Venice, or Father Paolo (real name Peter Serpi), discovered the valves which serve for the circulation; but the honour of the positive discovery of the circulation belongs to William Harvey, between 1593 and 1628. Arteries.

* On 1 Feb. 1704, a fire broke out at this place, which destroyed the "Trianon Gallery" and the 16-terrace; the latter, a present from Victor Amadeus, king of Sardinia, to John, the great duke of Marlborough. Pictures, statues, and other valuables sold 1857-8.

† Thomas Rickman, the "blind traveller" (born 1766, died 1829), visited almost every place of note in the world. His travels were published in 1825. In April, 1861, a blind electrician, rev. J. Spencer, was elected chaplain to the Marquis's Company, London, and read the service, &c., from embossed books.

Vincent Goussier (blind) was the author of many interesting historical essays. He died in June, 1865. On 17 Feb. 1879, Henry Foxworth, the blind preacher of national assembly at Cambridge, was elected M.P. for London; for Westbury, 1874 and 1880; and was appointed commissioner of the Poor Law, died 4 Nov. 1881. Mr. J. J. Campbell (blind) succeeded Mont Blum in 1860.

A memorial window in the church at Folkestone, his birthplace, was uncovered 9 April, 1874, and a statue at the same place, 6 Aug. 1881.

BARTON BLOOD was prohibited to teach, Gen. ix., to the Jews, Lev. xxiv., &c., and to the Gentile converts by the apostles at an assembly at Jerusalem, A.D. 50, Acts xv.

BLOOD-DRAWING was anciently tried to give vigour to the system. Louis XI. in his last illness, drank the warm blood of infants, in the vain hope of restoring his decayed strength, 1483. Hénauld.

In the 15th century an opinion prevailed that the declining vigour of the aged might be repaired by transfusion into their veins the blood of young persons. It was countenanced in France by the physicians about 1668, and prevailed for many years, till the most fatal effects having ensued, it was suppressed by an edict. "An English physician (Lewer, or Lower) practised in this way; he died in 1691." Freind. It was attempted again in France in 1797, and more recently there, in a few cases, with success; and in England (but the instances are rare) since 1823. Tried at Philadelphia, U. S., April, 1877; in London, unsuccessful, 20 May, 1877.

BLOOD'S CONSPIRACY. Blood, a discarded officer of Oliver Cromwell's household, with his confederates, seized the duke of Ormond in his coach, intending to hang him, and had got him to Tyburn, when he was rescued by his friends, 6 Dec. 1670. Blood afterwards, in the disguise of a clergyman, attempted to steal the royal crown from the Jewel-office in the Tower, 9 May, 1671; yet, notwithstanding these and other offences, he was not only pardoned, but had a pension of 500*l.* per annum settled on him by Charles II. 1671. He died 24 Aug. 1680.

"BLOODY ASSIZES," held by Jeffreys in the west of England, in Aug. 1685, after the defeat of the duke of Monmouth in the battle of Sedgemoor. Upwards of 300 persons were executed after short trials; very many were whipped, imprisoned, and fined; and nearly 1000 were sent as slaves to the American plantations.

BLOOMER COSTUME, see a note to article Dress.

BLOOMSBURY GANG, a cant term applied to an influential political party in the reign of George III., who met at Bloomsbury House, the residence of the duke of Bedford. The marquis of Stafford, the last survivor, died 26 Oct. 1803.

BLOREHEATH (Staffordshire), where, 23 Sept. 1459, the earl of Salisbury and the Yorkists defeated the Lancastrians, whose leader, lord Audley, was slain with many Cheshire gentlemen. A cross commemorates this conflict.

BLOWING-MACHINES, the large cylinders, used in blowing machines, were erected by Mr. Smatton at the Carron iron works, 1760. One equal to the supply of air for forty forge fires was erected at the king's dockyard, Woolwich. The hot-air blast, a most important improvement, causing great economy of fuel, was invented by Mr. James B. Nelson, of Glasgow, and patented in 1828. He died 13 Jan. 1865.

BLOW-PIPE. An Egyptian using one is among the paintings on the tombs at Thebes. It was employed in mineralogy, by Antony Van Swab, a Swede, about 1733, and improved by Wollaston and others. In 1802, professor Robert Haro, of Philadelphia, increased the action of the blow-pipe by the application of oxygen and hydrogen. By the agency of Newman's improved blow-pipe, in 1816, Dr. E. D. Clarke fused the earths, alkalies, metals, &c. Works on the blow-pipe by Platner and Muspratt, 1854; G. Plympton, 1874, and W. A. Ross, 1880-3.

BLUE was the favourite colour of the Scottish covenanter in the 17th century. Blue and orange or yellow, became the whig colours after the revolution in 1688; and were adopted on the cover of the whig periodical, the "Edinburgh Review," first published in 1802. The Prussian blue dye was discovered by Diesbach, at Berlin, in 1710. Fine blues are now obtained from coal-tar; see Acidine. BLUE-COAT SCHOOLS, so called in reference to the costume of the children. The Blue-coat school in Newgate-street, London, was instituted by Edward VI. in 1552; see Christ's Hospital. BLUE-STOCKING, a term applied to literary ladies, was originally conferred on a society comprising both sexes (1760, et seq.). Benjamin Stillingfleet, the naturalist, an active member, wore blue worsted stockings; hence the name. The beautiful Mrs. Jerminham is said to have worn blue stockings at the conversations of Mrs. Montague. Blue Ribbon Army, see Temperance, 1882.

BLUE-BOOKS, reports and other papers printed by order of parliament, are so named on account of their wrappers; 70 vols. were printed for the lords, and 76 vols. for the commons in 1871. The official colour of France is yellow, Spain red, Germany white, Italy green, Portugal white, United States, N. A., green.

BLUMENAU, Lower Austria; on 23 July, 1866, the Austrians in possession of this place were attacked by the Prussians on their march towards Vienna, a severe conflict was interrupted by the news of the armistice agreed to at Nikolsburg; and the same evening Austrians and Prussians bivouacked together.

BOARD OF ADMIRALTY, AGRICULTURE, CONTROL, GREEN-CLOTH, HEALTH, TRADE, &c., see under Admiralty, &c.

BOATS. Flat-bottomed boats brought into use by Barker, a Dutchman, about 1600; see Life-Boat. A mode of building boats by the help of the steam-engine was invented by Mr. Nathan Thompson of New York in 1860, and premises were erected for its application at Bow, near London, in 1861. Charles Clifford's valuable boat-lowering apparatus was invented 1856. See Canal-Boats and Life-Boats.

Boat Voyage. Alfred Johnson, a young man, started from America in the Cerberus, a boat 80 feet long, on 15 June, and landed at Abercastle, Pembrokeshire 21 Aug. 1876. Two young sailors crossed the Atlantic in the City of Bath, a boat 14 feet long; arriving at Falmouth 14 Aug. 1882.

Mr. Terry ferried a boat on the framework of a tricycle, and on it went from London to Dover, crossed the Channel to Calais and proceeded to Paris 7 July, 1883.

Submarine boats, one is said to have been invented about 1578; and one tried in the Thames early in the seventeenth century, and one at Plymouth in 1774. Robert Fulton's experiments in this direction were not accepted (early nineteenth century). Unsuccessful attempts made by several European powers in 1851, and since. Nord's submarine boat first constructed at Stockholm in 1833, to be employed in naval warfare, exhibited at Landskrona in presence of officers sent by all the great powers 23 Sept. 1883; the boat, made of steel, 64 feet long; motive power, steam; crew of 3 or 4 men, breathe for six hours by means of sealed up compressed air; the boat may be raised or sunk at the will of the crew; and by means of torpedoes may cause the destruction of any vessel. The boat was publicly tried in Southampton water, and reported successful.

19-20 Dec. 1889. Lieut. Isaac Peral's submarine boat, travelled for one hour under water near Cadix 7 June; was snatched by the government 13 June 1890.

BOAT-RACES; see Dogget, and University. The London rowing club beat the Atlanta rowing club in a four-oared race on the Thames, 10 June, 1872. Race on the Tyne; championship of the world won by Edward Hanlan of Toronto, 3 April, 1882.

BOCCACCIO'S DECAMERONE, a collection of a hundred stories or novels (many very immoral), severely satirising the clergy, feigned to have been related in ten days, during the plague of Florence in 1348. Boccaccio lived 1313-75. A copy of the first edition (that of Valdarfer, in 1471) was knocked down at the duke of Roxburgh's sale, to the duke of Marlborough, for 2260*l.*, 17 June, 1812. This copy was afterwards sold by public auction, for 875 guineas, 5 June, 1819.

BODLEIAN LIBRARY, Oxford, founded in 1598, and opened in 1602, by sir Tho. Bodley (died, 28 Jan. 1612). It is open to the public, and claims a copy of all works published in this country. In 1868, it contained about 250,000 volumes; in 1885, 434,417 volumes (MSS. 20,598.) For rare works and MSS. it is said to be second only to the Vatican. Mr. Murray's "Annals of the Bodleian Library," published 1868.

BOEOTIA, a division of Greece, north of Attica, known previously as Aonia, Messapia, Hyantia, Ogygia, and Cadmeia. Thebes, the capital, was celebrated for the exploits and misfortunes of its kings and heroes. The term Boeotian was used by the Athenians as a synonym for dullness; but unjustly, since Pindar, Hesiod, Plutarch, Democritus, Epaminondas, and Corinna, were Boeotians. The early history and dates are mythical; see Thebes.

BOERS (peasants), a name given to the Dutch settlers, in South Africa, since the 16th century, who still retain their national character. Discontented with the British rule in the Cape since 1814, large bands of them in 1835-7 broke up or emigrated northwards, and founded the Orange Free State (1853), and the Transvaal Republic (1858), afterwards fighting with the natives. See Transvaal, 1891.

BOGS, probably the remains of forests, covered with peat and loose soil. An act for the drainage of Irish bogs, passed March, 1830. The bog-land of Ireland has been estimated at 3,000,000 acres; that of Scotland at upwards of 2,000,000; and that of England at near 1,000,000 of acres. In Jan. 1849, Mr. Rees Reece took out a patent for certain valuable products from Irish peat. Candles and various other articles produced from peat have been since sold in London. Fuel for railway engines and other purposes was made from peat (April, 1873); and a peat, coal, and charcoal company established.

Much destruction has been caused by the motion of bog. Leland (about 1546) speaks of Chat Moss doing so.

Mischief was done at Enaghmore, Ireland, 3 Jan. 1852; and farms houses and fields near Danmore were covered, Oct. 1873.

BOHEMIA, formerly the Hercynian forest (Bohemum, Teutonic), derives its name from the Boii, a Celtic tribe. It was governed by dukes (Bohemites the first, 891), till Ottocar assumed the title of king, 1198. The kings at first held their territory from the empire: and the crown was elective till it came to the house of Austria, in which it is now hereditary. Prague, the capital, is famous for sieges and battles. Population in 1857, 4,705,525; in 1870, 5,140,544; in 1890, 5,843,250; see Prague. For Bohemians, see Gypsies.

BOHEMIAN BRETHREN, a body of Christians in Bohemia, appear to have separated from the Calixtines (schick see), a branch of the Hussites in 1467. Dupin says "They rejected the sacraments of the church, were governed by simple laws, and held the scriptures for their only rule of faith. They presented a confession of faith to king Ladislaus in 1504 to justify themselves from errors laid to their charge." They appear to have had communication with the Waldenses, but were distinct from them. Luther, in 1533, testifies to their purity of doctrine, and Melancthon commends their discipline. They were dispersed during the religious wars of Germany in the 17th century.

BOHN'S LIBRARIES. Mr. H. G. Bohn began the publication of his "Standard Library" in 1846. This was followed by the classical, antiquarian, scientific and illustrated libraries, above 600 volumes. These were bought by Messrs. Bell and Daldy in 1864, who have added many other volumes. Mr. Bohn died 22 Aug. 1884, aged 90. His pictures and works of art by sale, realised 19,220l. March, 1885.

BOIL, a Celtic people of N. Italy, who emigrate into Italy, and were defeated at the Vadimonium lake, 283 B.C. They were finally subdued by Scipio Nasica, 191 B.C.

BOILERS, STEAM. Many lives have been lost by their explosions. 23 persons were killed at Glasgow iron-works, 5 March, 1879; and 27 killed at the Birchill ironworks, near Walsall, 15 May, 1880. Boilers Explosion Act, passed 1882, amended in 1890.

By the explosion of a defective neglected boiler at Mr. Mathison's bedding manufactory, Rhodeswell Road, Stenney, 4 men were killed and 17 persons injured, 31 May, 1886.

The annual average of explosions in six years ending June, 1888, was 47; deaths 30.
 1871-1890, 1,005 persons killed.

BOILING OF LIQUIDS. Dr. Hooke, about 1683, ascertained that liquids were not increased in heat after they had once begun to boil, and that a fierce fire only made them boil more rapidly. The following boiling points have been stated—

Ether	93° Fahr.	Phosphorus	554° Fahr.
Alcohol	173 "	Oil of turpentine	312 "
Water	212 "	" "	321 "
Nitric acid	187 "	Mercury	662 "
Sulphuric acid	600 "

BOILING TO DEATH, made a capital punishment in England, by stat. 22 Hen. VIII., 1531 (repealed in 1547). This act was occasioned by seventeen persons having been poisoned by Richard Roese, otherwise Coke, the bishop of Rochester's cook, two of whom died. Margaret Davy, a young woman, suffered in the same manner for a similar crime, 28 March, 1542. Stow.

BOIS-LE-DUC, Dutch Brabant, the site of a battle between the British and the French republican army, in which the British were defeated, and forced to abandon their position and retreat to Schynel, 14 Sept. 1794. BON MARCHÉ (cheap). Name given by some shopkeepers in London to their mode of selling goods to the poor at very small profits. The system was originated at Paris by M<sup>lle</sup>. Boucault, originally a shop-girl; about 1842, she, with her husband, opened a shop in the time of deep distress for meeting the wants of the poorest people. In time her business greatly increased with enlarged premises, and she adopted the system of the division of profits with her employed. She realised a large fortune, and became a magnificent benefactress of the city. She died in Dec. 1887, worth it is said four million pounds sterling. M. BOOK (Anglo-Saxon, booc; German, buch). Books were originally made of boards, or the inner bark of trees: afterwards of skins and parchment. Papyrus, an indigenous plant, was adopted in Egypt. Books with leaves of vellum were invented by Attalus, king of Pergamus, about 198 B.C., at which time books were in volumes or rolls. The MSS. in Herculaneum consist of papyrus, rolled and charred and matted together by the fire, and are about nine inches long, and one, two, or three inches in diameter, each being a separate treatise. The most ancient books are the Pentateuch of Moses and the poems of Homer and Hesiod. The first PRINTED BOOKS (see Printing) were printed on one side only, the leaves being pasted back to back. See Libraries.

EXILES OF BOOKS.—Jerome (who died 420) states that he had ruined himself by buying a 1000 of the works of Origen. A large estate was given by Alfred for a book on cosmography, about 872. The Roman de Rose was sold for about 30s. and a usually was exchanged for 200 sheep and five quarters of wheat. Books frequently fetched double or treble their weight in gold. They sold at prices varying from 20s. to 40s. each in 1400. A copy of Machin's Bible, ornamented by Mr. Tottin, was declared worth 300 guineas. Butler. A yet more superb copy was insured in a London office for 3000l. See Boccaccio's Decamerone.

PRINTER by Bernardine di Novara, 1488, at the Sunderland sale bought by E. Quirk for 3000l., 21 Nov. 1887; he was bought by Sir John Thorne's Master's Bible, 3000l. 13 Dec.; and his "Pauline Canon," 19 Nov. 1884.

A Latin Psalter was bound in oak boards, 9th century.

A MS. copy of the four Evangelists, the book on which our kings from Henry I. to Edward VI. took their coronation oath, was bound in oaken boards, nearly as last cited.

Vellum was the covering in the 14th century; and silk soon after. Vellum was introduced early in the 15th century; it was stamped and ornamented about 1100.

Leather came into use about the same time. The rolling machine, invented by Mr. Wm. Burr, was substituted for the beating-hammer, and gas stoves began to take the place of the charcoal fires used to heat the glider's finishing tools, about 1830.

Cloth binding superseded the common boards generally about 1831.

Caoutchouc or India-rubber books to account-books and large volumes were introduced in 1841.

The use of thin metal plates instead of paste-board introduced by 1856.

BOOK-HAWKING SOCIETIES (already in Scotland) began in England in 1851 by archdeacon Wigram (afterwards bishop of Rochester). The hawkers vend moral and religious books in a similar manner to the French colporteurs.

BOOK-KEEPING. The system by double-entry, called originally Italian book-keeping, was taken from the course of algebra published by Burgo, in the 16th century, at Venice. John Gough, a printer, published a treatise "on the keeping of the famous reconyngs . . . Debitor and Creditor," London, 1543. This is our earliest work on book-keeping. James Peete published his Book-keeping in 1569. John Mellis published "A Brief Instruction and Manner how to Keepe Bookes of Accompts" in 1588. Improved systems were published by Benjamin Booth in 1789 and by Edw. Thos. Jones in 1821 and 1831.

BOOKSELLERS, at first migratory like hawkers, became known as stationarii, from their practice of having booths or stalls at the corners of streets and in markets. They were long subject to vexatious restrictions, from which they were freed in 1758.

The earliest bookseller's catalogue is said to be that published by Andrew Maunsell, of Louthbury, dedicated to Queen Elizabeth, 1595.

"Booksellers' Provident Institution" founded 1837; "Retreat," Abbott's Langley, Berks, 1843.

The Book-seller, a monthly newspaper of British and foreign literature, published in 1858; with it was incorporated Reid's Literary Advertiser, established in 1802.

BOOKSELLERS' ASSOCIATION. The chief publishers in London formed themselves into an association and fixed the amount of discount to be allowed, 29 Dec. 1829, and for some years restricted the retail booksellers from selling copies of works under the full publishing price. A dispute arose as to the right of the latter to dispose of books which had become theirs by purchase, at such less profit as they might deem sufficiently remunerative. The dispute was referred to lord chief justice Campbell, at Stratheden House, 14 April, 1852. His lordship gave judgment against the association, which led to its dissolution, 19 May following. The London Booksellers' society was formed in 1890; the inaugural dinner took place 2 Oct. 1890.

BOOTHIA FELIX, a large peninsula, N.W. point of America, discovered by Sir John Ross in 1830, and named after Sir Felix Booth, who had Authors on botany became numerous at the close of the 15th century. Fuchsius, Bock, Bauhin, Casalpini, and others, wrote between 1535 and 1600. The system and arrangement of the great Linnæus was made known about 1735; and Jussieu's system, founded on Tournefort's, and called "the natural system," in 1753. At Linnæus's death, 1778, the species of plants actually described amounted in number to 11,800. The number of species now recorded cannot fall short of 100,000. J. C. Loudon's "Encyclopædia of Plants," a most comprehensive work, first appeared in 1830. De Candolle's "Prodromus Systematis Naturalis Regni Vegetabilis" (of which Vol. I. appeared in 1818), was completed in 1876. An International Botanical congress was opened in London, 23 May, 1866, professor A. De Candolle president; another at Amsterdam, 13 April, 1877. burnt Corinth to the ground, 146 A.C., he found immense riches, and during the conflagration, it is said, all the metals in the city melted, and running together, formed the valuable composition described as Christianian Brass. In 1856 and 1857 Dr. Dauglish patented a mode of making "aerated bread," in which carbonic acid gas is combined with water and mixed with the flour, and which is said to possess the advantages of cleanliness, rapidity, and uniformity. In 1862 a company was formed to encourage Stevens' bread-making machinery. An act for regulating bakehouses was passed in July, 1863. A strike of the journeyman bakers of the metropolis, 13 Sept., was settled by concessions, 9 Oct. 1872. A Bread Reform League formed; meeting at the Mansion House, London, 17 Dec. 1880. Bread was directed to be sold by weight in London in 1822, the statute "Assize Paris" was repealed in 1824, and the sale of bread throughout the country was regulated in 1836.

In France the old laws were superseded, and a law enabling the municipalities to fix the price of bread (still unrepealed) was passed, July 1791.

BREAD-FRUIT TREE. a native of the South Sea islands. A vessel under captain Bligh was fitted out to convey some of these trees to various British colonies in 1789 (see Bounty), and again in 1791. The number taken on board at Otaheite was 1151. Some were left at St. Helena, 352 at Jamaica, and five were reserved for Kew Gardens, 1793. The tree was successfully cultivated in French Guiana, 1802.

The architects were Mr. John Rennie and his son Sir John. The first stone of the Lighthouse on its western extremity was laid 1 Feb. 1811. Breakwaters have been constructed at Holyhead, Portland, Dover, Middlesborough, &c. A great barrier, about two-thirds of a mile long, erected to defend the Inverclyde iron mines near the Daddon estuary, was completed by Messrs. Lucas & Aird, Sir John Coode being the engineer, Oct. 1890.

A translation of them was proposed in 1852, and a commission appointed. The publication of the "Ancient Laws of Ireland" by the government, began 1865.

BREITENFELD, see Leipzig.

BREMEN (N. Germany), said to have been founded in 788, and long an archbishopric, and one of the leading towns of the Hanseatic League, was allowed a seat and a vote in the college of imperial cities in 1640. In 1648 it was secularised and erected into a duchy and held by Sweden till 1712, when it was taken possession of by Denmark, by whom it was sold to Hanover in 1731. It was taken by the French in 1757; who were expelled by the Hanoverians in 1758. England maintained a large blockading squadron off the harbour from 1793 to 1815; but with little injury to France. It is now a chief naval station, and is considered impregnable. The British fleet visited Brest, Aug. 1865.

first called the coches, and afterwards the brewery; close into use among the ecclesiastical orders about 1080; and was reformed by the councils of Trent and Cologne, and by Pius V., Urban VIII., and other popes. The quality of type in which this brewery was first printed is said to have given the name to the printing type called brewer.

BREWERS are traced to Egypt. Brewing was known to our Anglo-Saxon ancestors. Theophil. "One William Merle, a rich maltman or brewer, of Dunstable, had two horses all trapped with gold, 1214." Slooe. In Oct. 1851, there were 2305 licensed brewers in England, 146 in Scotland, and 97 in Ireland; total, 2548: these are exclusive of retail and intermediate brewers. There were 40,418 licensed brewers in the United Kingdom in 1855; the revenue from whom to the state was in that year £1,030,000. In 1858 in England there were 205 great brewers; see Ala, Porter, and Tannum.

The Devil's bridge in the Canton of Uri was built on two high rocks; and many stones have been invented to account for it. At Schaffhausen an extraordinary bridge was built over the Rhine, 400 feet wide: there was a pier in the middle of the river, but it is doubtful whether the bridge rested upon it; a man of the lightest weight felt the bridge totter under him, yet waggons heavily laden passed over without danger. The bridge was destroyed by the French in 1799. See Hammer-smith, London, Waterloo, Blackfriars, Southwark, North, Tay, Tower, and other bridges, in separate articles. The chief Thames bridges were freed from toll 24 May, 1879, and 26 June, 1880.

BRITISH COLUMBIA (N. America). In June, 1858, news came to California that in April gold had been found in abundance on the mountains of North America, a little to the north and east of Vancouver's Island. A great influx of gold-diggers (in a few weeks above 50,000) from all parts was the consequence; and Mr. Douglas, governor of Vancouver's Island, evinced much ability in preserving order. The territory with adjacent islands was made a British colony with the above title, and placed under Mr. Douglas. The colony was nominated and the government settled by 21 & 22 Vict. c. 99 (Aug. 1858), and a bishop nominated in 1859. Visited by the marquis of Lorne and princess Louise, 30 Sept. 1882.—For a dispute in July, 1859, see United States. Vancouver's Island was incorporated with the colony in 1866, and Victoria was made the capital, 24 May, 1868. Recent Lieut.-governors: Frederick Seymour, 1864; Anthony Musgrave, 1869; J. W. Trutch, 1871; C. F. Cornwall; Hugh Nelson, Feb. 1892. The colony was annexed to Canada, 1871. Population, 1891, 92,767. BRITISH INSTITUTION (for the encouragement of British artists, well-known, founded in 1805) opened 18 Jan. 1806, on a plan formed by Sir Thomas Bernard. In the gallery (erected by alderman Boydell, to exhibit the paintings executed for his edition of Shakespeare), were from time to time exhibited pictures by the old masters, deceased British artists and others, till 1867, when the lease of the premises expired. The fund of 16,200*l.* in the hands of Earl Powis and other trustees, to be devoted to the promotion of the fine arts, had accumulated to 23,610*l.* in 1884. Still unappropriated, Nov. 1886. Various proposals for using the money have been negatived by the trustees.

BRITISH LEGION, raised by Lord John Hay, col. De Lacy Evans, and others to assist queen Isabella of Spain against the Carlists in 1835, defeated them at Hernani, 5 May, 1836, and at St. Sebastian's, 1 Oct.

BRUNSWICK, HOUSE OF. The duchy of Brunswick, in Lower Saxony, was conquered by Charlemagne, and governed afterwards by counts and dukes. Albert-Azzo II. marquis of Italy and lord of Este, died in 1097, and left by his wife Cunegonde (the heiress of Guelf duke of Carinthia in Bavaria), a son, Guelf, who was invited into Germany by Imiza, his mother-in-law, and invested with all the possessions of his wife's step-father, Guelf of Bavaria; see Bavaria. His descendant, Henry the Lion, married Maud, daughter of Henry II. of England, and was the founder of the Brunswick family. His dominions were very extensive; but having refused to assist the emperor Frederick Barbarossa in a war against pope Alexander III., through the emperor's resentment he was proscribed at the diet at Wurtzburg, in 1180. The duchy of Bavaria was given to Otho of Wittelsbach, ancestor of the family of Bavaria; the duchy of Saxony to Bernard Assaniya, founder of the house of Anhalt; and his other territories to different persons. On this, he retired to England; but at the intercession of our Henry II. Brunswick and Lüneburg were restored to him. The house of Brunswick in 1409 divided into several branches. BUCCANEERS, cruel piratical adventurers, French, English, and Dutch, who commenced their depredations on the Spaniards of America soon after the latter had taken possession of that continent and the West Indies. Their numbers were much increased by a twelve years' truce between the Spaniards and Dutch in 1609, when many of the discharged sailors joined the buccaners. The first levy of ship-money in England in 1635 was to defray the expense of chasing these pirates. The principal commanders of the first buccaners were Montbar, Lolonois, Basco, and Morgan. Van Horn, of Ostend, captured Vera Cruz, 1603; Morgan took Panama, 1670; Grammont seized Campeachy, 1685; and Pointis took Carthage, 1697; all gained enormous booty. BUCKINGHAM PALACE, the London residence of the sovereign. Old Buckingham-house was built on the "Mulberry-garden," by John Sheffield, duke of Buckingham, in 1703. In 1761 it was bought by George III., who in 1775 settled it on his queen, Charlotte. She made it her town residence; and here all her children, except the eldest, were born. Here were married the duke of York and princess Frederica of Prussia, in 1791; the duke of Gloucester and princess Mary, 1816; the prince of Hesse-Homburg and princess Elizabeth, 1818; and the duke of Cambridge and princess of Hesse the same year. The house was pulled down in 1825, and the present palace commenced on its site. After an expenditure of nearly a million sterling, it was completed, and occupied by queen Victoria, 13 July, 1837. Further improvements were made in 1853. The marble arch, taken down from the exterior of this palace, was re-erected at Cumberland-gate, Hyde-park, 29 March, 1851.

It was taken by Charlemagne in 799, and sacked by Solymán II. after the battle of Mohatz, when the Hungarian king, Louis, was killed, and 200,000 of his subjects carried away captive, 1526. Buda was sacked a second time, when the inhabitants were put to the sword, and Hungary was annexed to the Ottoman empire, 1541. Retaken by the Imperialists, under the duke of Lorraine, and the Mahometans delivered up to the fury of the soldiers, 1686. It suffered much in 1848, was entered without resistance by the Austrians, 5 Jan. 1849, stormed, 20 May, given up by Russians to Austrians, July, 1849. Here the emperor Francis Joseph was crowned king of Hungary, 8 June, 1867, see Hungary. Buda-Pesth constituted the capital of Hungary, Nov. 1873; equal to Vienna, June, 1892. BUDDHISM, the chief religion in Asia beyond the Ganges, and in China, Japan, and Ceylon, originated with Gautama Siddhartha, the Sakya Muni, generally termed Buddha, or "the enlightened," a prince of Kapilavastu in Central India, said to have been born 623, and to have died 543 B.C.

In July, 594 B.C., disgusted with the behaviour of the Brahmins, he retired from the world for a time, and on coming forth, preached a new religion so wisely, so fully, that it predominated in India till the 16th century, A.D.

Buddhism teaches strict morality, it forbids killing, stealing, adultery, lying, and drunkenness, and ever shade of these vices, and does lares charity or love to be the source of all virtues. Some writers assert that Buddhism includes belief in the transmigration of souls, and the absorption of good souls into God himself, from whom they have emanated, others reckon annihilation or eternal sleep (the Nirvana) amongst Buddhist beliefs.

A form of Buddhism, termed the religion of Foh, exists in China, besides the system of Confucius and Lao-tse. It is said to have been introduced in the reign of Ming ti, A.D. 685.

"La Bouddha et ses Religions," by M. J. R. St. Hilaire was published in 1860. Mr. T. Rhys Davids' "Buddhism," in 1878.

BUDE LIGHT (so named from Bude in Cornwall, the residence of Mr. (aft. Sir) Goldsworthy Gurney, its inventor), consists of two or more connostrict argand gas-burners, one rising above another, which produce a most brilliant flame, like the petals of a rose. The illuminating power was increased by subjecting manganese, &c., to the action of the flame, in order to produce oxygen and hydrogen gas. This light was patented 1839 and 1841.

The budgets of Sir E. Peel in 1842 (including the income-tax) and 1846 (free trade), and of Mr. Gladstone in BUFFALO, a city, in New York state, founded in 1801; incorporated 1832; burned by the British during the war, 1813. Population, 1832, 15,000; 1890, 255,664.

BUFFOONS were originally mountebanks in the Roman theatres. Their shows were discouraged by Diocletian, and abolished by Trajan, 98; see Jesters.

BUILDING. In early times men dwelt in caves; wood and clay were the first building materials. Building with stone was early among the Syrians. In Ireland a castle was built of stone at Tadm by the king of Connaught, in 1161; and it was "so new and uncommon as to be called the Wonderful Castle." Building with brick was introduced by the Romans into their provinces. Alfred encouraged it in England in 886. It was adopted by the earl of Arundel, about 1598, London being then almost wholly built of wood, see Architecture.

Building acts were passed by Elizabeth in 1562, 1580, and 1592, and by Charles II. in 1667. Recent acts are very numerous. The Building Act for the Metropolis, 7 & 8 Vict. c. 54 (1844), was amended in 1855, 1860, 1866, 1871, 1878, and 1882. Building societies, formed to enable a person to purchase a house by paying money periodically to a society for a certain number of years, instead of paying rent to a landlord, began about 1830, when an act was passed for their regulation. Their nature and objects having been considerably changed, a new act was passed 30 July, 1874. Building Societies in 1884, 2,220, with an asserted capital of 48,000,000.

At the end of 1887 the number of building societies incorporated was 2,058; 1890, 2,331. Annual meeting of the Building Societies Association, 3 Feb. 1892.

BULGARIA, the ancient Moravia Inferior, a principal tributary to Turkey. The Bulgarians were a Slavonian tribe, who harassed the Eastern empire and Italy from 499 to 678, when they established a kingdom. They defeated Justinian II., 687; but were subdued, after several conflicts, by the emperor Basil, in 1018. After defeating them in 1014, and taking 15,000 Bulgarian prisoners, he caused their eyes to be put out, leaving one eye only to every hundredth man, to enable him to conduct his countrymen home. The kingdom was re-established in 1185; but after several changes was conquered by Bajazet and annexed to the Ottoman empire, 1396. Bulgaria was a chief site of the Russo-Turkish war (which see), 1877-8. Population of Bulgaria and Eastern Roumelia, 3,154,375 in 1898. Capital, Sofia (which see).

BULL, or BULLOCK OF THE POPE. The bulls is properly the seal, either of gold, silver, lead, or wax. On one side are the hands of Peter and Paul; and on the other the name of the pope, and year of his pontificate. A bull against heresy was issued by Gregory IX. in 1231. Pius V. published a bull against Elizabeth, 25 April, 1570; in 1571 bulls were published to be promulgated in England. The bull Unigenitus (beginning with this word) against the Jansenists was issued by Clement XI. 1713; confirmed by Benedict XIII. 1725. The Golden he distinguished himself as leader of a volunteer band in the Franco-German war, was wounded by prince Alexander and was kindly submitted to prince Ferdinand.

Bull of the emperor Charles IV., so called from its golden seal, was made the fundamental law of the German empire, at the diet of Nuremberg, 1356; letter denouncing modern errors, 8 Dec. 1864; see

BULL-BAITING or BULL-FIGHTING, was an amusement at Stamford in the reign of John, 1209; and at Tutbury, 1374. In the Sports of England, we read of the "Ranter herce hunts, when foaming bears fought for their heads, and trusty bulls and huge bears were baited with dogs;" and near the Creek, London, was the Paria, or Bear Garden, so celebrated in the time of Elizabeth for the exhibition of bear-baiting, then a fashionable amusement. A bill to abolish bull-baiting was thrown out in the commons, chiefly through the influence of Mr. William Windham, who made a speech in favour of the custom, 21 May, 1802. It was made illegal in 1835; see Cruelty to Animals. Bull-fights were introduced into Spain about 1260:
 abolished there, "except for pious and patriotic purposes," in 1784. Bull-fights are very common in Spain. A bull fight at Lisbon, attended by 10,000 spectators, on Sunday, 14 June, 1840; one took place at Harre, 5 July, 1868. Somewhat theatrical fights with Spanish bulls, at the Agricultural Hall, London, were stopped 28 March, 1870, for cruelty.
 At a bull-fight at Marseilles about 17 persons were killed, and 230 injured, by the fall of wooden stands, Sunday, 12 Aug. 1881. A bull-fight at Nîmes (since prohibited), 12 June, 1884.

 ones are mentioned in the Psalter, 1550. London bullets were made before the close of the 16th century. The conoidal cup rifle-ball was invented by capt. Minie, about 1833; a modification of this (conoidal but without cup), by Mr. Pritchett (1853), is used with the Enfield rifle. Other bullets have been since devised.

BULLION, uncoined gold and silver. The "Bullion Report" of a parliamentary committee in 1810, principally guided by Mr. Horner and Mr.
 (afterwards sir R.) Peel, established the conclusion, that paper money is always liable to be over-issued, and consequently depreciated, unless it be at all times immediately convertible into gold. This principle has been adopted in British monetary arrangements, see Bank of England.

BULWER-CLAYTON TREATY, concluded 19 April, ratified 4 July, 1850, by which Sir Henry Lytton Bulwer for the British, and Mr. Clayton for the American government, declared that neither should obtain exclusive control over the proposed ship canal through Central America, or erect any fortification on any part of the country. Disputes afterwards arose with respect to this treaty, and the connection of Great Britain with the Mosquito territory (which see), which were settled in 1857.

Its abrogation was proposed by the Americans in 1880, on account of De Lesseps' plan for a canal in Central America.

Ralph Farnham, who was present at the battle, died on 28 Dec. 1860, aged 104½ years. He was introduced to this prince of Wales when in America. Centenary of the battle celebrated June, 1875.

This story was set aside by the solemn declarations of lord Cowper and lord Stafford. The list of this club was published in the Weekly Journal, printed in Whitechapel; but when Read, the printer, was ordered to appear at the bar of the house, he absconded. March, 1722. Salmon.

BURGUNDY, a large province in France, derives its name from the Burgundians, a Gothic tribe who overran Gaul in 275, and were driven out by the emperor Probus; they returned in 287, and were defeated by Maximian. In 413 they established a kingdom, comprising the present Burgundy, large parts of Switzerland, with Alsace, Savoy, Provence, &c. Gondiclar, their leader, the first king. It was conquered by the Franks, 531.—The second kingdom, consisting of a part of the first, began with Gontran, son of Clovis I. of France, in 561. The kingdom of Arles, Provence, and Transjurane Burgundy, were formed out of the old kingdom.—DUCRY. In 877 Charles the Bald made his brother-in-law Richard the first duke of Burgundy. In 938, Hugh the Great, count of Paris, founder of the house of Capet, obtained the duchy. His descendant, Henry, on becoming king of France, conferred it on his brother Robert, in whose family it remained till the death of Philippe de Bourges, without issue, in 1361. In 1363, king John of France made his fourth son, Philip, duke; see Austria and Germany.

BURNETT PRIZES, to be awarded every

40 years to the authors of the two best essays on "The evidence that there is a Being all powerful, wise, and good, by whom everything exists, &c.," were founded by Mr. Burnett, a Scottish gentleman, who died 1784, bequeathing moneys for the purpose. Various amounts have been paid to Dr.
W. L. Brown, to rev. J. B. Sumner, afterwards archbishop of Canterbury, 1815; to rev. R. A.
Thompson, and to Dr. J. Tulloch, 1855; Prof.
G. G. Stokes, 1885. The establishment of a Burnett lectureship in Aberdeen by the trustees (the lecturer to be chosen in 1883) was sanctioned Aug.
1880. Prof. W. Robertson Smith's lectures on the "Religion of the Semites," were published in 1889.

Romans, Jews, and other nations, and was counte-persons have been burned alive as heretics. Sir bers were burned; see Protestants. Elizabeth Gaunt, an Anabaptist, was burnt at Tyburn for treason (concealing rebels under Monmouth), 23

Oct. 1658.

BURNING THE DEAD was practised

among the Greeks and Romans, and Homer gives descriptions. It was very general about 1225 A.C., and was revived by Sylla about 78 A.C. It is still practised in parts of the East Indies, and has been advocated in this country by the eminent surgeon, sir Henry Thompson, and others, 1873; see Syllus,

BURNING-GLASS AND CONCAVE MIRRORS. Their power was known to Archimedes, and it is mythically stated that by their aid he burnt a fleet in the harbour of Syracuse, 214 B.C. Their powers were increased by Sottalla; Tschirnhausen, 1680; Buffon, 1747; and Parker and others more recently. The following experiments were made about 1800, with Mr. Parker's lens or burning mirror, which cost 700*l.*, and is said to have been the largest ever made. It was sold to capt. Mackenzie, who took it to China, and left it at Peking.

It was retaken by the duke of Guise in the reign of Mary, 7 Jan 1558, and its loss so deeply touched the queen's heart, as to cause some to say it occasioned her death, which occurred soon afterwards, 17 Nov same year. "When I am dead, said the queen, 'Calais will be found written on my heart.' It was taken by the Spaniards, April 1596 restored, 1598. CALCULATING MACHINES To avoid errors in computing and printing logarithms and tables of figures, machines to calculate and print have been devised. Pascal when nineteen years of age, invented one about 1650. The construction of Mr C Babbage's differential machine was commenced at the expense of government in 1823, and continued till 1833 when the work was suspended after an expenditure of 17,000/. The portion completed was placed in the library of King's College London, it is now at South Kensington. Professor Clifford, in his lecture at the Royal Institution, 24 May 1872 stated that Babbage expended 20,000/ upon his machine, and that the analytical machine was nearly finished and would eventually be much used. 'Babbage's Calculating Engine' a Collection of Papers relating to them was published by his son, Gen Babbage in 1889. C Babbage died 1871, aged 78. In 1847, Messrs L and G Schultze, two Prussian engineers, published in London specimen tables calculated and printed by machinery constructed between 1837 and 1843 after a study of the account of Mr Babbage's machine. Messrs Schultze brought their machine to England in 1854. It was bought for 1000/ by Mr J F Rathbone, an American merchant, to be presented to Dudley observatory in his own town Albany. In 1847 Messrs Schultze were engaged to make one for the British government, which was completed. Mr Wiberg's machine, exhibited at Paris, Feb 1863, was much commended. Tables constructed by means of Schultze's machine, and edited by Dr W Farr were published by the government in 1864. The autometer, patented by M Thomas (de Colmar) in 1822 (?), exhibited at the International exhibitions, 1851 and 1862, was said to be in use in assurance offices. Geo B Grant described a simpler machine in the 'American Journal of Science, Oct 1874. Other machines have been constructed since.

CALEDONIA the Roman name for part of Scotland north of the wall of Antoninus so termed by Iacutus, who died 99. Venerable Bede says that it retained this name until 258, when it was invaded by a tribe from Ireland, and called Scotia. The ancient inhabitants appear to have been the Caledonians and Picts, tribes of the Celts, who passed over from the opposite coast of Gaul. About the beginning of the 4th century of the Christian era the Romans retired (as stated by some authorities) by the beautiful river of the Picts into the north, settling in the Lowlands and giving their name to the whole country, see Scotland.

A sum exceeding a million sterling was granted by parliament from time to time; and safe navigation for ships was opened 1 Nov. 1812. It has not been successful commercially. CALENDAR, see Jewish Era and Calendar. The Roman calendar was introduced by Romulus, who divided the year into ten months, comprising 304 days, 738 a.c. This year was of fifty days' less duration than the lunar year, and of sixty-one less than the solar year, and its commencement did not correspond with any fixed season. Numa Pompilius, 713 B.C., added two months, and Julius Caesar, 45 B.C., to make it more correct, fixed the solar year at 365 days 6 hours, every fourth year being bissextile or leap-year, see Leap-year. This calendar was defective, as the solar year consists of 365 days, 5 hours, 49 minutes, and not of 365 days 6 hours. This being still erroneous Augustus Caesar reformed the calendar still further, but not perfectly, a.c. 8, and the difference, in the 16th century amounted to 10 entire days, the vernal equinox falling on 11th instead of 21st March. To obviate this error, pope Gregory XIII. ordained, in 1582, that that year should consist of 355 days only (5 Oct. became 15 Oct.), and to prevent further irregularity, it was determined that a year ending a century should not be bissextile, with the exception of that ending each fourth century, thus 1700 and 1800 have not been bissextile, nor will 1900 be so, but the year 2000 will be a leap-year. In this manner three days are retrofitted in 400 years, because the lapse of eleven minutes makes three days in about that period. The year of the calendar is thus made as nearly as possible to correspond with the true solar year, and future errors of chronology are avoided. See New Style and French Revolutionary Calendar.

Calicoes were prohibited to be printed or worn in 1700, and again in 1721, a penalty of 5l. was laid on the wearer, and 50s. on the seller of calico. In 1831, by the sanction of Mr. Peabody Thompson, afterwards lord Sydenham, and others, the consolidated duty of 31d. on the square yard of printed calico was taken off. Since 1834, the manufacture has been greatly increased by the applications of anemose cylinders for printing, and now engraved by galvanism, and many new dyes have been introduced by the discoveries of Liebig, Hofmann, Purkin, &c., see Cotton and Dyeing. John Marcar, a great improver of calico-printing, died 30 Nov. 1866.

Adopting the reformed doctrines he fled to Angoulême, where he composed his Institution Chrétienne Religieuse in 1533, published in 1536. He retired to Basle, and settled in Geneva, where he died, 27 May, 1564. He was instrumental in burning servants for denying the Trinity in 1553. A formal separation between the Calvinists and Lutherans took place after the conference of Pessy in 1561, where the former expressly rejected the tenth and other articles of the confession of Augsburg, and took the name of Calvinists. In France (see Huguenots) they took up arms against their persecutors Henry II., originally a Calvinist, on becoming king, secured their liberty by the Edict of Nantes in 1598 (which see). It is said that there were 27 hostels in 1250. The university was incorporated in 1571, and sent two members to parliament in 1603. University tests act passed, 16 June, 1870. CAMERONIANS, a name frequently given to the Reformed Presbyterian church of Scotland, the descendants of the covenanters of the 17th century, the established church, 1638-50.* Charles II. signed the League and Covenant in 1650, in hopes of recovering his kingdom, but renounced it in 1661.

* They were frequently called hill-men or mountain men, and society people (from the places and modes of worship to which they were frequently reduced), and McMillantees, from John McMillan, their first minister, after their secession from the church of Scotland on account of its subservience to the English government, and its declining from its original rigid principles. They assumed the name of the "Reformed Presbyterian Church," on May 4, 1849, and soon after united with the Free Church of Scotland.

and revived episcopacy. A revolt ensued in 1666, when many covenanters were slain in battle (in the Pentland hills, &c.), and many refusing to take the oaths required, and declining to accept the king's indulgence, died on the scaffold, after undergoing cruel tortures. The name Cameronian is derived from Richard Cameron, one of their ministers, who was killed in a skirmish, in 1680. On 22 June in that year he and others issued at Sanguhar a declaration for religious liberty. The bi-centenary was kept in 1880. In 1689 they raised a body of soldiers to support William III., who enrolled them under the command of lord Angus, as the 26th regiment, since so famous. In 1712 they renewed their public covenants, and are described in one of their tracts as "the suffering anti-popish, and anti-prolatical, anti-erastian, true presbyterian church of Scotland." They have now between thirty and forty congregations in Scotland.—The 79th regiment (Cameron Highlanders), raised in 1793 by Allan Cameron, has no connection with the Cameronians.

CAMISARDS (from chemise, Latin camisia, a shirt, which they frequently wore over their dress in night attacks), a name given to the French Protestants in the neighbourhood of the Cévennes (mountain chains in S. France), who after enduring much severe persecution in consequence of the revocation of the edict of Nantes, 22 Oct. 1685, took up arms in July, 1702, to rescue some imprisoned brethren. They revenged the cruelties of their enemies, and maintained an obstinate resistance against the royalist armies commanded by marshal Montreuil, and other distinguished generals, till 1705, when the insurrection was suppressed by marshal Villars. After futile conciliatory efforts, several of the heroic leaders suffered death rather than surrender. Cavalier, an able general, unable to carry out a treaty made with Villars, seceded in 1704, entered the British service, and died governor of Jersey, 1740.

BRITISH CANALS.

The first was by Henry I., when the Trent was joined to the Witham, 1134.

Francis Mathew in 1656, and Andrew Yarranton in 1677, in vain strongly urged improvement in internal navigation.

In England there are said to be 2800 miles of canals, and 5000 miles of rivers, taking the length of those only that are navigable—total, 5300 miles. (Mr. Porter, in 1851, says 4000 miles.)

In Ireland there are 300 miles of canals; 150 of navigable rivers, and 60 miles of the Shannon, navigable below Limerick; in all, 550 miles William.

The prosperity of canals, for a time largely checked by the formation of railways, is now greatly revived; and railways are connected with them (1878-1885).

CANDLEMAS DAY, 2 Feb. is kept in the church in memory of the purification of the Virgin, who presented the infant Jesus in the Temple. From the number of candles lit (it is said in memory of Simeon's song, Luke ii. 32, "a light to lighten the Gentiles," &c.), this festival was called Candlemas, as well as the Purification. Its origin is ascribed by Bede to pope Gelasius in the 5th century. The practice of lighting the churches was forbidden by order of council, 2 Edw. VI. 1548; but is still continued in the church of Rome. Candlemas is a Scotch quarter-day.

CANDLES. The Roman candles were composed of string surrounded by wax, or dipped in pitch. Splinters of wood fattened were used for light among the lower classes in England, about 1300. Wax candles were little used, and dipped candles were usually burnt. The Wax Chandlers' company was incorporated 1483. Mould candles are said to be the invention of the sieur Le Bros, of Paris. Spermaeeti candles are of modern manufacture. The Chinese make candles from wax obtained from the candleberry-tree (myrica cerifera). The duty upon candles made in England, imposed in 1709, amounted to about 500,000*l.* annually when it was repealed in 1831. Very great improvements in the manufacture of candles are due to the researches on oils and fats, carried on by "the father of the fatty acids," Chevreul, since 1811, and published in 1823. He died 9 April, 1839, aged 102. At Price's manufactory at Lambeth, the principles involved in many patents are carried into execution; including those of Gwynne (1840), Jones and Price (1842), and Wilson in 1844, for candles which require no snuffing (termed composite). Palm and cocoa-nut oils are now extensively used. In 1860, at the Belmont works 9000 persons were employed, and in winter 100,000 (7000*l.* worth) of candles were manufactured weekly. Candles are manufactured at Belmont from the mineral oil of tar brought from Bangoon in the Burmese empire, and from Trinidad. In 1870 the manufacture of candles from a mineral substance named osokerit began. Electric candles of Jablochkoff and Jamnii; see under Electricity.

CANDLESTICKS (or lamp-stands) with seven branches were regarded as emblematical of the priest's office, and were engraven on their seals, cups, and tombs. Bezaleel made "a candlestick of pure gold" for the tabernacle, Ex. 25. 31-37. Candlesticks were used in Britain in the days of king Edgar, 959 ("silver candelabra and gilt candelabra well and honourably made").

CANDY (Ceylon), was taken by a British detachment, 20 Feb. 1803, who capitulated 23 June following, on account of its unhealthiness, and many were treacherously massacred at Colombo, 26 June. The war was renewed in Oct. 1814; the king was made prisoner by general Brownrigg, 19 Feb. 1815; and the sovereignty was vested in Great Britain, 2 March, 1815.

CANTICULAR PERIOD, see Dog-star.

CANNÆ (Apulia). Here, on 2 Aug. 216 B.C., Hannibal with 50,000 Africans, Gauls, and Spaniards, defeated Æmilius Paulus and Terentius Varro, with 85,000 Romans, and their allies. This great army was nearly annihilated, the far greater part being slain on the field, including the consul Æmilius Paulus, his chief officers, above 80 senators, with many other persons of high rank. Hannibal is said to have lost about 6,000 men. The other consul, Varro, who had escaped with some cavalry, conducted himself with so much discretion and firmness after the battle, that the senate, instead of blaming him for the defeat, thanked him for not despairing of the Roman Commonwealth.

CANNIBAL, an Indian term, thought to be a form of Caribbal; as Columbus, in 1493, found the Caribs of the West Indies gross cannibals. Anthropophagi (man-eaters) are mentioned by Homer and Herodotus; and the practice still exists in some of the South Sea Islands and other savage countries. For Mignonette case, see Wrecks, 1884. Superstitious cannibalism practised in Hayti, 1884. A number of Melanesian labourers sent to have killed and eaten the entire crew of a ship conveying them to Apia, Navigators Island. Dec. 1886.

Jan 1077, till the pope admitted him, and granted absolution. Matilda greatly mortified the temporal power of the papacy by requesting to it her large estates, to the injury of her second husband, Giselph, duke of Bavaria. CAPS AND HATS. About 1738, Sweden was much distracted by two factions thus named, the former in the interest of the Russians, and the latter in that of the French. They were broken up and the names prohibited by Gustavus III. in 1771, who desired to exclude foreign influence. His assassination by Ankarström, 16 March, 1792, set aside all his plans for the improvement of Sweden.

CAPUA, capital of Campania, took the part of Hannibal when his army wintered here after the battle of Cannæ, 216 a.c., and it is said became overruled. In 211, when the Romans retook the city, they scourged and beheaded all the surviving senators; the others had poisoned themselves after a banquet previous to the surrender of the city. Only two persons escaped; one woman who had prayed for the success of the Romans, and another who succoured some prisoners. During the middle ages Capua was successively subjugated by the Greeks, Saracens, Normans, and Germans. It was restored to Naples in 1424, and captured by Caesar Borgia, 24 July, 1507; was taken by Garibaldi 2 Nov. 1860.

CAPUCHIN FRIARS, Franciscans, so named from wearing a Capuchon, or cowl hanging down upon their backs. The order was founded by Matthew Baschi, about 1525; and established by the pope Clement VII. 1529. The capuchin confessors of the queen Henrietta introduced here 1630, were expelled by the parliament, 1642.

CAR. The invention is mythically ascribed to Erichonides of Athens. Covered cars (carros aragati) were used by the Romans. The lotions (a soft cushioned car), next invented, gave place to the carpetum, a two-wheeled car, with an awning covering, hung with costly cloth. Still later were the carroves, in which the officers of state rode. Triumphant cars, introduced by Tarquin the Elder, were formed like a throne.

CARACAS (S. America), part of Venezuela, discovered by Columbus 1498. It was reduced by arms, and assigned as property to the Welser, German merchants, by Charles V.; but for their tyranny, they were dispossessed in 1550, and a crown governor appointed. The province declared its independence, 9 May, 1810. In the city Leon de Caracas, on 26 March, 1812, nearly 12,000 persons perished by an earthquake. Population, 1883, 70,509. See Venezuela.

CARBOLIC ACID (or phenic acid), obtained by the distillation of pit-coal, by Laurent, 1846-7, is a powerful antiseptic. It is largely manufactured for medical purposes, and has been advantageously used at Carlisle and Exeter in the disinfection of sewage (1860-1); and as a disinfectant during the prevalence of cholera in London in 1866. It was successfully used for embalming by professor Seely in 1868. Professor F. Crace Calvert, a great manufacturer of this acid, died 1873.

CARBONARI (charcoal-burners), a powerful secret society in Italy, which derived its origin, according to some, from the Waldenses, and which became prominent early in the present century. It aimed at the expulsion of foreigners from Italy, and the establishment of civil and religious liberty. In March, 1820, it is said that 650,000 joined the society, and an insurrection soon after broke out in Naples, general Pepe taking the command. The king Ferdinand made political concessions, but the influence of the allied sovereigns at Laybach led Ferdinand to annul them and suppress the liberal party, Jan. 1821, when the Carbonari were denounced as traitors.

CARBONIC ACID GAS, a gaseous compound of carbon and oxygen, found in the air, and a product of combustion, respiration, and fermentation. The Grotto del Cane yields 200,000 lbs. per annum. No animal can breathe this gas. The richness of champagne, beer, &c., is due to its presence. It was liquefied by atmospheric pressure by Faraday in 1823. On exposing the liquid to the air it becomes solid, resembling snow, through vaporization. See under Cenote, 1889-90.

CARDINALS, princes in the church of Rome, the council of the pope, and the conclaves or "sacred college," at first were the principal priests or incumbents of the parishes in Rome, and said to have been called cardinales in 853. They began to assume the exclusive power of electing the popes about 1179. They first wore the red hat to remind them that they ought to shed their blood for religion, if required, and were declared princes of the church by Innocent IV., 1243 or 1245. Paul II. gave the scarlet habit, 1464; and Urban VIII. the title of Eminence in 1623 or 1630. In 1586 Sixtus V. fixed their number at 70, but there are generally vacancies. Chaille's work on the "History of Playing Cards," published, 1848. Piquet and all the early names are French.—Cards first taxed in England 1710. 428,000 packs were stamped in 1775, and 980,000 in 1800. In Oct. they took Jerusalem. They were totally defeated in two battles in 1247.

A constitution drawn up by John Locke was abandoned. The province was divided into North and South in 1729; see America. CARTHAGE (N. coast of Africa near Tunis), founded by Dido or Elissa, according to the legend adopted by Virgil in the Æneid, some time in the 9th century B.C.; 878, 853, 846 are mentioned. She fled from her brother Pygmalion, king of Tyre, who had killed her husband, and took refuge in Africa. The Carthaginians bore the character of a faithless people, hence the term Panis fidei. Cato the censor ended his speeches in the senate with Delenda est Carthago; "Carthage must be destroyed!" Many expeditions were held here, A.D. 200-335.

It was the last place held by the Intrantelligence and Internationalists of Spain; was besieged by general Martin Campos, about 22 Aug. 1873. CARTHUSIANS, a religious order (springing from the Benedictines) founded by Bruno of Cologne, who retired with six companions about 1084, to Chartreuse (chartreuse), in the mountains of Dauphiné. Their austere rules were formed by Basil VII., their general. They appeared in England about 1180, and a monastery was founded by sir William Manny, 1371, on the site of the present Charter-house, London; see Charter-house. The Carthusian powder, of father Simon, at Chartreuse, was first compounded about 1715.

CARTOONS, large chalk drawings preparatory to oil painting. Those of MARSHALL (twenty-five in number) were designed (for tapestries) in the chambers of the Vatican under Julius II. and Leo X. about 1510 to 1516. The seven preserved were purchased in Flanders by Rubens for Charles I. of England, for Hampton-court palace in 1629. They were removed to South Kensington 28 April, 1865.—The tapestries executed at Arras from these designs are at Rome. They were twice carried away by invaders, in 1526 and 1798, and were restored in 1815.—The Cartoons for the British Houses of Parliament were exhibited in July, 1843.

Rüppell (died 1794) found a wild cat in Nubia, whose conformation agreed with that of the Egyptian cat mummies. See Mammalia. Cats fetched high prices in the middle ages, and were protected by law in Wales, about 948. Belzoni in 1815-18 explored many Egyptian catacombs, built 3000 years ago. He brought to England the sarcophagus of Psammethicus, formed of oriental alabaster, exquisitely sculptured. In the Persian catacombs (formerly stone quarries), human remains from the cemetery of the Innocents were deposited in 1785; and many of the victims of the revolution in 1793-4, are interred in them.—On 31 May, 1878, some labourers digging on the Via Salaria, two miles from Rome, discovered the celebrated catacombs of which an account with engravings was published by Antonio Boni, in his "Roma Sotterranea" (1632), and by Aringhi (1639), and others. John Evelyn saw them in 1645. Elaborate accounts have been published recently by De Rossi; an abstract of whose researches will be found in the "Roma Sotterranea" of the Rev. J. S. Northcote and W. See Barcelona.

CATALYTIC FORCE. The discovery in 1819 by Thénard of the decomposition of peroxide of hydrogen by platinum, and by Döbereiner in 1825 of its property to ignite a mixture of hydrogen and oxygen, formed the groundwork of the doctrine of catalytic force, also termed "action of contact or presence," put forth by Berzelius and Mitscherlich. The catechism of the council of Trent was published in 1566; those of the Assembly of Divines at Westminster (one termed the shorter catechism), 1647 and 1648.

CATILINE'S CONSPIRACY. Lucius Sergius Catiline, a dissolute Roman noble, having been refused the consulship (65 B.C.), conspired to kill the senate, plunder the treasury, and set Rome on fire. This conspiracy was timely discovered and frustrated. A second plot (in 63), was detected by the consul Cicero, whom he had resolved to murder. Catiline's daring appearance in the senate-house, after his guilt was known, drew forth Cicero's celebrated invective, "Quoniam tandem, Catilina!" on 8 Nov. On seeing five of his accomplices arrested, Catiline fled to Gaul, where his partisans were assembling an army. Marriage was restored to the English clergy in 1547. The marriage of the clergy was proposed, but negatived at the council of Trent (1563), also at a conference of the old catholics at Bonn, June, 1876. HEREDITARY LORD GREAT CHAMBERLAIN OF ENGLAND.—The sixth great officer of state, whose duties, among others, relate to coronations and public solemnities. The office was long held by the De Veres, earls of Oxford, granted by Henry I. in 1101. On the death of John De Vere, the sixteenth earl, Mary, his sole daughter, marrying lord Willoughby De Eresby, the right was established in that nobleman's family by a judgment of the house of peers, 2 Charles I. 1625. On the death of his descendant, unmarried, in July 1779, the house of lords and twelve judges concurred that the office devolved to lady Willoughby De Eresby, and her sister the lady Georgina Charlotte Bertie, as heirs to their brother Robert, duke of Ancaster, deceased; and that they had powers to appoint a deputy to act for them, not under the degree of a knight, who, if his majesty approved of him, might officiate accordingly. Antea. This dignity was for some time held jointly by the lord Willoughby De Eresby and the marquis of Cholmondeley, descendants of John De Vere, earl of Oxford. Lord Willoughby De Eresby died without issue 27 Aug. 1870, and lord Aveland, his sister's son, was appointed to act. The marquis of Cholmondeley died 26 Dec. 1884, and was succeeded by his grandson. The effervescing wine termed Champagne, became popular in the latter part of the 18th century.

CHAMP DE MARS, an open square in front of the Military school at Paris, with artificial embankments on each side, extending nearly to the river Seine. The ancient assemblies of the Frankish people, the germ of parliaments, held annually in March, received this name. In 747, Pepin changed the month to May. Here was held, 14 July, 1790 (the anniversary of the capture of the Bastille), the "federation," or solemnity of swearing fidelity to the "patriot king" and new constitution: great rejoicings followed. On 14 July, 1791, a second great meeting was held here, directed by the Jacobin clubs, to sign petitions on the "altar of the country," praying for the abdication of Louis XVI. A commemoation meeting took place, 14 July, 1792. Another constitution was sworn to here, under the eye of Napoleon I., 1 May, 1815, at a ceremony called the Champ de Mai. The prince president (afterwards Napoleon III.) had a grand review in the Champ de Mars, and distributed eagles to the army, 10 May, 1852. ## CHANCELLOR OF THE EXCHEQUER, see Exchequer

CHANCELLOR OF SCOTLAND, LORD,

The laws of Malcolm II. (1004) say—"The chancellor call at all times assist the king in giving him counsellor near secretly nor the rest of the nobility. The chancellor shall be lodged near unto the king's grace, for keeping of his books, and the seal, and that he may be ready, both day and night, at the king's command." Sir James Beaufort. Evan was lord chancellor to Malcolm III., Canmore, 1057, and James, earl of Seafield, afterwards Findlater, was the last lord chancellor of Scotland, the office having been abolished in 1708, see Keeper.

CHANCELLOR'S AUGMENTATION

ACT, passed 1863, enabled the lord chancellor to sell the advowson of certain livings in his gift for augmenting poor benefices.

CHANCELLORSVILLE, Virginia, U.S., a large brick hotel, once kept by a Mr. Chancellor, was the site of severe sanguinary conflicts between the American federal army of the Potomac under general Hooker, and the confederates under general Lee. On 28 April, 1863, the federal army crossed the Rappahannock, on 2 May, general "Stonewall" Jackson furiously attacked and routed the right wing, but was mortally wounded by his own party firing on him by mistake. Gen. Stuart took his command, and after a severe conflict on 3 and 4 May, with great loss to both parties, the federals were compelled to recross the Rappahannock. The struggle was compared to that at Hengoust during the battle of Waterloo. Jackson died 10 May.

CHANCERY, COURT OF, is mythically said to have originated with Alfred (871-901) or William I., (1066-1087). Its power was probably derived from the council of state, under which it acted, and of which it became gradually independent. Its acts were frequently complained of by the commons in the 14th and 15th centuries. Its professed object was to render justice complete, and to moderate the rigour of other courts that are bound to the strict letter of the law. It gives relief to or against infants, notwithstanding their minority; and to or against married women, notwithstanding their coverture; and all frauds, deceipts, breaches of trust and confidence, for which there is no redress at common law, are relivable here. Blackstone; see Chancery of England. The delays in chancery proceedings having long given dissatisfaction, the subject was brought before parliament in 1825, and frequently since; which led to the passing of important acts in 1852, 1853, 1855, 1856, and 1867, to amend the practice in the court of chancery. See Accountant, County Courts, and Supreme Court, Berkeley.

The Chancery division of the high court of justice now consists of the lord chancellor and five judges.

CHANDOS CLAUSE, see Counties.

CHANNEL ISLANDS, a group about 80 miles South of England, see Jersey, &c.

CHANNEL STEAMERS, see under Steam.

CHANNEL TUNNEL COMPANY, registered, 15 Jan. 1872; see Tunnels.

The construction of a channel bridge from Dover to Calais, was proposed in Paris, 1860, by MM. Schneider and Hersent, and at John Pomeroy and Mr. (afterwards Sir Benjamin) Baker, and discussed in 1860.

M. Benas Varilla, of Paris, engineer, publishes his plans for a mode of communication between Dover and Calais, consisting of a pier or viaduct half a mile long, on each side connected by a tunnel, and estimated cost 20,000,000. May, 1860. Sir E. J. Reed proposed the construction of a tubular railway, above the bed of the sea, 1860-1. In relation to a proposed Channel bridge, a new survey of the Straits of Dover was undertaken; a report on the scheme was published 26 Dec. 1860.

CHANTING is attributed to Ambrose, about 386. About 602, Gregory the Great added tones to the Ambrosian chant, and established singing schools. M. Gerart, of Brussels, in Oct. 1889, asserted that this statement is legendary and that it was Gregory III. (731-741) who made the change. Chanting was adopted by some dissenters about 1859.

John Marbeck's "Book of Common Prayer noted" (1550) is the first adaptation of the ancient Latin music to the Reformed Church; Clifford's "Common Tunes" for chanting, 1664.

The Plainsong and Medieval Music Society was founded in 1882.

CHANTREY LEGACY, see Royal Academy.

CHANTRY, a chapel endowed with revenue for priests to sing mass for the souls of the donors; see Chantries. Chantries were abolished in England in 1546.

CHAPEL. There are free chapels, chapels of ease, the chapel royal, &c. Convent. The gentlemen pensioners (formerly poor knights of Windsor, who were instituted by the direction of Henry VIII. in his testament, 1546-7) were called knights of the chapel; see Poor Knights of Windsor.—The Private Chapels not founded 14 Aug. 1871. The place of confession among prisoners, and the confessional itself, use by them called a chapel, it is said, because the first work printed in England by Caxton was executed in a ruined chapel in Westminster-abbey.

CHAPLAIN, a clergyman who performs divine service in a chapel, for a prince or nobleman. About seventy chaplains are attached to the chapel royal. The chief personages invested with the privilege of retaining chaplains are the following, with the number that was originally allotted to each rank, by 21 Hen. VIII. c. 13 (1529):—

Archbishop . . . . .	8	Knight of the Garter . . .	3
Duke . . . . .	6	Duchess . . . . .	2
Bishop . . . . .	6	Marquess . . . . .	2
Marquis . . . . .	5	Countess . . . . .	2
Earl . . . . .	5	Baroness . . . . .	2
Viscount . . . . .	4	Master of the Rolls . . .	2
Baron . . . . .	3	Royal Almoner . . . . .	2
Chancellor . . . . .	3	Chief Justice . . . . .	2

CHAPLETS, the string of beads used by the Roman Catholics in reciting the Lord's prayer, Ave Maria, &c.; see Beads.

CHAPTER. Anciently the bishop and clergy lived in the cathedral, the latter to assist the former in performing holy offices and governing the church, until the reign of Henry VIII. The chapter is now an assembly of the clergy of a collegiate church or cathedral. Convent. The chapter-house of Westminster-abbey was built in 1250. By consent of the abbot, the commoners of England held their parliaments there from 1377 until 1547, when Edward VI. granted them the chapel of St. Stephen.

CHAR-ASIAB, the heights before Cabul; held by Afghan mutineers, were gallantly carried by general Baker, with the 72nd Highlanders and 5th Ghoorkee, 6 Oct. 1879. The enemy was totally defeated with severe loss. Capt. Young, Dr. Duncan, and Lieut. Ferguson were killed, and about 70 of the British force killed and wounded. The British were falsely accused of cruelty after the victory.

CHARCOAL AIR-FILTERS were devised by Dr. John Stenhouse, F.R.S., in 1853. About the end of the last century Löwitz, a German chemist, discovered that charcoal (carbon) possessed the property of decomposing putrid substances, by absorbing and decomposing offensive gases. Air-filters, based on this property, have been successfully applied to public buildings, sewers, &c. Dr. Stenhouse also invented charcoal respirators. See Fireman's Respirators.

CHARING CROSS. At the village of Charing stood the last of the memorial crosses erected in memory of Eleanor, queen of Edward I., in conformity with her will. She died, 28 Nov. 1290. The cross remained till 1647, when it was destroyed as a monument of popish superstition. The present cross was erected for the South Eastern Railway Company in 1865 by Mr. E. M. Barry. The houses at Charing-cross were built about 1678; alterations began in 1820. The first stone of Charing-cross hospital was laid by the duke of Sussex, 15 Sept. 1831. Hungerford-bridge (or Charing-cross bridge) was opened 1 May, 1845; taken down July, 1862, and the materials employed in erecting Clifton suspension bridge, beginning March, 1863; see Clifton. CHARING-CROSS RAILWAY. The first train passed over it, 2 Dec. 1862, and it was opened to the public on 11 Jan. 1864. The new railway bridge, built of iron with brick piers, was constructed by Mr. (aft. Sir John) Hawkshaw. The foot-bridge was opened toll free 5 Oct. 1878. Pliatocoma fossils found in excavations for Drummond's banking house: cave lion, mammoth, Irish deer, rhinoceros, &c. Autumn, 1862.

Charing Cross Road, from Tottenham Court Road to Charing Cross, was opened by the Duke of Cambridge, 26 Feb. 1837.

CHARIOTS are frequently mentioned in the Bible, those of Joseph are mentioned Gen. i. 9, s.c. 1689. Chariot-racing was a Greek exercise. War-chariots were effectively used by the Gauls in Italy. Caesar relates that Cæsarivallus, after dismissing his other forces, retained no fewer than 4000 war-chariots about his person; see Carriages, &c.

CHARITABLE BEQUESTS, &c. Boards for their recovery were constituted in 1764 and 1800, and a board for Ireland (chiefly prelates of the established church), in 1825. The Roman Catholic Charitable Bequests act passed in 1844, and an act for the better administration of Charitable Trusts in 1853, when commissioners were appointed, who have from time to time published voluminous reports. Amendment acts were passed 1855 and 1871.

CHARITABLE BRETHREN, an order founded by St. John of God, and approved by pope Pius V. 1572; introduced into France, 1601; settled at Paris, 1602. Hénault.

CHARITABLE RELIEF, society for organising, established 1869. There are 40 offices, where applications are received and inquiries made (1889). Reported successful, 1881, in which year about 14,000 persons were assisted, and about 11,000 refused. 20th annual meeting, 23 Jan. 1889. A conference of representatives of this and similar societies was held at Oxford on 1, 2 Oct. 1890.

CHARITIES AND CHARITY SCHOOLS, see Education. The Charity Commission reported to parliament that the endowed charities alone of Great Britain amounted to 1,500,000l. annually, in 1840. Charity schools were instituted in London to prevent the seduction of the infant poor into Roman Catholic seminaries, 3 James II., 1687-8. Mr. Low's "Charities of London" was published 1862. Newest edition, 1892. The house of lords, on appeal in a special case (the Myravian Brethren), decide that religious and charitable societies are exempt from income-tax, 20 July, 1891.

The City of London Parochial Charities Act, passed 20 Aug. 1883, places the parochial charities at the disposal of the Charity Commissioners; they recommended the application of the funds of the City Parochial Charities (about 50,000l. a year) to the general benefit of the poor of London, announced 7 Sept. 1887

CHARITY ORGANISATION SOCIETY, see Charitable Relief.

CHARIVARI (French for "clattering of pots and pans," &c., noise made to annoy obnoxious persons), this name assumed by the French illustrated satirical journal, first published 1 Dec. 1832, edited by Louis Desnoyers, Alarchoe, and Albert Clero. Among the artists were "Cham," a name taken by the comte de Noé, who contributed from 1842 till his death, 6 Sept. 1879. See Punch, "the London Charivari."

CHARLEROI, in Belgium; fortified and named by the Spanish governor Rodrigo, 1666. Several great battles have been fought near this town, especially in 1690 and 1794; see Fleurbaey. Charleroi was besieged by the prince of Orange, 1672 and 1677; but he was soon obliged to retire. Near here, at Ligny, Napoleon attacked the Prussian line, making it fall back upon Wavres, 16 June, 1815.

CHARLES-ST-GEORGES, a French vessel, professedly conveying free African emigrants (but really slaves), seized by the Portuguese, in Conducia bay, 29 Nov. 1857, sent to Lisbon, and condemned as a slaver. The French government sent two ships of war to the Tagus, and the vessel was surrendered under protest; but the emperor of France gave up the free emigration scheme.

CHARLESTON (South Carolina), founded by people from old Charlestown, 1680. The English fleet here was repulsed with great loss, 28 June, 1776. It was besieged by the British troops at the latter end of March, 1780, and surrendered 13 May, following, with 6000 prisoners; it was evacuated, 14 Dec. 1782. Great convulsion arose here in Nov. 1860, through the election of Mr. Lincoln for the presidency, he being opposed to slavery. On 12, 13 April, 1861, the war began by the Confederates bombarding Fort Sumter; see United States. In Dec. 1861, the federals sank a number of vessels laden with stone in order to choke up the entrance to Charleston harbour. Unsuccessful attacks were made on Charleston by the federals between April, 1863, and 17 Feb. 1865, when the Confederates were compelled to retire; and the federals replaced their standard on fort Sumter, 14 April, the day on which president Lincoln was assassinated.

About three-fourths of the city destroyed by an earthquake, 10 p.m. 31 Aug. 1886; 96 persons killed. Population, 1890, 54,953.

CHARLESTOWN (Massachusetts) was burnt by the British forces under general Gage, 17 June, 1775. Charlestown taken by the British, 7 May, 1779.

"CHARTRE CONSTITUTIONNELLE," the French political constitution acknowledged by Louis XVIII., 4-10 June, 1814. The infraction of this constitution led to the revolution of 1830. The amended "Charte" was promulgated by Louis Philippe, 14 Aug. 1830; and set aside by the revolution of 1848.

CHARTER-HOUSE (a corruption of Chartreuse, which see), London, formerly a Carthusian monastery, founded in 1371 by sir Walter de Manny, one of the knights of Edward III., now an extensive charitable establishment. The last prior, John Houghton, was executed as a traitor, for denying the king's supremacy, in May, 1535. After the dissolution of monasteries in 1539, the charter-house passed through various hands till 1 Nov. 1611, when it was sold by the earl of Suffolk to Thomas Sutton for 13,000*l.*, who obtained letters patent directing that it should be called "the hospital of king James, founded in the Charter-house," and that "there should be for ever 10 governors," &c. On the foundation are 80 poor brothers and 44 poor scholars. Sutton died, 12 Dec. 1611. The expenditure for 1853-4 was 22,396*l.*; the receipts, 28,908*l.*; receipts in 1885, 30,304*l.* This school was affected by the Public Schools' Act, 1868. In Sept. 1872, the school was opened in new buildings, at Godalming, Surrey. The old buildings, adapted for the Merchant Taylors' (day) School, were opened by the prince of Wales, 6 April, 1875. The buildings for the poor "brethren" were also modified, and in Nov. entirely new arrangements for them were proposed. Bill proposing removal of the "brethren" (55), who are to become annuitants with additions; and erection of buildings on the site of the old buildings and land (four acres), a total reversal of Sutton's will;—introduced; opposed; withdrawn 7 May, 1886. The "Charter-House past and present," by Dr. Wm. Haig Brown, head master, published 1879.

CHARTER-PARTY, a covenant between merchants and masters of ships relating to the ship and cargo, said to have been first used in England about 1243.

CHARTERS, granted to corporate towns to protect their manufactures by Henry I. in 1132; modified by Charles II. in 1683; the ancient charters restored in 1698. Alterations were made by the Municipal Reform Act in 1835. See Magna Charta and  boroughs. Ancient Anglo-Saxon charters are printed in Kemble's "Codex Diplomaticus," 1829.

CHARTISTS, the name assumed by large bodies of the lower classes, shortly after the passing of the Reform Bill in 1832, from their demanding the people's "Charter," the six points of which were Universal Suffrage, Vote by Ballot, Annual Parliamentary Payment of the Members, the abolition of the Property Qualification (which was enacted, June, 1856), and Equal Electoral Districts. In 1838 the chartists assembled in various parts of the country, armed with guns, pikes, and other weapons, and carrying torches and flags. A proclamation was issued against them, 12 Dec. Their petition (agreed to at Birmingham, 6 Aug. 1838) was presented to parliament by Mr. T. Attwood, 14 June, 1839. They committed great outrages at Birmingham, 15 July, 1839, and at Newport (which see), 4 Nov.

1839. They held for some time a sort of parliament called the "National Convention," the leading men being Feargus O'Connor, Henry Vincent, Mr. Stephens, &c. On 10 April, 1848, they proposed to hold a meeting of 300,000 men on Kennington common, London, to march thence in procession to Westminster, and present a petition to parliament; but only about 20,000 came. The bank and other establishments were fortified by military, preventive measures adopted, and not less than 150,000 persons of all ranks (including Louis Napoleon, afterwards emperor) were voluntarily sworn to act as special constables. The chartists dispersed after slight encounters with the police, and the monster petition, in detached rolls, was sent in carts to the house of commons. From this time the proceedings of the chartists became insignificant.

CHARTREUSE, LA GRANDE, chief of the monasteries of the Carthusian order, situated among the rugged mountains near Grenoble, in France, was founded by Bruno of Cologne, about 1084. At the revolution in 1792, the monks were expelled and their valuable library destroyed. They returned to the monastery after the restoration of 1815. In Nov. 1880 they declined to accept indulgence from the decrees for expelling the religious orders from France.

CHARTS AND MAPS. Anaximander of Miletus is said to have been the inventor of geographical and celestial charts, about 570 B.C. Modern sea-charts were brought to England by Bartholomew Columbus to illustrate his brother's theory respecting a western continent, 1489. The first tolerably accurate map of England was drawn by George Lilly, who died in 1559. Gerard Mercator published an atlas of maps in 1595; see Mercator. The daily papers published in their columns maps illustrating the wars of 1870-1, 1876-7, &c.

CHASSEPOT RIFLE, a modified needle-gun, and a breech-loader (named after its inventor, Alphonse Chassepot), adopted by the French government in 1866. In April, 1867, 10,000 had been issued to the troops. In his report on the battle of Mentana (which see), 3 Nov. 1867, gen. de Failly said, "the chassepot has done wonders." It was generally considered successful in the war, 1870-1. "The range of the chassepot being 1800 paces, and that of the needle-gun only between 600 and 700, the Germans in all their charges had to traverse 1200 paces before their arms could be used to purpose." Many Germans were armed with the chassepot after the surrender of the French army at Sedan, 2 Sept. 1870.

CHÂTEAUDUN, an old city, N. C. France, the residence of the heretic Dunois, who died 1468. Here were massacred, 20 July, 1513, about 7000 Bretonnais, fanatical mercenaries who had been hired to exterminate the Albigeois by the cardinal Henry, abbot of Clairvaux, in 1511. They had become the scourge of the country, and the "Dunois" were organized for their destruction. Châteaudun was captured by the Germans after a severe conflict of about nine hours, 18 Oct. 1870. Barricades had been erected in the town, and the Garde Mobile fought bravely. The town was re-occupied by the French, 6 Nov.

CHATHAM (Kent), a principal station of the royal navy; the dockyard, commenced by queen Elizabeth, has been greatly extended. The Chatham Chest, for the relief of the wounded and decayed seamen, originally established here by the queen and admirals Drake and Hawkins, in 1588, was removed to Greenwich in 1803. On 10 June, 1667, the Dutch fleet, under admiral De Ruyter, sailed up to this town, and burnt several men-of-war; but the entrance into the Medway is now defended by Sheerness and other forts, and additional fortifications were made at Chatham. On 8-11 Feb. 1861, a violent outbreak of the convicts was suppressed by the military, and many rioters flogged. About 1000*l.* worth of property was destroyed, and many persons were seriously hurt. New docks and a basin, said to be the largest and finest in the world, opened by Mr. Göttschen, 21 June, 1871. Additional docks completed, 1883. Population in 1881, 26,424; in 1891, 31,711.

CHAT MOSS (Lancashire), a peat bog, twelve miles square, in most places so soft as to be incapable of supporting a man or horse, over which George Stephenson, the railway engineer, carried the Liverpool and Manchester railway, after overcoming difficulties considered invincible. The road (literally a floating one) was completed by 1 Jan. 1830, when the first experimental train, drawn by the Rocket locomotive, passed over it. See Bogs.

CHATTANOOGA (Tennessee). Near here the federal generals, Sherman and Thomas, defeated the confederate general Bragg, after storming the entrenchments, 21-25 Nov. 1863. Bragg retreated into Georgia, and Longstreet into Virginia.

CHAUMONT (on the Marne, France), TREATY of, entered into between Great Britain, Austria, Russia, and Prussia, 11 March, 1814. This treaty was succeeded by that of Paris, 11 April, by which Napoleon renounced his sovereignty; see Paris.

* William Pitt, earl of Chatham (the "great commoner") born 25 Nov. 1708, entered parliament in 1733; became secretary of state (virtually the premier) in the Devonshire administration, Nov. 1756, secretary in the Newcastle administration, Jan. 1757. In 1766 he became premier, lord privy seal, and afterwards earl of Chatham, which Lord Chesterfield called a fall upstairs. He opposed the taxation of the American colonies, but protested against the recognition of their independence, 7 April, 1776, and died 11 May following.

CHAUVINISM, a term said to be derived from Chauvin, the principal character in Sorbie's "Soldat Laboureur," a veteran soldier of the first empire, filled with intense admiration for Napoleon and for all that belonged to him. Sorbie was born 24 Dec. 1794, died 20 Feb. 1861.

CHEAP TRAINS ACT, 7 & 8 Vict. c. 85, 1844. Another act passed, Aug. 1883. See Railways.

CHEATS were punishable by pillory, imprisonment, and fine, and a rigorous statute was enacted against them in 1542. Persons cheating at play, or winning at any time more than 10*l.* or any valuable thing, were deemed infamous, and were to suffer punishment as in cases of perjury, 9 Anne, 1711. Blackstone.

CHEE-FOO CONVENTION, see China, 1876.

CHEESE is mentioned by Aristotle, about 350 B.C. It is supposed by Camden and others that the English learned cheese-making from the Romans. Wilts, Gloucester, and Cheshire make vast quantities. In 1840 we imported from abroad about 10,000 tons; in 1855, 384,192 cwt.; in 1866, 872,342 cwt.; in 1870, 1,041,281 cwt.; in 1876, 1,531,204 cwt.; in 1881, 1,840,090 cwt.; in 1884, 1,927,139 cwt.; in 1887, 1,836,789 cwt.; in 1890, 2,144,047 cwt. Large quantities are imported from the United States.

The Cheddar system of cheese-making, named after a village in Somersetshire, with recent improvements has been largely adopted in the British dominions and the United States during the present century.

CHELSEA (Middlesex). A council held here 27 July, 816. Nicolas. A theological college here founded by James I. in 1609, was converted by Charles II. in 1682 to an asylum for wounded and superannuated soldiers. The erection was carried on by James II., and completed by William III. in 1690. The projector was sir Stephen Fox, grandfather of the orator C. J. Fox; the architect was sir Christopher Wren; and the cost 150,000*l.* In 1850 there were 70,000 out- and 539 in-pensioners.—The body of the duke of Wellington lay here in state, 10-17 Nov. 1852.—The physic garden of sir Hans Sloane, at Chelsea, was given to the Apothecaries' company, 1721.—The Chelsea water-works were incorporated, 1722.—The first stone of the Military Asylum, Chelsea, was laid by Frederick, duke of York, 19 June, 1801.—The bridge, constructed by Mr. T. Paine to connect Chelsea with Battersea-park, was opened March, 1858. The Chelsea embankment was opened by the duke and duchess of Edinburgh, 9 May, 1874. See Trials, July, 1870 and 1872. Cremorne public gardens closed, 1877. The Albert-bridge was opened 31 Dec. 1872; both freed from toll, 24 May, 1879. The parliamentary borough of Chelsea, created by the Reform act, 15 Aug. 1867, consisted of Chelsea, Kensington, Fulham, and Hammersmith. By the act of 1885, Chelsea alone returns 1 member. The Chelsea Savings Bank suspended payment; liabilities to be sustained by trustees, 18 Jan. 1890. Free library opened by earl Cadogan, 21 Jan. 1891. Population, 1881, 88,128; 1891, 90,272.

CHELTENHAM (Gloucestershire). Its celebrated mineral spring was discovered in 1718. The king's well was sunk in 1778; and other wells by Mr. P. Thompson in 1806. Magnesian salt was first found in the waters in 1811. The Chantry was erected in 1804. Grammar school and almshouse, endowed by Richard Pates, 1574. Cheltenham was incorporated, 1876. Population, 1881, 43,972; 1891, 42,914.

Cheltenham College, was founded in 1841, mainly by Mr. George Simon Harcourt, and Capt. James Shrubbs Trevellick, for a classical, mathematical, and general education in strict conformity with the principles of the church of England; among the pupils have been, Lord Flunkett, archbishop of Dublin, sir Henry James, Q. C. M. P., prince Alban, son of Theodore negus of Abyssinia, and prince Francis of Teck.

CHEMICAL SOCIETIES. One formed in London in 1780, did not long continue. The present Chemical society of London was established in 1841 (jubilee celebrated at Burlington House, 24 Feb. 1891); that of Paris in 1857; that of Germany at Berlin, 1867. The Institute of Chemistry of Great Britain formed; professor Edward Frankland first president, 1877; first meeting, 1 Feb. 1878; chartered, Oct. 1885. Chemical Industry Society founded 4 April, 1881.

CHEMICAL UNION of manufacturers of bleaching powders, alkalies, &c., was projected July 1890. The union, named the United Alkali Company, advertised shares for sale to the amount of 1,250,000*l.*, Feb. 1891.

CHEMICAL WORKS. Royal commission appointed to inquire into the management of chemical works, to ascertain the effect of gases and vapours given off, and the means of prevention: the commissioners were lord Aberdeen, earl Percy, professors Abel, A. Williamson, Roscoe, and others, 18 July, 1876. In their report, issued Aug. 1878, they recommended increased inspection, and more stringent regulations. See Alkalies.

CHEMISTRY was introduced into Spain by the Moors, about 1150. The Egyptians and Chinese claim an early acquaintance with chemistry. The first chemists were the Alchemists (see Alchemy); but chemistry was not a science till the 17th century; during which its study was promoted by Bacon, Hooke, Mayow, and Boyle. In the early part of the 18th century, Dr. Stephen Hales laid the foundation of Pneumatic Chemistry, and his contemporary Boerhaave combined the study of chemistry with medicine. These were succeeded by Bergman, Stahl, Black, &c. In 1772, Priestley published his researches on air, having discovered the gases oxygen, ammonia, &c.; and thus commenced a new chemical era. He was ably seconded by Cavendish, Scheele, Lavoisier, Chaptal, and others. The 19th century opened with the brilliant discoveries of Davy, continued by Dalton, Faraday, Thomson, &c. Organic Chemistry has been very greatly advanced by Berzelius, Liebig, Dumas, Laurent, Hofmann, Cahours, Frankland, & others, since 1830; see Pharmacy, Electricity, Galvanism. For the analytical processes termed "Spectrum analysis," invented by Kirchhoff and Bunsen (1861), and "Dialysis" (1861), and "Atmalytic" (1863), invented by Mr. T. Graham, see those articles.—The Royal College of Chemistry, Oxford-street, London, was established in 1845 (now at South Kensington)—Henry Watts' grant "Dictionary of Chemistry," begun 1863, has supplied ments; new edition, 1886 at seq.; he died 30 June, 1884. M. Ad. Wurtz's equally great "Dictionnaire de Chimie," 1868-85. Prof. F. E. Thorpe's Dictionary of Applied Chemistry, 1890.

CHEQUE BANK, opened in Pall Mall East, 23 July, 1873. It issued cheques for fixed sums (down to 1*l.*) available for paying and transmitting small sums, and is suited for persons not having a banker. The plan, due to Mr. James Herts, a director, has been modified. He died 23 Feb. 1880.

CHEQUES, see Drafts.

CHERBOURG, the great naval fortress and arsenal of France on the coast of Brittany, about 60 or 70 miles equi-distant from Portsmouth and Plymouth. It was captured by our Henry V. in 1418, and lost in 1450. Under the direction of Louis XIV., some works were erected here by the great Vauban, which with some shipping, &c., were destroyed by the British, 6, 7 Aug. 1758. The works resumed by Louis XVI., were interrupted by the revolution. The breakwater, commenced in 1783, resumed by Napoleon I. about 1803, and completed in 1813, forms a secure harbour, affording anchorage for nearly the whole navy of France, and protected by strong fortifications. On 4, 5 Aug. 1858, the railway and the Grand Napoleon docks were opened, the latter in the presence of the queen of England and court. The British fleet visited Cherbourg, 15-17 Aug. 1865, receiving much hospitality. Presidents Grévy, Léon Say, and Gambetta visited Cherbourg; launch of a man-of-war, &c., 8-11 Aug. 1880.

CHERITON DOWN (Hants). Here sir Wm. Waller defeated the royalists under lord Hopton, 29 March, 1644.

CHERRY, the Prunus Cerasus (from Cerasus, a city of Pontus, whence the tree was brought by Lucullus to Rome, about 70 B.C.), first planted in Britain, it is said, about 100. Fine kinds were brought from Flanders, in 1540, and planted in Kent.

CHERSON, see Cherson.

CHERSONESUS, see Crimæa.

CHESAPEAKE. At the mouth of this river a contest took place between the British admiral Graves and the French admiral De Grasse aiding the revolted states of America; the former was obliged to retire, 5 Sept. 1781. The Chesapeake and Delaware were blockaded by the British fleet in the American war of 1812, and the bay was, at that period, the scene of great hostilities of various results.

CHESAPEAKE, an American frigate, in Boston bay, commanded by capt. Lawrence (50 guns, 375 men), struck to the Shamoon, British frigate (58 guns, 330 men) commanded by capt. Philip Vern Broke, after a severe action of eleven minutes, 1 June, 1813. Eleven minutes elapsed between the firing of the first gun and the boarding, and in four minutes more the Chesapeake was the Shamoon's prize. Capt. Lawrence died of his wounds. Adm. sir Peter W. P. Wallis, who succeeded in the command of the Shamoon, when capt. Broke was disabled, burnt 1791, died 13 Feb. 1893.

CHESHUNT COLLEGE, Herts, founded by Selina, countess of Huntingdon, for the education of ministers of her "connexion," Calvinistic methodists. The college was first opened at Trevoeca-house, Tularpiat, near Brecon, by the countess and George Whitefield, 1768. It was removed to Cheshunt in 1793. She died 17 June, 1791. Trevoeca college is still used by the Calvinistic methodists, 1890.

* In 1848 Wohler produced artificially urea, a body hitherto known only as a product of the animal organism. Since then, acetic acid, alcohol, grape sugar, various essential oils, similar to those of the pine-apple, pear, apple, &c., have been formed by combinations of the gases, oxygen, hydrogen, and carbonic acid. The bodies formed by chemists between organic and inorganic bodies is thus broken down. Indigo artificially formed by Beyer, 1854.

CHESS. An ancient game of eastern origin, probably brought into Europe by the Arabs; the invention is doubtfully ascribed to India, China, Persia and Egypt.

The city wall was first built by Edelfleda, about 908; and Hugh de Abrincis, called Lupus, the earl, nephew of William I., rebuilt the Saxon castle in 1084, and the abbey of St. Werburgh. Chester was incorporated by Henry III. and made a distinct county. The palatine jurisdiction was abolished by parliament, 23 July, 1830. The scz, anciently part of Lichfield, one of whose bishops, Peter, removing the seat hither in 1075, occasioned his successors to be styled bishops of Chester; but it was not made a distinct bishopric until Henry VIII. in 1541 raised it to this dignity, and allotted the church of the abbey of St. Werburgh for the cathedral. After extensive repairs, the cathedral was re-opened, 25 Jan. 1872. This see is valued in the king's books at 420*l.* 1*s.* 8*d.* per annum. Chicago was nearly destroyed by fire, occasioned by the upsetting of a paraffin lamp . . . 7-11 Oct. 1871
About 250 persons perished, and 98,500 were rendered destitute. The loss was reckoned at 200,000,000 dollars. Large sums were collected for relief of the sufferers in London (10,000 in a few hours) and other British cities, as well as in North America. The area of the fire was computed at from three to five square miles, and about 25,000 buildings were destroyed. The heart of the city was composed of old wooden buildings. The city was rebuilt most energetically 1872-3

CHICAMAUGA ("the stream of death"), near Chattanooga, Tennessee, North America. Near here the confederates under general Bragg, aided by Longstreet, totally defeated the federals under Rosecrans, 19, 20 Sept. 1862. The loss was severe on both sides. The credit of the victory was attributed to Longstreet; its fruitlessness to Bragg.

CHICHESTER (Sussex), built by Cissas, about 540. The cathedral was completed about 1108, burnt with the city in 1114, and rebuilt by bi-hop Seffrid about 1187. The present cathedral was erected during the 13th century. The spire fell 20 Feb. 1861; the foundation of a new one was laid 5 May, 1865, completed June, 1866. The cathedral re-opened after repairs, 14 Nov. 1867. The bishopric originated thus: Wilfrid, archbishop of York, compelled to flee by Egric, king of Northumberland, preached the gospel in this country, and built a church in the Isle of Selsey, about 673. In 681 Selsey became a bishopric, and so continued until it was removed to Chichester, then called Cissan-Chester, from its builder, Cissas, by Stigand, about 1022. This see has yielded to the church two saints, and to the nation three lord chancellors. It is valued in the king's books at 677*l.* 1*s.* 3*d.* per annum. Present income, 4500*l.* The borough was absorbed into Sussex, 1885. Population, 1881, 8,114; 1891, 7,812.

"CHICHESTER" training-ship for homeless London boys, established chiefly by the earl of Shaftesbury and Mr. Williams, in connection with the refuge for destitute children, Great Queen-street, 30 boys placed in it, 18 Dec. 1866; reported highly successful. The baroness Burdett-Coutts gave 5000*l.* in 1874. H.M.S. Arcton was devoted to a similar object, through the instrumentality of the same persons, 3 Aug. 1874. The Gothic training-ship was burnt, 22 Dec. 1875; several lives were lost. See Wrecks, 1875.

CHICORY, the wild endive, or Cichorium Intybus of Linnaeus, grows wild in calcareous soils. It was for many years so largely mixed with coffee in England, that it became a matter of serious complaint, the loss of revenue being estimated at 100,000*l.* a year. An excise order was issued, interdicting the mixture of chicory with coffee, 3 Aug. 1852. The admixture, however, has since been permitted, provided the word "chicory" be plainly printed on each parcel sold. In 1860 a duty of 3*d.* per cwt. was put upon English-grown chicory until April, 1861; it is now 13*d.* 3*d.* per cwt. (1889).

CHIGNON, French for the "back-hair" of ladies. In directions for full dress in 1783, it is said: "The hair large and the chignon low behind." Lady's Magazine. Large chignons began to be worn in England in 1866; discontinued 1875.

CHILDREN. Many ancient nations exposed their infants,—the Egyptians on the banks of rivers, and the Greeks on highways,—when they could not support or educate them; in such cases, they were protected by the state. The old custom of English parents selling their children to the Irish for slaves, was prohibited by Canute, about 1017. See Emigration, Foundling, Factory Acts, and Infanticide.

Prevention of cruelty to, and protection of children act passed, 26 Aug. 1889. It restricts the employment in certain cases of boys under 14, and girls under 16, but permits their employment above 7 in certain cases by special license.

By the new factory act the age of child-labour was raised from 10 to 11 5 Aug. 1891

Stagnation in the war. Lord Elgin departs to Calcutta, with assistance to the English against the Sepoys, 16 July; returns to Hong-Kong 23 Sept. 1857

The emperor Tiao-Kwang, who died 25 Feb. 1850, during the latter part of his reign, became liberal in his views, and favored the introduction of European arts; but his son, the late emperor, a rash and narrow-minded prince, quickly departed from his father's wise policy, and adopted reactionary measures, particularly against English influence. An insurrection broke out in consequence, Aug. 1850, and quickly because of alarming importance. The insurgents at first proposed only to expel the Tartars; but in March, 1851, a pretender was announced among them, first by the name of Tien-tai (Celestial Virtue), but afterwards assuming other names. He is stated to have been a native of Quang-si, of obscure origin, but to have obtained some literary knowledge at Canton about 1835, and to have become acquainted at that time with the principles of Christianity from a Chinese Christian, named Li, and also from the missionary Roberts in 1840. He announced himself as the restorer of the worship of the true God, Shang-ti, and derived many of his dogmas from the Bible. He declared himself to be the monarch of all beneath the sky, the true lord of China (and thus of all the world), the brother of Jesus, and the second son of God, and demanded universal submission. He made overtures for alliance to Lord Elgin in Nov. 1850. His followers were termed Taiping, "princes of peace," a title utterly belied by their atrocious deeds. The rebellion was virtually terminated, 18 July, 1854, by the capture of Nankin, the stronghold of the Tien-wang, and the execution of the military leaders.

It was headed by the Chinese officers, 12 men out of the crew of 44 being carried off and the national ensign taken down. Sir J. Bowring, governor of Hong-Kong, being compelled to resort to hostilities, applied to India and Ceylon for troops. On 3 March, 1857, the house of commons, by a majority of 24, consented Sir John for the "valiant measures" he had pursued. The ministry (who took his party) dissolved the parliament; but obtained a large majority in the new one.

The first convention was held at Philadelphia in 1785. On 4 Feb. 1787, bishops Provost and White were consecrated at Lambeth. The centenary was celebrated at Lambeth, 4 Feb. 1887. Two American bishops, Lyman and Potter, were present. In 1851 there were 37 bishops; in 1883 there were, in the United States, 48 dioceses, 68 bishops, and 3,559 priests and deacons, see Pan-American Synod.

After much discussion, for several years, the church convention passed a stringent canon against ritualism, 27 Oct. 1877.

CHURCH OF SCOTLAND, see Bishops in Scotland. On the abolition of episcopacy, in 1638, Presbyterianism became the established religion. Its tenets of faith, said to have been compiled by John Knox, in 1560, was approved by the parliament and ratified in 1567, finally settled by an act of the Scottish senate in 1566, and secured by the treaty of union with England in 1707; see Discipline, Patronage, and Bishops. The church is regulated by four courts—the general assembly, the synod, the presbytery, and kirk sessions; see Presbyterians. For important secessions, see Burghers (1733), and Free Church (1843).

The first general assembly of the church was held, no Dec. 1560.

The general assembly constitutes the highest ecclesiastical court in the kingdom; it meets annually in Edinburgh in May, and sits about ten days. It consists of a grand commissioner, appointed by the sovereign, and delegates from presbyteries, royal boroughs, and universities, some being laymen. To this court all appeals from the inferior ecclesiastical courts lie, and its decision is final.

Patronage was abolished after 1 Jan. 1873, by act passed 7 Aug. 1874.

CHURCH-RATES. The maintaining the church in repair belongs to the parishioners, who have the sole power of taxing themselves for the expense when assembled in vestry. The enforcement of payment, which is continually disputed by dissenters and others, belonged to the ecclesiastical courts. Many attempts were made to abolish church-rates before Mr. Gladstone's "Compulsory Church-rate Abolition" Bill, passed 31 July, 1868.

Church Rate Abolition for Scotland repealed in the Commons (204-123) . . . . . 21 July, 1877.

CIRCUMNAVIGATORS. Among the most daring human enterprises at the period when it was first attempted, was the circumnavigation of the earth in 1519-22.

CLANS are said to have arisen in Scotland, in the reign of king Malcolm II., about 1008. The legal power of the chiefs and other remains of heritable jurisdiction were abolished in Scotland, and liberty was granted to clansmen in 1747, in consequence of the rebellion of 1745. The following is a list of all the known clans of Scotland, with the badge of distinction anciently worn by each. The chief of each clan wears two eagle's feathers in his bonnet, in addition to the badge. Chieftains. A history of the clans by Wm. Buchanan was published in 1775-

OLAN-NA-GAEL (brotherhood of Gaels), an Irish secret oath-bound society, originating out of the Fenian brotherhood in 1870, it became the heart of the Irish National League in the United States, of which it was the extreme violent part. Its action much restrained by the influence of Messrs. Farnell, Sexton, and other members of the Irish Parliamentary party who originated a "new departure." It obtained the support of the Irish peasantry by promising to obtain them their farms without rent. The ultimate object of the Olan-na-Gael is said to be the establishment of Ireland as a perfectly independent state; it is termed a dynamite party ("Farnellism and Crime" series III., June, 1887).

For murder of Dr. Cronin, &c., see United States, 1889. The Olan-na-Gael at Chicago, declare against any form of violence . . . . . reported Feb. 1890.

Henry Venn was vicar of Clapham, and several of its eminent members lived there. The sect included Wm. Wilberforce, Zachary Macaulay (father of the historian), and the Rev. W. Romaine.

Memoirs of some appear in Mr. James Stephen's "Ecclesiastical Biography," 1849.

CLARE AND CLARENCE (Suffolk). Richard de Clare, earl of Gloucester, is said to have seated here a monastery of the order of Friars Eremites, the first of this kind of mendicants who came to England, 1248. Tanner. Lionel, third son of Edward III., becoming possessed of the honour of Clare, by marriage, was created duke of Clarence. The title has ever since belonged to a branch of the royal family.

DUKES OF CLARENCE

At the election, held at Ennis, the county town, Mr. Daniel O'Connell was returned, 5 July, 1828. He did not sit till after the passing of the Catholic Emancipation Act, in 1829, being re-elected 30 July, 1829.

CLARE, NUNS OF ST., a sisterhood, called Minorites, founded in Italy by St. Clare and St. Francis d'Assisi, about 1212. They were also called Urbanists; their rule having been modified by pope Urban IV., who died 1264. This order settled in France about 1260, and in England, in the Minorites without Aldgate, London, about 1293, by Blanche, queen of Navarre, wife of Edmund, earl of Lancaster, brother of Edward I. At the suppression, the site was granted to the bishopric of Bath and Wells, 1539. Tanner.

The house was built by sir John Vanbrugh, and was the seat successively of the earl of Clare, of lord Clive, lord Galloway, and the earl of Tyrconnel. It was purchased of Mr. Ellis by government for 65,000*l.* for the prince and princess of Saxe-Coburg; and the former, the late king of Belgium, assigned it to prince Albert in 1840. CLARENDON PRESS, OXFORD. The building was erected by sir John Vanbrugh, in 1711-13, the expense being defrayed out of the profits of lord Clarendon's History of the Rebellion, the copyright of which was given to the university by his son. CLEARING-HOUSE. In 1775, a building in Lombard-street was set apart for the use of bankers, in which they might exchange drafts, bills, and securities, and thereby save labour and curtail the amount of floating cash requisite to meet the settlement of the different houses, if effected simply. By means of transfer tickets, transactions to the amount of millions daily are settled without the intervention of a bank note. In 1861, the clearing-house was used by 117 companies, and in May, 1864, it was joined by the Bank of England. In the year ending 30 April, 1868, 3,257,411,000l. passed through the clearing-house; 30 April, 1873, 6,003,335,000l.; 1877-8, 5,066,533,000l.; 1880-1, 5,006,869,000l.; 31 Dec. 1887, 6,077,097,000l.; 1890, 7,801,000,000l. Also Augustine monks, each of whom having been a superior nine years, then merged into a common monk.—CLEMENTINISM was the adherents of Robert, son of the count of Geneva, who took the title of Clement VII. on the death of Gregory XI., 1378, and Unanims, those of pope Urban VI. The schism ended in 1409, when Alexander V. was elected pope, and his rivals resigned; see Anti-Pope.

CLEOPATRA'S NEEDLE, see Obelisk.

CLEPSYDRA, a water-clock, see Clocks.

CLERGY (from the Greek kleros, a lot or inheritance) in the first century were termed presbyters, elders, or bishops, and deacons. The bishops (episcopos or overseers), elected from the presbyters, in the second century assumed higher functions (about 200), and, under Constantine, obtained the recognition and protection of the monarchical power. Under the Lombard and Norman-French kings in the 7th and 8th centuries, the clergy began to possess temporal power, as owners of lands; and after the establishment of monachism, a distinction was made between the regular clergy, who lived apart from the world, in accordance with a rule or rule, and the secular (parish) or household clergy. The secular clergy took clerk after their names in English documents. See Church of England (note) and Antiquities.

The clergy were and still are, owing to the judges being chosen after the manner of the secular order, and the officers being clerical: this gave them the administration, which they kept to this day: Antiquities.

As the Druids kept the keys of their religion and of letters, so did the priests keep both these to themselves: they alone make profession of letters, and a man of letters was called a clerk, and hence learning went by the name of clericality. Popular.

CLERGY or CLANER, Anglican Clerical, arose in the regard paid by Christian princes to the church, and consisted of: 1st, an exemption of places consecrated to religious duties from criminal actions, which was the foundation of sanctuaries; 2nd, exemption of the persons of clergymen from criminal process before the secular judge, in particular cases, which was the original meaning of this priestly clericalism. The benefit of clergy was afterwards extended to everyone who could read, and it was enacted, that there should be a restrictive allowed to the clergy, that of any man who could read were to be condemned to death, the bishop of the diocese might, if he would, claim him as a clerk, and dispose of him in some places of the clergy as he might deem meet. The ordinary gave the prisoner at the bar a Latin book, in a black Gothic character, from which to read a verse or two, and if the ordinary said, "Lectus est Clericus" ("He reads like a clerk"), the offender was only burnt in the hand, otherwise, he suffered death, 3 Edw. I. (1274). The privilege was restricted by Henry VII. in 1489, and abolished, with respect to murderers and other great criminals, by Henry VIII. 1534. See Shew.

The reading was discontinued by 5 Anne, c. 6 (1700). Benefit of Clergy was wholly repealed by 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 25 (1827).

CLERICAL DISABILITIES, an act passed 9 Aug. 1870, relieves persons who have been admitted priests or deacons of certain clerical disabilities upon their resigning their ecclesiastical offices and preferments, and declares them incapable of officiating henceforward. Up to 31 Dec. 1873, 50 had resigned.

CLERICAL SUBSCRIPTION ACT, 28 & 29 Vict. c. 122, passed 5 July, 1865, simplified and modified the oaths to be taken by the clergy when ordained.

CLERKENWELL, a parish, N. E. London, so called from a well (font clericorum) in Bay-street, where the parish clerks occasionally acted mystery-plays: once before Richard II. in 1390. Hunt's political meetings in 1817 were held in the fields in this parish. In St. John's parish was the residence of the priory of the knights of St. John of Jerusalem. Churchwarden's house was built in 1615, in lieu of the noted priory called the Cole, which was taken down in 1614; the Dean Reverend having been Dean Reverend. The parish belied the House of Deputation, erected in 1773, was rebuilt in 1813; again 1824. For the explosion here, see Parliament, Dec. 1827. At Clerkenwell close formerly stood the house of Oliver Cromwell, where some suppose the death-warrant of Charles I. was signed, Jan. 1649.

CLERMONT (France). Here was held the council under pope Urban II. in 1095, in which the first crusade against the infidels was determined upon, and Godfrey of Bouillon appointed to command it. In this council the name of pope is said to have been first given to the head of the Roman Catholic church, exclusively of the bishops who used previously to assume the title. Philip I. of France was (a second time) excommunicated by this assembly. Herald.

John William, duke of Cleves, Berg, Juliers, &c., died without issue, 25 March, 1609, which led to a war of succession. Eventually Cleves was assigned to the elector of Brandenburg in 1666; seized by the French in 1757; restored at the peace in 1763, and now forms part of the Prussian dominions.

CLIFTON SUSPENSION-BRIDGE, over the Avon, connecting Gloucestershire and Somersetshire, constructed of the removed Hungerford-bridge, was completed in Oct. and opened 8 Dec. 1864. It is said to have the largest span (702 feet) of any chain bridge in the world. In 1753 Alderman Vick, of Bristol, bequeathed 1000*l.* to accumulate for the erection of a bridge over the Avon. In 1831 Brunel began one, which was abandoned after the expenditure of 45,000*l.*

CLOCK. The clepsydra, or water-clock, was introduced at Rome from the east about 158 B.C. by Scipio Nasica. Toothed wheels were applied to them by Ctesibius, about 140 B.C. Clocks said to have been found by Omar on invading Britain, 55 A.D. The only clock supposed to be then in the world was sent by pope Paul I. to Pepin, king of France, A.D. 760. Pappus, archdeacon of Genoa, invented one in the 9th century. Originally the wheels were three feet in diameter. The earliest complete clock of which there is any certain record was made by a Saracen mechanic in the 13th century. Alifred is said to have measured time by wax taper, and to have used lanterns to defend them from the wind, about 887.

CLOGHER (Ireland). St. Macartin, a disciple of St. Patrick, fixed a bishopric at Clogher, where he also built an abbey "in the street before the royal seat of the kings of Ergal." He died in 565. Clogher takes its name from a golden stem, from which, in times of paganism, the druid used to pronounce jagging answers, like the oracles of Apollo Pythian. See James Freeman, Antiquities of the Cathedral was built, 1847, and dedicated to St. John.

monks. Clonfert merged, on the death of its last prelate (Dr. Tollemache), into the archiepiscopal see of Armagh, by the act of 1833.

CLONFERT (Ireland). St. Brendan founded an abbey at Clonfert in 553: his life is extant in the twelfth century in the Cottonian library at Westminster. In his time the cathedral, famous in ancient days for its seven altars, was erected; and Colgan makes St. Brendan its founder and the first bishop; but it is said, in the Ulster Annals, under the year 571, "Mánu, bishop of Clonfert-Brennán, went to rest." Clonfert, in Irish, signifies a wonderful den or retirement. In 1839 the see merged into that of Killaloe; see Bishops.

His son Murchad also fell with many of the nobility; 15,000 Danes are said to have perished in the battle.

CLOSTERSEVEN (Hanover) CONVENTION OF, was entered into 8 Sept. 1757, between the duke of Cumberland, third son of George II., hardly pressed, and the duke of Richelieu, commander of the French. By it 38,000 Hanoverians laid down their arms, and were dispersed. The treaty was disavowed by the king, and soon broken; the duke resigned all his commands.

CLOSURE, see Culture.

CLOTH, see Woollen Cloth and Calico.

CLOTURE, the power of closing a debate in the French chamber of deputies, exercised by the president. A similar power, termed Closure, was given to the speaker of the House of Commons, 11 Nov. 1882: first enforced 24 Feb. 1884; the closure made part of a standing order, 18, 19 March, 1887. By a new rule the power of closure was given to a house of 100. 28 Feb. 1888, and was frequently exercised in 1888, and since. See Parliament.

CLOUD, ST., a palace near Paris, named from prince Clodowig or Cloud, who became a monk there in 533, after the murder of his brothers, and died in 560. The palace was built in the 16th century, and in it Henry III. was stabbed by Clement, 1 Aug. (died 2 Aug.) 1589. This palace, long the property of the dukes of Orleans, was bought by Marie Antoinette in 1785. It was a favourite residence of the empress Josephine, of Charles X. and his family, and of the emperor Napoleon III. It was burnt during the siege of Paris, having been fired upon by the French themselves, 13 Oct. 1870. The ruins were cleared away, and the site sold, July, 1892.

CLOUDS consist of minute particles of water, often in a frozen state, floating in the air. In 1803 Mr. Luke Howard published his classification of clouds, now generally adopted, consisting of three primary forms—cirrus, cumulus, and stratus; three compounds of these forms; and the nimbus or black rain clouds (cumulo-cirro-stratus.) A new edition of Howard's Essay on the Clouds appeared in 1865.

CLOVERHOO (now Cliff), Kent. Here was held an important council of nobility and clergy concerning the government and discipline of the church, Sept. 1427; and others were held here, 800, 801, 802, 804.

CLONFER (A. Franks), a heliopole, founded in the 4th century by St. Clonfer, was in 1433 united to that of Cork, and so continued for 200 years. It was united with that of Cork and Ross, 1834; see Bishops.

CLUBMEN, associations founded in the southern and western counties of England, to restrain the excesses of the armies during the civil wars, 1642-9. They professed neutrality, but inclined towards the king, and were considered enemies by his opponents.

CLUBS, originally consisted of a small number of persons of kindred tastes and pursuits, who met together at stated times for social intercourse. The club at the Mermaid tavern, established about the end of the 16th century, consisted of Raleigh, Shakespeare, and others. Ben Jonson set up a club at the Devil tavern. Addison, Steele, and others, frequently met at Button's coffee-house, as described in the Spectator. The present London clubs, some comprising 500, others about 6000 members, possess handsome luxuriously furnished edifices in or near Pall Mall. The members obtain choice viands and wines at moderate charges, and many clubs possess excellent libraries, particularly the Athenæum (which see). The annual payment varies from 3*s.* 3*d.* to 1*l.* 1*s.*; the entrance fee from 5*l.* 5*s.* to 4*l.* The following are the principal clubs; several are described in separate articles:—

CLUBS, FRENCH. The first arose about 1782. They were essentially political, and greatly concerned in the revolution. The Club Breton became the celebrated Club des Jacobins, and the Club des Cordeliers comprised among its members Danton and Camille Desmoulins. From these two came the Mountain party which overthrew the Girondists in 1793, and fell in its turn in 1794. The clubs disappeared with the Directory in 1799. They were revived in 1848 in considerable numbers, but did not attain to their former eminence, and were suppressed by decrees, 22 June, 1849, and 6 June, 1850. Bouillet.

CLUB-FOOT, a deformity due to the shortening of one or more of the muscles, although attempted to be relieved by Lorenz in 1784, by cutting the tendo Achillis, was not effectually cured till 1831, when Stromeyer of Erlangen cured Dr. Little by dividing the tendons of the contracted muscles with a very thin knife.

CLUGNY or CLUNT, ABBEY OF, in France, formerly most magnificent, founded by Benedictines, under the abbot Bern, about 910, and sustained afterwards by William, duke of Berry and Aquitaine. English foundations for Clunian monks were instituted soon after.

CLYDE AND FORTH WALL was built by Agricola, 84. The Forth and Clyde CANAL was commenced by Mr. Smeaton, 10 July, 1768, and was opened 28 July, 1790. It forms a communication between the seas on the eastern and western coasts of Scotland.

CNIDUS, in Caria, Asia Minor: near here Conon the Athenian defeated the Lacedæmonian fleet, under Peisander, 394 B.C.

COACH (from coche, Spanish). Beckmann states that Charles of Anjou's queen entered Naples in a carrista (about 1282). Under Francis I. there were but two in Paris, one belonging to the queen, the other to Diane, the natural daughter of Henry II. There were but three in Paris in 1550; and Henry IV. had one without straps or springs. John de La Val de Bois-Dauphin set up a coach on account of his enormous bulk. The first coach seen in England was about 1533. Coaches were introduced by Fitz-Alan, earl of Arundel, in 1580. Stow. A bill was brought into parliament to prevent the effeminacy of men riding in coaches, 43 Eliz. 1601. Caria. Repealed 1625. The coach of the duke of Buckingham had six horses, that of the earl of Northumberland eight, 1619. The coach-tax commenced in 1747. Horace Walpole says that the present royal state coach (first used 16 Nov. 1762), cost 7,522. The lord mayor's old state coach was not used 9 Nov. 1867; see Our Carriages, Charvats, Hackney Coaches, Mail Coaches, &c. G. Thrupp's "History of Coaches" published 1877.

A coachmakers' exhibition London, opened 2 June, 1866. A private university teacher is termed a "Coach." Dr. Edward John Routh, of Cambridge, out of 621 pupils produced 27 senior wranglers, 1828-38. On his retirement his old pupils presented his portrait to his wife, 3 Nov. 1868.

COAL.* It is contended, with much seeming truth, that coal, although not mentioned by the Romans in their notions of Britain, was yet in use by the ancient Britons. Brand. Henry III. is said to have granted a licence to dig coals near Newcastle-upon-Tyne in 1234; some say earlier, and others in 1239. Sea-coal was prohibited from being used in and near London, as being "prejudicial to human health;" and even smiths were obliged to burn wood, 1273. Stow. In 1306 the gentry petitioned against its use. Coal was first made an article of trade from Newcastle to London, 4 Rich. II. 1381. Rymer's Fodera. Notwithstanding the many previous complaints against coal as a public nuisance, it was at length generally burned in London in 1400; but it was not in common use in England until the reign of Charles I. 1645. Coal was brought to Dublin from Newry in 1742.

* There are five kinds of fossil fuel; anthracite, coal, lignite, bituminous shale, and bitumens. No satisfactory definition of coal has yet been given. The composition of coal is 49% carbon, 5% hydrogen, 11% oxygen, 4% ash, &c. The plan adopted for obtaining the value of the coal produced was changed in 1882.

COAL EXCHANGE, London, established by 47 Geo. III. c. 66 (1807). The present building (a most interesting structure) was erected by Mr. J. B. Ranning, and opened by prince Albert 30 Oct. 1849.

COAL-WHITFRAV BOARD, to protect the men employed in mining coal-mines from pellagra, formed by an act of parliament in 1843, lasted till 1856, when the coal-owners themselves established a whitting office.

COAL DUES, on coal entering the port of London for mortgage are mentioned in 1444. The right of the Corporation to 4d. per chaldron was established in 1591. The amount of the tax and the term of levying it have been frequently changed since 1694. In 1831, the tax was directed to be levied on all coals entering London by water or railways, to be regulated by weight and not by measure. The tax of 13d. per ton by the act of 1856 extended to 5 July, 1889. The receipts in 1885 amounted to 449,343*l*. Latterly the money has been expended on extensive City improvements. Much discussion on the subject, 1887-9.

An act for the abolition of these dues received the royal assent 9 July, 1889. Provision was made for the continuance of these dues another year to enable the corporation to pay debts due for the Holborn Viaduct and various city improvements. They ceased 5 July, 1890.

COALITIONS AGAINST FRANCE generally arose through England subsidizing the great powers of the continent. See Twentieth.

COAST GUARD. In 1895, the mining and smelting this body was transferred to the ad-ministry. A coast brigade of artillery was established in Nov. 1859.—COAST VOLUNTEERS, see under NAVY OF ENGLAND. The importance of electric boat communication in time of storm, &c., was much discussed in 1892. The government agreed to appoint a royal commission on the subject, 20 April, 1892, which met 18 June, see Lighthouses.

COASTING TRADE of Great Britain thrown open to all nations by 17 Vict. c. 5, 1854.

COBALT, a rare mineral found among the veins of ores, or in the fissures of stone, at an early date, in the mines of Cornwall, where the workmen call it mundic. Hill. It was distinguished as a metal by Brandt, in 1733.

COBDEN CLUB, instituted to spread and develop Cobden's principles; held first dinner, W. E. Gladstone in the chair, 21 July, 1866. The statue of Richard Cobden, at Camden Town, was inaugurated, 27 June, 1868. 12 out of 14 cabinet ministers were members July, 1880.

At a meeting of the club, 11 May, 1890, earl Granville in the chair, an address was presented to Mr. T. B. Potter, chairman for 24 years, and Mr. W. E. Gladstone gave a discourse on free trade.

COBURG, see Sea Coburg.

COCA, a powerful narcotic existing in the Erythroxylon Coca, a South American plant known in 1580; men taking a little of this are enabled to endure hard labour without any food for six or seven days and nights. Dr. Mantegazza's price essay in German was published at Vienna in 1849. Cocaine, an anesthetic obtained from this plant, said to be very efficacious in ophthalmic and other delicate surgical operations in 1884.

COCCEIANS, a small sect founded by John Cocceius, of Bremen, in the seventeenth century. He held, amongst other opinions, that of a visible reign of Christ in this world, after a general conversion of the Jews and all other people to the Christian faith. He died in 1665.

COCHEREL (near Evreux, N. W. France). Here Bertrand du Guesclin defeated the king of Navarre, and took prisoner the capital de Buch, 16 May, 1364.

COCHIN (India), held by the Portuguese, 1503; by the Dutch, 1663; by Hyder Ali, 1776; taken by the British, 1796; ceded to them, 1814.—COCHIN CHINA, see ANAM.

COCHINEAL INSECT (Coccus cacti), deriving its colour from feeding on the cactus, became known to the Spaniards soon after their conquest of Mexico in 1518. Cochineal was brought to Europe about 1523, but was not known in Italy in 1548, although the art of dyeing then flourished there. In 1858 it was cultivated successfully in Teneriffe, the vines having failed through disease. 360,000 lbs. of cochineal were imported into England in 1830; 1,081,776 lbs. in 1845; 2,360,000 lbs. in 1850; 3,034,976 lbs. in 1859; 47,790 cwt. in 1870; and 32,094 cwt. in 1877; 27,952 cwt. in 1879; 30,017 cwt. in 1881; 21,440 cwt. in 1883; 10,009 cwt. in 1887; 7,826 cwt. in 1890. The use of cochineal has been much replaced by the coal tar colours. Duty repealed 1845.

COCKER'S ARITHMETIC. Edward Cocker, an eminent person, born 1631, died 1675, compiled a book which first appeared in 1677, edited by John Hawkins.

COCK-FIGHTING, practised by the Greeks, was brought by the Romans into England. William Fitz-Stephen, in the reign of Henry II., describes cock-fighting as the sport of school-boys on Shrove-Tuesday. It was prohibited by Edward III. 1365; by Henry VIII.; and by Cromwell, 1653, and latterly in 1849. Part of the site of Drury-lane theatre was a cock-pit in the reign of James I.; and the Cock-pit at Whitehall was erected by Charles II. Formerly there was a Cock-pit-Royal in St. James's Park; but the governors of Christ's Hospital would not renew the lease for the building. * Cock-fighting is now forbidden by law. On 22 April, 1865, 34 persons were fined at Marlborough-street police-office, for being present at a cock-fight. It was popular in New York, 1873.

COCK-LANE GHOST, an imposition practised by William Parsons, his wife, and daughter, by means of a female ventriloquist, during 1760 and 1761, at No. 33, Cock-lane, London, was at length detected, and the parents were condemned to the pillory and imprisonment, 10 July, 1762.

COCOA or CACAO, the kernel or seed of Theobroma cacao (Linn.), was introduced into this country shortly after the discovery of Mexico, where it is an article of diet. From cocoa is produced chocolate. The cocoa imported into the United Kingdom, chiefly from the British West Indies and Guiana, was in 1849, 1,989,477 lbs.; in 1855, 7,343,458 lbs.; in 1861, 9,080,288 lbs.; in 1866, 10,308,298 lbs.; in 1870, 14,793,950 lbs.; in 1876, 20,443,591 lbs.; in 1877, 17,056,304 lbs.; in 1879, 26,155,788 lbs.; in 1883, 22,668,161 lbs.; in 1887, 27,352,568 lbs.; in 1890, 28,112,210 lbs.

COCOA-NUT TREE (Cocos nucifera, Linn.), supplies the Indians with almost all they need, as bread, water, wine, vinegar, brandy, milk, oil, honey, sugar, needles, clothes, thread, cups, spoons, basins, baskets, paper, mats for ships, sails, cordage, nails, covering for their houses, &c. Ray. In Sept. 1829, Mr. Soames patented his mode of procuring stearine and elaine from cocoa-nut oil. It is said that 32 tons of candles have been made in a month from these materials at the Belmont works, Lambeth.

CODES, see Laws. Atrrenus Varus, the civilian, first collected the Roman laws about 66 A.C.; and Servius Sulpicius, the civilian, embodied them about 53 A.C. The Gregorian and Hermogenian codes were published A.D. 290; the Theodosian code commenced by order of Theodosius II. in 429; and published for the eastern empire in 438. In 447 he transmitted to Valentinian his new constitutions promulgated as the law of the west in 448. The celebrated code of the emperor Justinian in 529—a digest from this last made in 533; see Basiliens. Alfred's code, a selection from existing laws, is the foundation of the common law of England, 887.—The Code Napoleon, the civil code of France, was promulgated from 1803 to 1810. The emperor considered it his most enduring monument. It was prepared under his supervision by the most eminent jurists, from the 400 systems previously existing, and has been adopted by other countries.

A conference of jurists and publicists to consider an international code held at Brussels, July, Aug. 1874.

CODEX, see under Bible, Alexandrian, &c.

* Mr. Ardesoff, a gentleman of large fortune and great hospitality, who was almost unrivalled in the splendour of his equipages, had a favourite cock, upon which he had won many profitable matches. The last wager he laid upon this cock he lost, which so enraged him, that in a fit of passion he thrust the bird into the fire. A delicious fever, the result of his rage and intemperance, in three days put an end to his life. He died at Tottenham, near London, 4 April, 1788.

CODFISH, see Holland, 1347.

COD-LIVER OIL was recommended as a remedy for chronic rheumatism by Dr. Percival in 1782, and for diseases of the lungs about 1833. De Jongh's treatise on cod-liver oil was published in Latin, 1844; in English, 1849.

COERCION BILLS, see Ireland, 1861 and 1887.

COEUR DE LION or THE LION-HEARTED, a surname given to Richard I. of England, on account of his courage, about 1192; and also to Louis VIII. of France, who signalled himself in the crusades, and in his wars against England, about 1223.

COFFEE. The tree was conveyed from Mecca in Arabia to Holland about 1616; and carried to the West Indies in 1726. First cultivated at Surinam by the Dutch, 1718. The culture was encouraged in the plantations about 1732, and the British and French colonies now grow coffee abundantly. Its use as a beverage is traced to the Persians. It came into great repute in Arabia Felix, about 1454; and passed thence into Egypt and Syria, and thence (in 1511) to Constantinople, where a coffee-house was opened in 1551. M. Thevenot, the traveller, first brought it to France, 1662. Chambers. See Coffeine.

Coffee brought into England by Mr. Nathaniel Canopus, a Cretan, who made it his common beverage at Balliol college, Oxford. Anderson. 1642. The first coffee-house in England was kept by a Jew, named Jacobs, in Oxford. 1650. Mr. Edwards, an English Turkey merchant, brought home with him Pasquet, a Greek servant, who opened the first coffee-house in London, in George-yard, Lombard-street. 1652. Pasquet afterwards went to Holland, and opened the first house in that country. Anderson. * Rainbow coffee-house, Temple bar, represented as a nuisance. 1657. Coffee-houses suppressed by proclamation, 1675; the order revoked on petition of the traders. 1676. Licences to sell coffee abolished. 1869. Duty on coffee reduced to 1s. 6d. the pound from 2s. 6d. 1 May, 1872.

The quantity of coffee imported into these realms in 1852, 54,935,510 lbs.; in 1850, 82,767,746 lbs.; in 1866, 127,044,816 lbs.; in 1873, 183,327,576 lbs.; in 1876, 1,261,802 cwts.; in 1877, 1,506,454 cwts.; in 1879, 1,620,384 cwts.; in 1883, 1,407,734 cwts.; in 1887, 1,045,698 cwts.; in 1890, 864,454 cwts. Coffee Palaces, founded by Dr. Barnardo to replace public-houses for working-men. The "Edinburgh Castle," Limehouse, the first opened, 1873; the "Dublin Castle," Mile End. 1876. Coffee Taverns, many opened in London. 1877-1889. Coffee Public-house National Society, formed April, 1879; opened a house at Shadwell. 28 June, 1879. Coffee disease prevalent in Ceylon, &c. autumn, 1882. M. Raoul reports the destructive, nearly universal ravages of Hemilia Vestralis. June, 1888.

COFFERER OF THE HOUSEHOLD, formerly an officer of state, and a member of the privy council, who had special charge of the other officers of the household. Sir Henry Cooke was cofferer to queen Elizabeth. In 1782 the office was suppressed.

COFFINS. Athenian heroes were buried in coffins of cedar; owing to its aromatic and incorruptible qualities. Thucydides. Coffins of marble and stone were used by the Romans. Alexander is said to have been buried in one of gold; and glass coffins have been found in England. Gowd. Patent coffins were invented in 1795; air-tight metal coffins advertised at Birmingham in 1867.

COIF. The surcoat's coif was introduced before 1259, to hide the tonsure of such clergy-men as chose to remain advocates in the secular courts, notwithstanding their prohibition by statute.

conferred at the university of Paris, 1240; but some authorities say not before 1215. In England, it is contended that this date is much higher, and some hold that Bala obtained a degree formally at Cambridge, and John de Beverley at Oxford, and that they were the first doctors of these universities; see Cambridge, Oxford, Aberdeen, Queen's College, Heriot's, Working Men's College, Preceptors, &c.

Scott Archer, and announced in the "Chemist," in March, 1851. On the premature death of himself and wife, a pension of 50l. per annum was granted by government to his three orphan children.

COLON (i). The colon and period were adopted by Thrasymachus about 373 B.C. (Suidas), and known to Aristotle. The colon and semicolon (:) first used in British literature in the 16th century. For Colon, a S. American seaport, see Panama.

COLONEL (from Italian colonna, a column), the highest regimental military officer. The term had become common in England in the 16th century.

COLONIAL, see under Colonies.

COLONIES. The Phœnician and Greek colonies, frequently founded by political exiles, soon became independent of the mother country. The Roman colonies, on the contrary, continued in close connection with Rome itself; being governed almost entirely by military law.—The COLONIES OF GREAT BRITAIN partake of both these characters. The N. American colonies revolted in consequence of the attempt at taxation without their consent in 1764. The loyal condition of the present colonies now is due to the gradual relaxation of the pressure of the home government. The population of the British colonies in all parts of the world was estimated, in 1861, at 142,952,243; in 1888, 275,520,216. The revenue of the colonies was estimated in 1865 to be 51,402,000*l.*, the expenditure, 59,375,000*l.* The act for the abolition of slavery in the British colonies, and for compensation to the owners of slaves (20,000,000*l.* sterling), was passed in 1833. All the slaves throughout the British colonies were emancipated on 1 Aug. 1834. Germany and other powers showed great desire for colonization in 1884-5. See Holland.

E. J. Payne's "History of European Colonies" (1877) is good.

Resolution of House of Commons recognises the claims of colonies to protection from consequences of imperial policy, but "is of opinion that colonies exercising rights of self-government ought to undertake the main responsibility of providing for their own internal order and security, and ought to assist in their own external defence."

The committee of the commons on colonization appointed in 1882; Sir James Ferguson, chairman, issued a report, with sensible recommendations, about 18 March, 1882.

Marke's "Colonia Gentry," vol. I. first published Sept. 1882. See Diagrams (Colonial), Imperial Defence, Imperial Institutions, Overseas and separate articles.

COLORADO (so called from its coloured ranges), a territory of the United States of North America, was organized 2 March, 1861; proclaimed 24 Aug. 1876; capital, Denver City. Population in 1880, 104,317; 1890, 412,198.

Gold found here, 1858, yield up to 1878, nearly 2 tons pure gold; 170 tons silver, and much copper and lead. Colorado Mountains, so called from its striped coloring, was first found in Wisconsin, was described by Thomas Say, and named Dryophora demissa, in 1804, when he found it near the Upper Missouri. It soon took to feeding on potatoes, as they were planted, and gradually proceeded eastward through Nebraska, Iowa, Illinois, Ohio, &c., to the New England states, destroying the crops, 1840 & seq. In 1872 it reached New York, and the Atlantic seaboard in 1874, swarming there in 1876, and attacking Canada. The fear of its invading Britain led to an order in council respecting its destruction, Dec. 14 Aug. 1877. Very few specimens arrived.

COLLOSSEUM, see Coliseum. The building in Regent's Park, London, was planned by Mr. Horner, a land surveyor, and commenced in 1824, by Peter and Grissell, from designs by Decimus Burton. The chief portion was a polygon of 16 faces, 126 feet in diameter externally; the walls were three feet thick at the ground: the height to the glazed dome 112 feet. On the convex walls of the dome was painted the panoramic view of London, completed in 1825 from sketches by Mr. Horner taken from the summit of St. Paul's cathedral in 1821-2. The picture covered above 46,000 square feet, more than an acre of canvas. The different parts were combined by Mr. E. T. Parris, who in 1845 repainted the whole. In 1858 a panorama of Paris was exhibited, succeeded, in 1860, by the lake of Thun in Switzerland; in 1861 the panoramas of London was reproduced. In 1862 the theatre, with the panorama of Lisbon, was added. In 1863, when Mr. Horner failed, the establishment was sold for 40,000l. to Messrs. Braham and Yates. In 1864 it was bought by Mr. D. Managor for 23,000 guineas. Flank. After having been long closed, the building was opened to the public at Christmas, 1864, at one shilling. Under the charge of Dr. Bucklethorpe, it continued open till the spring of 1866, when it was again closed. The whole building was abandoned 1870. It was announced in Dec. 1871, that a company was about to transform the building and present into club-chambers, bath, & winter garden, &c. In 1872, it was sold; large suggestions have been made on the site.

COLLOSSEUM of Rome, a true wonder of Art, nearly 200 ft. high, contained one of the wonders of the world; was erected at the foot of the Palatine Hill, at the end of the city, by Emperor of Augustus, about 70 B.C. It was burned down by an earthquake about 100 A.D. The figure is said originally to have stood upon two tables, a leg being extended on each side of the between, so that a vessel in full sail could enter between. The statue was in ruins for nearly nine centuries and had never been repaired; when the Saracens, taking Rhodes, pulled it to pieces, and sold the metal, weighing 700,000 lbs., to a Jew, who is said to have loaded 900 camels in transporting it to Alexandria about 653. Dugressory.

COLOUR is to light what pitch is to sound, according to the undulatory theory of Huyghens (about 1678), established by Dr. T. Young, and others. The shade varies according to the number of vibrations. 458 millions of millions of vibrations in a second attributed to the red end of the spectrum; to the violet, 727; see Spectrum. See Blue-Books for National official colours.

COLSTON DAY, Nov. 13, see Bristol.

COLUMBIA, a federal district round the city of Washington in Maryland; established 1800. Slavery was abolished in 1862. Population in 1880, 177,524; 1890, 230,392; see British Columbia.

COLUMBIA MARKET, Bethnal Green, E. London; erected by Mr. Darbishire, architect, in the pointed Gothic style, and inaugurated by Miss (now lady) Burdett-Goutts, the proprietor, 26 April, 1860. It cost her 300,000l. It was opened as a wholesale fish-market, 21 Feb. 1870, but was not successful. On 3 Nov. 1871, lady Burdett-Goutts presented the market to the corporation of London, and on 18 July, 1872, she received publicly the freedom of that city.

The market did not succeed, and the buildings were restored to the donor 4 Dec. 1874. Again opened on liberal terms under superintendence of Great Eastern, Great Northern, and Midland railway companies 23 Dec. 1875. Reported failure; proposed use as a co-operative store. April, 1876. Re-opened as a fish-market. 17 July, 1882. Connected with N. London Railway. April, 1883.

COLUMBIUM, a metal discovered by C. Hatchett, in a mineral named columbite, in 1801. It is identical with niobium, and not with tantalum, as supposed by some chemists. Watts.

COLUMBUS, capital of Ohio, U.S.A., founded in 1812, is the seat of important manufactures. Population, 1870, 31,274; 1890, 88,150.

COMBAT, SINGLE. Trial by this commenced by the Lombards, 650. Darwin. It was introduced into England for accusations of treason, if neither the accused nor the accused could produce good evidence; see Appeal of Battle.

A battle by single combat was fought before the king, William II, and the peers, between Geoffrey Baynard and William, earl of Eu, who was accused by Baynard of high treason; and Baynard having conquered, Eu was deemed convicted, and blinded and mutilated, 1066.

A combat proposed between Henry of Bolingbroke, Duke of Hereford (afterwards Henry IV.) and Thomas, Duke of Norfolk, was decided by Richard II. Sept. 1399.

A trial was appointed between the prior of Kilmaculm and the earl of Ormond, the former having intercepted the letter of high treason, quarrel taken up by the king, decided without fighting, 1446.

* Some persons (about 600,000 of 1714) cannot distinguish between colours, and are termed Colour Blind. The defect said to have been first described by Fyrmouth, Phil. Trans. 1777. In 1839, professor J. Clark Maxwell invented substances to remedy this defect, which is also called "colour blindness," after John Dalton, the chemist, to whom credit is given for the discovery. Dr. George Wilson, "Monographs on Colour Blindness," 1861. Dr. Ray Foster, "Colour Blindness," 1879.

A combat was proposed between Lord Ross and Mr. David Ramsay, in 1794, but the king prevented it. A combat in Dublin ensued, before the lords justices and council, between Connor MacDonnell O'Connor and Tully Mac-Gilpatrick O'Connor, the former had his head cut off, and presented to the lords, 1753.

COMBINATION. Laws were enacted from the time of Edward I. downwards, regulating the price of labour and the relations between masters and workmen, and prohibiting the latter from combining for their own protection. All these laws were repealed, 6 Geo. IV. c. 129, in 1825, due protection being given to both parties. The act was amended in 1839 by 22 Vict. c. 34, when the subject was much discussed, in consequence of the strike in the building trades, see Sheffield and Strikes.

COMBS, found in Pompeii; Combmakers' company incorporated, 1636 or 1650.

COMÉDIE FRANÇAISE, Paris, established 1680.

At the death of Molière in 1673, his company of actors, at the Palais Royal, separated into two bodies. The Fusion of these formed the French National Theatre, founded by Louis XIV. by a decree 18 Aug., first performance 25 Aug. 1680: the actors 15 men, and 22 women, being the best of the time. The theatre was much depressed in the king's last years; revived under Louis XV., ceased in 1793; restored in 1803.

The company visited London in 1879: first appearance at the Gaiety, 2 June, 1879. eminent actors, Madame Sarah Bernhardt, MM. Got, Delannay, and Coquelin, and Miles. Brohan and Favart.

The 50th anniversary of the establishment celebrated 31 Oct., at 29 1880.

COMEDY. Thalia is the muse of comedy and lyric poetry. Suerion and Dolon, the inventors of theatrical exhibitions, 578 B.C., performed the first comedy at Athens, on a wagon or movable stage, on four wheels, for which they were rewarded with a basket of figs and a cask of wine; see Arundelian Marbles, and Drama.

Comedy, for libel, prohibited at Athens, 440 B.C. Aristophanes called the prince of ancient comedy, 434 B.C., and Menander that of the new, 340 B.C.

At Plautus, 20 comedies are extant, he flourished 200 B.C. Silius Italicus wrote upwards of 30 comedies; flourished at Rome 170 B.C.

Comedies of Lucius and Terence first acted 154 B.C. First regular comedy performed in England about A.D. 1551.

It was said of Sheridan that he wrote the best comedy (the School for Scandal), the best opera (the Duenna), and the best afterpiece (the Critic), in the English language (1775-1779).

COMETS (Greek, comæ, a hair). It is recorded that more than 600 have been seen. Mr. Hind, in his little work on comets, gave a chronological list (1852). The identity and periodicity of comets are considered in Mr. d. F. Chambers' Handbook of Astronomy, 1830-39, and in Mr. W. T. Lyman's Celestial Mechanics, 1891. The number of comets within the solar system, visible and invisible, is believed to be enormous. Aristotle described the probable course of a comet which appeared A.C. 370. Apian described Halley's comet, 1531. Amédée Guillemin's "World of Comets," by J. Glaisher, published 1877.

At the birth of the great Mithridates two (probably only one) large comets appeared, which were seen for seventy-two days together, whose splendour eclipsed that of the mid-day sun, and occupied the fourth part of the heavens, about 125 B.C. Justin.

A grand comet seen, 125. Its tail is said to have extended over the whole of the sky, and to have reappeared in 1575, with diminished splendour; and was expected to appear again about Aug. 1851 or Aug. 1864. Hind.

A remarkable one seen in England, June, 1317. Shaw.

Tycho-Brahe demonstrated that comets are independent of our atmosphere, about 1577.

A comet which terrified the people from its near approach to the earth was visible from 1 Nov. 1577 to 1 March, 1580. It enabled Newton to demonstrate that comets, as well as planets, are subject to the law of gravitation, and most probably move in elliptic orbits, 1704.

A most brilliant comet appeared in 1769, which passed within two millions of miles of the earth. This beautiful comet, moving with immense swiftness, was seen in London; its tail stretched across the heavens like a prodigious luminous arc, 35,000,000 miles in length. The computed length of this which appeared in 1769, and which was so remarkably conspicuous, was, on 15 Oct. according to the late Dr. Herschel, upwards of 100,000,000 miles, and its apparent greatest breadth, at the same time, 15,000,000 miles. It was visible all the autumn to the naked eye. Philos. Trans. Royal Soc. for 1812. Another comet, Dec. 1823.

HALLEY'S COMET, 1682. Named after one of the greatest astronomers of England. He first proved that many of the appearances of comets were but the periodical returns of the same bodies, and he demonstrated that the comet of 1682 was the same with the comet of 1456, 1531, and 1607, deducing this fact from a minute observation of the length of time which appeared in 1682, and being struck by its wonderful resemblance to the comets described as having appeared in those years. Halley, therefore, first fixed the identity of comets, and predicted their periodical returns. Venus's Astronomy. The revolution of Halley's comet is performed in about 75 years: it appeared (as he had predicted) in 1759, and came to its perihelion on March 13. Its last appearance was 1835; its next will be 1910.

KNOX'S COMET. First discovered by M. Pons, 26 Nov. 1818, but justly named by astronomers after Professor Knorr, for his success in detecting its orbit, motions, and perturbations; it is, like the preceding, one of the three comets which have appeared according to prediction, and its revolutions are made in 3 years and 15 weeks. Thirtieth return observed at Copenhagen by M. d'Arrest, 30 July, 1863, observed in England, 14 Oct. 1871; seen 13 April, 1875; in New South Wales, 3 Aug. 1878; visible at Washington, &c., 18-21 Sept. 1861.

BIELA'S COMET has been an object of fear to many on account of the nearness with which it has approached, not the earth, but a point of the earth's path; it was first discovered by M. Biela, an Austrian officer, 26 Feb. 1826. It is one of the three comets whose re-appearance was predicted, its revolution being performed in 6 years and 13 weeks. Its second appearance was in 1832, when the time of its perihelion passage was 27 Nov.; its third was in 1839; its fourth in 1845; and its fifth in 1852; it has since vanished.

DONATI'S COMET, so called from its having been first observed by Dr. Donati, of Florence, 2 June, 1858, being then calculated to be 225,000,000 miles from our earth. It was very brilliant in England in the end of September and October following, when the tail was said to be 40,000,000 miles long. On the 20th of October it was nearest to the earth. On the 18th it was near enough to collision with Venus. Our eyes were so to this comet's brilliancy compared with that of 1811.

THE GREAT COMET OF 1861 was first seen by Mr. Tebbel at Sydney, in Australia, 13 May; by M. Goldschmidt and others in France and England on 30, 30 June. The nucleus was about 400 miles in diameter, with a long bush-like tail, travelling at the rate of 20,000,000 miles in 24 hours. On 30 June, it was suggested that we were in the tail—there being "a phosphorescent arc of light."

A tailless comet was discovered in the constellation Ophiuchus, by M. Seeling, at Athens, on 2 Feb., and by M. Tempel, at Mannheim, 2 and 3 July, 1864.

A comet detected at Harvard by Mr. Tuttle, 28 July, and by Ross, at Bonn, on 27 July, 1866. It was visible by the naked eye in August and September.

A fine comet appeared in the southern hemisphere, and was visible in South America and Australia, 1866, Feb. 1865.

Schlesinger, of Berlin, discovered that the August meteor was seen in at least almost identical with the third comet of 1865.

The comet of 1865 is said to be connected with the November meteor.

COMMERCE early flourished in Arabia, Egypt, and among the Phœnicians, see the description of Tyre, 588 A.C., Ezek. xviii. In later times it was spread over Europe by a confederacy of maritime cities, 1241 (see Hanse Towns); by the discoveries of Columbus; and by the enterprises of the Dutch and Portuguese; see Expositio, Importa, et articuli connecti cum his subjectis.

The first treaty of commerce made by England with any foreign nation was entered into with the Flemings, 1 Edw. I. 1272. The second was with Portugal and Spain, 1 Edw. II. 1328. Anderson; see Treaties Harleian's Collection, in 16 vols. 8vo, published 1828-35, has a copious index. An important commercial treaty was concluded with France (see French Treaty) 1860.

Chambers of Commerce originated at Marselles in the 14th century, and similar chambers were instituted in all the chief cities in France, about 1700. These chambers suppressed in 1791; restored by decree 3 Sept. 1851.

A chamber of commerce was started by John Wickett, merchant, he receiving payment, about 1782. The chamber of commerce at Glasgow was established 1783; at Edinburgh, 1785. Manchester, 1800; Hull, 1827; at Liverpool (mainly through the exertions of Professor Leone Levi) 1849.

COMMISSION, see High Commission, Court of.

COMMISSIONNAIRES, street messengers in Paris. Those in London were originally pensioned soldiers wounded either in the Crimea or India, first employed in the west-end. They were appointed by a society, founded in Feb. 1859 by capt. Edward Walter, which is now under the patronage of the queen and the commander-in-chief. The charges are regulated by a tariff. In Jan. 1861 the society commenced the gratuitous issue of a Monthly Advertising Circular. In March, 1864, there were 250 commissionnaires in London; in Nov. 1866, about 340; in Oct. 1872, 500; in Feb. 1887, 1,650; 1 Jan. 1892, 1,880. On 17 June, 1865, capt. Edward Walter resigned, and a permanent system of administration was formed. In 1865 commissionnaires were first engaged as private night-watchmen. A testimonial (piece of plate) from the officers of the army and navy was presented to Captain Walter, 14 June, 1884; knighted, 1887. Commissionnaires have been introduced in the colonies, beginning at Sydney, Feb. 1888.

COMMITTEES, Standing and Grand, were directed to be appointed by the new rules for procedure passed by the House of Commons in 1882, for facilitating the progress of legislation. The first grand committee (on trade, shipping, &c.) met 9 April, 1883; another (on law, &c.) soon after. These Committees were re-appointed by the new rule (r. 1). March 1888, and since.

COMMON COUNCIL OF LONDON. The city parliament, consists of 206 members elected annually on St. Thomas' day, 21 Dec. by the freemen householders of the 26 wards and their aldermen. This court, which appears to have been gradually organized in the 12th century, is mentioned in a charter granted by John, 1214. See Plough Monday. A Common Hall is held occasionally. The common council supported the prince of Orange in 1688, and queen Caroline in 1820.

COMMON LAW OF ENGLAND, an ancient collection of unwritten maxims and customs (leges non scripte), of British, Saxon, and Danish origin, which has subsisted immemorially in this kingdom; and although somewhat impaired by the rude shock of the Norman conquest, has weathered the violence of the times. At the parliament of Merton, 1236, "all the earls and barons," says the parliament roll, "with one voice answered, that they would not change the laws of England, which have hitherto been used and approved;" eminently the law of the land; see Bestard. The process, practice, and mode of pleading in the superior courts of common law, were amended in 1852 and 1854.

COMMON PLEAS, COURT OF, IN ENGLAND, in ancient times followed the king's person, and is distinct from that of the King's Bench; but on the grant of Magna Charta by king John, in 1215, it was fixed at Westminster. In 1833 the mode of procedure in all the superior courts was made uniform. In England, no barrister under the degree of esquire could plead in the court of common pleas; but in 1846 the privilege was extended to barristers practising in the superior courts at Westminster. Sat last, July, 1875. The Common Pleas division of the high court of justice now consists of the chief justice and four judges. See Supreme Court.

COMMON PRAYER, BOOK OF, was ordered by parliament to be printed in the English language on 1 April, 1548. It was voted out of doors by parliament, and the Directory (which see) set up in its room in 1644, and a proclamation was issued against it in 1647. With a few changes the English Common Prayer-book is used by the episcopal churches in Scotland, Ireland, and North America.

The King's Primer published
First book of Edward VI. printed . . . 7 March, 1548

"Six Ranges as Commons Preservation," were granted. It is stated that there are 900,000 acres of commons and wastes of cultivation in England and Wales.

Act for the regulation of commons, passed 21 Aug. 1874. Mr. de Morgan, active opponent of enclosure, imprisoned for contempt of court (The Bells). Jan. Metropolitan Board of Works authorized to secure commons, &c. by act passed 16 Aug. 1878. About 14,000 acres of land near London preserved by the agency of the Commons Preservation Society reported at the annual meeting on 20 Dec. 1896.

By the Ranges Act, passed in 1871, power was given to any lord of the manor to acquire possession of any part of any common over which his rights extend, in order that the secretary of state for war may establish ranges for rifle practice, &c., with regulations.

COMMONWEALTH OF ENGLAND, the term applied to the interregnum between the death of Charles I. and the restoration of Charles II. A republic was established at the execution of Charles I., 30 Jan. 1649, a new oath called the "Engagement" was framed, which all officials were obliged to take. Salmon. Oliver Cromwell was made protector, 16 Dec. 1653; succeeded by his son Richard, 3 Sept. 1658. Monarchy was restored 8 May, and Charles II. entered London, 29 May, 1660. For the COMMONWEALTH OF AUSTRALIA, see Australasia.

COMMUNALISTS, or COMMUNISTS, propose to divide France into about a thousand small thoroughly independent states, with councils elected by all the population, Paris to be the ruling head. They declare that capital and its holders must be adapted to nobler uses, or cease to exist. Their creed is stated to be atheism and materialism. They are intimately connected with the International Society of workmen (see Workmen), and with the communists or socialists (1871-3).†

COMMUNES, in France, are territorial divisions under a mayor. In the 11th century the name was given to combinations of citizens, favoured by the crown, against the exactions of the nobles. In 1356 Stephen Marcel, during the English invasion, vainly endeavoured to establish a confederation of sovereign cities, having Paris as the governing head; and for six months it was really governed by a commune in 1588. After the insurrection of July, 1789, the revolutionary committee which replaced the city council took the name of "commune of Paris." Pétion being mayor. It met at the Hôtel de Ville, and was definitively constituted, 21 May, 1791. It had great power under Robespierre, and fell with him 17 July, 1794; being replaced by twelve municipalities. The commune of Paris was proclaimed 28 March, 1871, during the insurrection, which began 18 March, and ended with the capture of the city by the government troops, 28 May following. 3245 communists were pardoned by decrees issued 17 Jan. 1879; and many others afterwards. A number re-entered Paris, 4 September following. For the events of the communal rule in Paris, see France, 1871. See Socialism.

† By this oath they swore to be true and faithful to the Commonwealth, without king or house of lords. The statues of Charles were next day demolished, particularly that at the Royal Exchange, and one at the west end of St. Paul's; and in their room the following inscription was conspicuously set up:—"Erit Tyrannus Reipublice vitium, Anno Libertatis Anglica Constitutio Prima, Anno Dom. 1649, Jan. 30."

‡ M. Dumas, in opposing the amnesty, 17 May, 1874, asserted that the outbreak was organized by about 2000 communists and 1200 bourgeois; 20,000 persons were imprisoned (20,000 tried; 25,000 discharged). See France.

COMMUNION, a name given to the ordinance of the Lord's supper, 1 Cor. x. 16. Communion under the form of bread alone is said to have had its rise in the west, under pope Urban II., 1096. The cup was first denied to the laity by the council of Constance, 1414-18. The fourth Lateran council, 1215, decreed that every believer should receive the communion at least at Easter. The communion service of the church of England was set forth in 1549.

COMORO ISLANDS, see Madagascar, 1891.

COMPANIES. The London trade companies were gradually formed out of the trade or craft guilds, mainly by the exertions of Walter Harvey, mayor, in 1272, who is said to have been very active in enlarging and maintaining the liberties and privileges of the city. The original religious element in the companies gradually disappeared. Among the earliest commercial companies in England may be named the Steel-yard society, established 1232. The second company was the merchants of St. Thomas à Becket, in 1248. Stow. The Merchant Adventurers, incorporated by Elizabeth, 1564. The following are the city companies of London; the first twelve are the chief, and are styled "the Honourable." Many companies are extinct, and many dates are doubtful. An inquiry into their affairs was partially resisted by them in 1835. In 1860 the gross income of the endowed charities of the city companies was stated to be above 99,000*l*. A motion in the Commons for inquiry into the revenue and other affairs of 89 companies, by Mr. W. H. James, withdrawn, 23 May, 1876. A commission of inquiry was appointed (the earl of Derby, duke of Bedford, lords Coleridge and Sherbrooke, sir R. A. Cross, &c.), 14 July, 1880. Five reports issued with recommendations for reform, 1884-5.

In 1884, 7319 laymen and about 20,000 freemen, estimated annual income about 750,000*l*, expended in maintenance, education, and charities; about 75,000*l* spent in entertainments.

Grants from the companies to the City Guilds of London Institute (Goldsmiths 46,000*l*, Drapers 43,000*l*, Clothworkers 37,000*l*, Falmouthers 34,000*l*, Mercers 22,000*l*, Grocers 10,000*l*); for technical education, &c. (Drapers 50,000*l*, Goldsmiths 85,000*l*, Mercers 60,000*l*) and others promised 1878-84.

* Bubble companies have been formed, commonly by designing persons. Law's bubble, in 1700-2, was perhaps the most extraordinary of its kind, and the South Sea Bubble, in the same year, was scarcely less memorable for the ruin of thousands of families. Many companies were established in these countries in the year 1825, and turned out to be bubbles. Numerous ones were incurred by individuals, and the number of these kinds of speculations were totally ruined. See South Sea Bubble; South Sea; Bubbles; South Sea Bubble.

COMPANIES' ACTS: one passed 1862, was amended and continued, 20 Aug. 1867; both amended by acts, 2 July, 1877, and 15 Aug. 1879. The important Companies Winding-up act was passed 18 Aug. 1890.

By the last act, unlimited banking companies were regulated in regard to their issue of notes, audit of accounts &c. The acts of 1862, 1867, 1877, and 1879 were amended by 13 Acts, &c. in 1883 and 1886. Companies registered, 30,375 since 1862; nominal capital 3,442,564,000; reported 1889. COMPASS, MARINER'S, said to have been early known to the Chinese, 1115 A.D., and brought to Europe by Marco Polo, a Venetian, 1260, A.D. Flavio Gioia, of Amalfi, a navigator, of Naples, is said to have introduced the suspension of the needle, 1302. The compass is also said to have been known to the Swedes in the time of king Jarl Birger, 1250. Its variation was discovered first by Columbus, 1492; afterwards by Sebastian Cabot, 1540. The compass box and hanging compass used by navigators were invented by William Barrow, an English divine and natural philosopher, in 1608; see Magnetism. The encumbering compass was invented by Jost Bing, of Hesse, in 1602. The compass of air William Thomson patented in 1876 is considered the best.

COMPETITIVE EXAMINATIONS, see Civil Service.

COMPIEGNE, a French city north of Paris, the residence of the Carolingian kings. During the siege, Jean of Arc was captured by the Burgundians, 24 May, 1430, and given up to the English for money. The emperor Napoleon III. and the king of Prussia met here on 6 Oct. 1861.

COMPUTERIAN BIBLE, see Alphabet.

COMPOSING-MACHINES, see Printing and Types.

* The statement that the four-4's was made the standard of the northern point of the compass in antiquity is a mistake; the king of Naples at the time of the discovery, his best navigators.

COMPOSITE ORDER, a mixture of the Corinthian and Ionic, and also called the Roman order, is of uncertain date.

Composite Portraits. By means of photography in 1877, Mr. Francis Galton combined from 2 to 9 separate portraits; the result was generally an improvement on the features of the components.

COMPOUND HOUSEHOLDERS (in regard to the payment of rates) were constituted by the Small Tenements act of 1851. Their position, with regard to the suffrage, caused much discussion during the passing of the Reform act in 1867; and their claims were rejected.

COMPOUND RADICAL, in organic chemistry, is a substance which although containing two or more elements, in ordinary circumstances performs the part of an element. The Radical or Binary theory was propounded by Berzelius, 1833, and by Liebig, 1838; and modified in the nucleus theory of Aug. Laurent, 1836. The first compound radical isolated was cyanogen (which see), by Gay-Lussac, in 1815; see Anal., Ethyl., and Methyl. as other examples.

COMPREHENSION BILL. Passed by the House of Lords in 1689, it proposed changes likely to induce Nonconformists to join the Church of England—it was dropped in the Commons, being unsatisfactory to all parties.

COMPROMISE, see Breda.

COMTE PHILOSOPHY, see Positive Philosophy.

CONCEPTION, IMMACULATE. A festival (on 8 Dec.) appointed in 1389, observed in the Roman Catholic Church in honour of the Virgin Mary's having been conceived and born immaculate, or without original sin. Opposition to this doctrine was forbidden by decree of pope Paul V. in 1617, confirmed by Gregory XV. and Alexander VII. Héneault. On 8 Dec. 1854, pope Pius IX. promulgated a bull, declaring this dogma to be an article of faith, and charging with heresy those who should doubt it or speak against it.—The Conceptionists were an order of nuns in Italy, established in 1486; see Santiago.

CONCERTINA, a musical instrument invented by prof. afterwards sir Charles Wheatstone, about 1825, and improved by Mr. G. Case. The sounds are produced by free vibrating metal springs.

CONCERTS. The Philharmonic gave concerts at Vienna in the 16th century. The first public subscription concert was performed at Oxford in 1665; the first in London is said to have been in 1673, by John Banister, afterwards by Thomas Britton till his death, 1714. The Academy of Ancient Music, which introduced concerts in London, began in 1710; the Concerts of Ancient Music in 1770; and the present Philharmonic Society in 1813; see others, under Musical; Crystal Palace; and Handel. Colossal peace concerts were held at Boston, U.S., 15 June, &c. 1869; 17 June to 4 July, 1872; see Boston.

Concerts Spirituels at Paris, organized by Anna Danican Philidor, began in Passion week, 18 March, 1773; closed in 1791; re-established, 1803; replaced by the Concerts du Conservatoire, begun 9 March, 1808.

Jullien's Popular Concerts, with monster quadrilles, began at Drury Lane Theatre 6 June, 1840; a farewell series, 1850. He greatly promoted the taste for classical music.

Promenade Concerts revived at Covent Garden Theatre, autumn, 1864.

ONCHOLOGY, the science of shells, is mentioned by Aristotle and Pliny. It was first reduced to a system by John Daniel Major, of Kiel, who published his classification of the Trafalgar in 1875. Lister's system was published in 1865; and that of Larpin in 1722. Johnson's Introduction (1850) and Sowerby's Manual of Oenology (1848), are useful. Forbes and Hanley's "British Molluscs and their Shells" (1848-53) is a magnificent work. "British Oenology," by J. G. Jefferys, published in 1862-9.

CONCILIATION COUNCILS, see Councils.

CONCLAVE. A range of small cells in the hall of the Vatican, or palace of the pope of Rome, where the cardinals usually meet to elect a pope, and also the assembly of the cardinals shut up for the purpose. The practice is said to have been instituted by Alexander III. in 1179. Clement IV. having died at Viterbo in 1268, the cardinals were nearly three years unable to agree in the choice of a successor, and were on the point of breaking up, when the magistrates, by the advice of St. Bonaventura, shut the gates of their city, and locked up the cardinals till they agreed, 1271.

CONCORD (Massachusetts, N. America). Near here was fought the battle of Lexington (which see), 19 April, 1775.

CONCORDANCE. An index or alphabetical catalogue of all the words and also a chronological account of all the transactions in the Bible. The first concordance was made under the direction of Hugo de St. Caro, who employed as many as 500 monks upon it, 1247. Abbd Lenglet. It was based on one compiled by Anthony of Padua. Thomas Gibson's "Concordance of the New Testament" published, 1535. John Marbeck's "Concordance" (for the whole Bible), 1550. Two Concordances (with royal privileges), by Rob. P. Hervey, appeared in 1578. Cruden's Concordance was published in London in 1737. Dr. Robert Young's valuable "Analytical Concordance to the Bible," 1789-80. The Index to the Bible, published by the Queen's printers, prepared by B. Vincent, 1848.

Verbal Indexes accompany good editions of the ancient classics. An index to Shakspeare, by Ayscough, appeared in 1790; another by Twiss in 1805; and Mrs. Cowden Clarke's (late Mary Novello) concordance to Shakspeare's Plays (on which she spent 16 years' labour) in 1847. Shakspeare-Lexicon by Dr. A. Schmidt, 2 vols. 1874-5. Mrs. Horace Furness's concordance to Shakspeare's Poems, 1874. Todd's verbal index to Milton, 1800. Cleveland's concordance to Milton, 1867. Brightwell's concordance to Twiss, 1869. Abbott's concordance to Pope, 1875. Dunlap's concordance to Homer, 1880. F. S. Ellis's concordance to Shelley, 1892.

CONCORDAT. An instrument of agreement between a prince and the pope, usually concerning benefices. The concordat between the emperor Henry V. of Germany and pope Calixtus II., in 1122, has been regarded as the fundamental law of the church in Germany. The concordat between Napoleon Bonaparte and Pius VII., signed at Paris, 15 July, 1801, re-established the Catholic church and the papal authority in France. Napoleon was made in effect the head of the Gallican church, as bishops were to have their appointments from him, and their investiture from the pope. Another concordat between the same persons was signed at Fontainebleau, 25 Jan. 1813. These were almost nullified by another, 22 Nov. 1817. A concordat, signed 18 Aug. 1855, between Austria and Rome, by which a great deal of the liberty of the Austrian church was given up to the papacy, caused much dissatisfaction. In 1868 it was vir-

CONDENSATION, see Gas, Beer, Milk.

CONDOTTIERI, conductors or leaders of mercenaries, termed free companies or lances, which became so troublesome in Italy, that the cities formed a league to suppress them in 1342. Many ravaged France after the peace of Bretigny, in 1360.

CONDUITS. Two remarkable conduits, among a number of others in London, existed early in Chesapeake. The "great conduit" was the first cistern of lead erected in the city, and was built in 1285. At the procession of Anna Bolyn, on the occasion of her marriage, it ran with white and claret wine all the afternoon, 1 June, 1533. Slow.

CONFEDERATE STATES OF NORTH AMERICA. The efforts of the Southern States for the extension of slavery, and the zeal of the Northern States for its abolition, with the consequent political dissensions, led to the great secession of 1860-1. On 4 Nov. 1860, Abraham Lincoln, the Republican or Abolitionist candidate, was elected president of the United States. Hitherto, a president in the interest of the South had been elected. On 20 Dec., South Carolina seceded from the Union; and soon after Alabama, Florida, Mississippi, Georgia, Louisiana, Texas, Virginia (except West Virginia), Arkansas, Tennessee, and North Carolina also. Jefferson Davis was inaugurated president of the Southern Confederacy at Montgomery in Alabama, 18 Feb. 1862. For the events of the war which ensued, and the restoration of the Southern States to the Union, see United States, 1861-5. Jefferson Davis's "Rise and Fall of the Confederate Government," 2 vols., published June, 1881; he died, aged 81, 6 Dec. 1889.

CONFEDERATION AT PARIS, 14 July, 1790; see Champ de Mars, and Barricade.

CONFEDERATION OF THE RHINE, the League of the German States, formed by Napoleon Bonaparte, 12 July, 1806, when he abolished the Holy Roman Empire, and the emperor of Germany became emperor of Austria. In Dec. it consisted of France, Bavaria, Wurtemberg, Saxony, and Westphalia; seven grand duchies; six duchies; and twenty principalities. The princes collectively engaged to raise 258,000 troops to serve in case of war, and established a diet at Frankfurt. This league terminated with the career of Bonaparte in 1814; and in 1815 it was replaced by the Germanic Confederation (which see, and Germany).

CONFERENCES, ECCLESIASTICAL. One was held at Hampton Court palace, between the prelates of the church of England and the puritan ministers, in order to effect a general union, at the instance of the king, James I., 14, 16, 18 Jan. 1604. It led to the new translation of the Bible, now in general use in England; executed in 1607-11. Some alterations in the church liturgy were agreed upon: but these not satisfying the dissenters, nothing more was done.—Another conference of the bishops and presbyterian ministers, with the same view, was held in the Savoy, 15 April to 25 July, 1661. The dissenters' objections were generally disallowed, but some alterations were recommended in the Prayer-book. See Wesleyans and Congregationalists.

CONFESSIONAL, see Amirander Confession.

CONFESSIONS OF FAITH, OF GREEKS; see Apocryphal, Nicene (325), and Athanasian (390).

1640. St. M. Joseph's "History of the Province" published 1874.

The foundation of faith of the Greek church was devoted to Melchisedek II. in 1210. This gave birth to the one composed by English, metropolitan of Kiev, which is the present standard of the Greek church.

The creed of the IV. composed of the Nicene creed, with additional articles which embody all the peculiar dogmas of the Roman Catholic church, published by the council of Trent. 1564

The church of England revises the Apostles', Nicene, and Athanasian creeds, with articles — 44 in 1552, reduced to 39. 1562

The confession of Augsburg (that of the Lutherans) was drawn up principally by Melancthon, in 1530, and has since undergone modifications, the last of which is called the "Form of Concord" 1579

The Westminster confession was agreed to in 1643, and adopted by the Presbyterian church of Scotland. see Westminster 1647

The congregational dissenters published a declaration of faith. 1831

CONFIRMATION, or laying on hands, was practised by the Apostles in 34 and 56 (Acts viii. 17; xix. 6), and was general, according to some church authorities, in 190. In the church of England it is the public profession of the Christian religion by an adult person, who has been baptized in infancy. It is made a sacrament by the church of Rome.

CONFLANS (near Paris), TREATY OF, between Louis XI of France and the dukes of Bourbon, Brittany and Burgundy, 5 Oct. 1465. By its provisions Normandy was ceded to the duke of Berry, and an end was put to the "War of the Public Good." It was confirmed by the Treaty of Farnes, 1468.

CONFUCIANISM, the doctrines or system of morality taught by Confucius K'ung Fu-tse, or "the Master K'ung" (b. c. 551-479), which has been long adopted in China as the basis of jurisprudence and education. It involves no worship of a god, and doubts a future state.

CONGE D'YVIRE (permission to elect), the licence given by the sovereign as head of the church, to chapters and other bodies, to elect dignitaries, particularly bishops, the right asserted by Henry VIII., 1535. After the interdict of the pope upon England had been removed in 1514, king John made an arrangement with the clergy for the election of bishops.

CONGELATION, the act of freezing. Ice was produced in summer by means of chemical mixtures, by Mr Walker, in 1763. Quicksilver was frozen without snow or ice, in 1767. In 1810 Lavoisier bore water in an air-pump by placing a vessel of sulphuric acid under it. Numerous freezing mixtures have been discovered since. Intense cold is produced by the combination of liquefied carbonic acid gas. Ice-making machines invented by Jacob Perkins 1834, John Gorrie 1846, and others. In 1857 Mr Harrison patented a machine for manufacturing ice for commercial purposes, by means of ether and salt water, and made large blocks. In 1860, M. Carré devised a method of freezing to six below zero by making use of a steam vessel, ether and gas of the gas ammonia. Carré's ice-making machine, exhibited at the International Exhibition of 1867, excited much admiration.

It is reported that the machine (made Henry 1860) has been used in various parts of the world, and is now being used in the Arctic regions.

CONGREGATE ROCKETS, see Rockets.

CONIC SECTIONS. Their properties were probably known to the Greeks, four or five centuries before the Christian era, and their study was cultivated in the time of Plato, 390 B.C. The earliest treatise on them was written by Apollonius, about 330 B.C. Apollonius's eight books were written about 260 B.C. The parabola was applied to projectiles by Galileo, the ellipse to the orbit of planets by Kepler, and to comets by Newton.

CONFURERS, see under Witchcraft.

CONNAISSANCE DES TEMPS, the French scientific almanack. Connaissance des Temps Ephemerides, was first published by Fleuret, 1691.

CONNAUGHT, W. Ireland; long a nominal kingdom, divided into counties, 1500. Prince Arthur, third son of queen Victoria, born 1 May, 1850, was created duke of Connaught, 23 May, 1874; being the first royal prince whose leading title was Irish.

The Duke of Connaught's Establishment Act, passed 1 Aug., 1878, made the same provision for the duke, as for his brother Alfred; see Edinburgh. The duke was married to the princess Louise Margaret of France, 13 March, 1890. See England (Royal Family). The condition of the pecuniary was greatly benefited by the construction of light railways, introduced by Mr. A. J. Halford, the Irish chief secretary . . . . . 1890 at 209.

CONNECTICUT a New England state of N. America. The settlements of 1635 and 1636 were united by charter in 1665. Capital Hartford. Population 1880, 622,700; 1890, 746,258.

CONNOR, Ireland. The bishopric was united to that of Down, 1442. The first prelate, Angus Macnisiua, died 507. The united sees were added to Down on the death of its last bishop, 1842, in accordance with the Irish Church Temporalities act, 1833.

CONQUEST, the era in British history, when William duke of Normandy overcame Harold II. at the battle of Hastings, 14 Oct. 1066, and obtained the crown which he asserted had been bequeathed to him by Edward the Confessor (Edgar being the rightful heir). William has been erroneously styled the Conqueror, for he succeeded to the crown of England by compact. He defeated Harold, who was himself a usurper, but a large portion of the kingdom afterwards held out against him; and he, unlike a conqueror, took an oath to observe the laws and customs of the realm, in order to induce the submission of the people. Formerly our judges were accustomed to reprehend any gentleman at the bar who said casually William the Conqueror, instead of William I. Selden. Macbie exhibited forty-two drawings on the events of the Norman conquest, in May, 1857. E. A. Freeman's "History of the Norman Conquest," 6 vols, 1870-9, is valued. He died, aged 69, 16 March, 1892.

CONSCIENCE CLAUSE, see Education.

CONSCIENCE, COURTS OF, OR OF REQUESTS for recovery of small debts, constituted by a stat. of Hen. VII. 1493, and re-organized by stat. 9 Hen. VIII. 1517. These courts were improved and amended by various acts; their jurisdiction in London reached to 51, and (until superseded by county-courts) to 40s. in other towns. The practice was by summons, and if the party did not appear, the commissioners had power to apprehend and commit; see County Courts.

CONSCIENCE, LIBERTY OF, a principle of genuine Christianity (1 Cor. x. 29); repudiated by Romanism, proclaimed by James II. for political purposes, 1687.

CONSCIENCE MONEY. In the year ending 31 March, 1873, 9,847 $\frac{1}{2}$  were sent to the chancellor of the exchequer for unpaid income tax; 1874, 8,588 $\frac{1}{2}$ ; 1877, 14,835 $\frac{1}{2}$ ; 1878, 5,572 $\frac{1}{2}$ ; 1879, 6,738 $\frac{1}{2}$ ; 1880, 5,801 $\frac{1}{2}$ .

CONSCRIPT FATHERS (patres conscripti) the designation given to the Roman senators, because their names were written in the register of the senate.

CONSCRIPTION, A mode (first used by the Romans) adopted for supplying states with the continent. In 5 Sept. 1798, a military consecration was ordained in France, comprehending all the young men from 20 to 25 years of age: from whose selections were made. A consecration for 330,000 men took place in Jan. 1813, after the disastrous Russian campaign, and in Dec. 1814, another for 300,000 after the battle of Leipzig. Estimated consecration, 1793-1813, 4,103,000. The law of 1818 (modified in 1824, 1832, and 1868) required a certain annual contingent for each department. The consecration was enlarged and modified by the army bill which was enacted in Feb. 1868. The re-organization of the army began in 1871, after the fatal war with Germany. Substitutes were allowed under certain conditions. Consecration for Great Britain was advocated and strongly opposed in 1875.

CONSECRATION. Aaron and his sons were consecrated priests, 1490 B.C. (Lev. viii.) The Jewish tabernacle was dedicated, 1490 B.C., and Solomon's temple, 1004 B.C. (1 Kings viii.) The consecration of churches began in the 2nd century. Anciently the consecration of popes was deferred until the emperor had given his assent to their election. Gregory IV. desired to have his election confirmed by the emperor Louis, in 828. Héneault. The consecration of churches, places of burial, &c., is admitted in the reformed religion. An act relating to the consecration of churchyards, passed 20 Aug. 1867, was amended in 1868. A form of consecration was adopted by convocation, but not sanctioned by the crown, April, 1712. It is generally used but is not compulsory.—Burn. The form of consecrating bishops in the church of England is set forth in the prayer-book of 1549.—Sloce.

CONSERVATION OF FORCE. The doctrine that no physical force can be created or destroyed, but may be transferred, is maintained by Faraday, Grove, Helmholtz, Tyndall, and other philosophers; see Conservation.

CONSERVATIVES. a name said to have been invented by John Wilson Croker, an earnest Tory, in 1830, assumed by a party, whose leading principle is the preservation of our national institutions. It was turned a new cant word by T. B. Macaulay in Edinburgh Review, July, 1832. Sir Robert Peel acknowledged himself a conservative when reproached by the Irish party in parliament with being an Orangeman; but the party that afterwards separated from him called their principles conservative in contradistinction to his,—his policy and measures being changed.—The Conservative Club was founded in 1840; see Protectionists and Clubs. The party in the north of the United States which supported the president in his conciliatory efforts to re-establish the Union, Jan. 1860, were termed "Conservatives." A great meeting of the National Union of Conservative Associations was held at the Crystal Palace, 24 June, 1872. The party in the minority at the elections in 1868 obtained a majority at those in Feb. 1874, and came into office. They were again in a minority at the general election, and resigned 23 April, 1880. The marquis of Salisbury was elected leader of the party, 9 May, 1881, succeeding the earl of Beaconsfield, who died 19 April previous. Constitutional club (central) signed in London, President, marquis of Salisbury. House opened 8 Aug. 1873. National Conservative Club, established in 1866. See Derby and Disraeli, Fourth Party, Liberals (1868), National Union.

The national union of conservative associations met at Salisbury, 23 July, 1869; Liverpool, 1870; Birmingham, 1871.

CONSERVATOIRES. a name given to establishments for the cultivation of music and the arts on the continent. One was established at Naples in 1537. The singing school at Paris, founded in 1784, and closed in 1789, was re-opened in 1793 as the "Institut National de Musique," and after being reorganized, was re-named "Conservatoire de Musique" in 1795, and flourished under Cherubini (1822-42). "The Conservatoire des Arts et Mètièrs" was established in 1784. It includes a museum and library, and lectures are given to workmen there.

CONSERVATORS OF THE PUBLIC LIBERTIES. Officers chosen in England to inspect the treasury and correct abuses in administration, 28 Hen. III. 1244.—Rapin. Conservators were appointed to see the king's peace kept.—Ferdon. Conservators were formerly appointed in every county to take cognizance of all offences committed against the peace upon the main sea out of the liberty of the Cinque Ports.—Beilley.

CONSISTORIES for regulating ecclesiastical discipline and divine worship in the Lutheran church in Germany, were established at the reformation—the first at Wittenberg in 1542; other consistories were established after the peace of Augsburg in 1555.

CONSISTORY COURT, anciently joined with the hundred court; and its original, as divided therefrom, is found in a law of William I., 1079, quoted by lord justice Coke. The chief and most ancient consistory court of the kingdom belongs to the see of Canterbury, and is called the Court of Arches (which see).

CONSOLIDATED FUND was formed by combining the "aggregate," "general," and "South Sea funds," 1786. On 5 Jan. 1816, the exchequers of Great Britain and Ireland, previously separate, were amalgamated, forming "the consolidated fund of the United Kingdom."

CONSPIRACY AND PROTECTION TO PROPERTY ACT, passed 13 Aug. 1875; relates to trade disputes, breaches of contract, &c.

CONSTABLE OF ENGLAND, LORD HIGH. The seventh great officer of the crown, and, with the earl marshal, formerly a judge of the court of chivalry, called, in the time of Henry IV., serjeant at arms, and subsequently the court of honour. The power of this officer was so great, that in 1389 a statute was passed for abridging it, and also the power of the earl marshal (which see). The office existed before the conquest, after which it went by inheritance to the earls of Hereford and Essex, and next in the line of Stafford. In 1521 it was forfeited by Edward Stafford, duke of Buckingham, attainted for high treason, and has never since been granted to any person, otherwise than pro hac vice (for this occasion), to attend at a coronation or trial by combat. The only instance of a trial by combat being ordered since this office fell into the hands of the crown, was that commanded between lord Reay and Mr. David Ramsey, in Nov. 1631; but the king prevented it.

CONSTABLE OF SCOTLAND, LORD HIGH. The office was instituted by David I. about 1147. The holder had the keeping of the king's sword, which the king, at his promotion, delivered to him naked (and hence the badge of the lord high constable is a naked sword); and the absolute command of the king's armies while in the field, in the absence of the king. The office was conferred hereditarily in 1314 on sir Gilbert Hay by Robert Bruce. One of Hay's descendants was made Earl of Erroll, and with his family the office still remains, being expressly reserved by the treaty of union in 1707. The present earl of Erroll is the twenty-third lord high constable (1892).

CONSTABLES OF Hundreds and Franchises, instituted in the reign of Edward I. 1285, are now called high constables. There are three kinds of constables, high, petty, and special; the high constable's jurisdiction extends to the whole hundred; the petty constable's to the parish or liberty for which he is chosen; and the special constable is appointed for particular emergencies (as in April, 1848, an account of the Chartists). The general appointment of parish constables was made unnecessary by an act passed Aug. 1872. See Special Constables and Tenors.

CONSTABULARY FORCE. For that of London, see Police. The Constabulary of Ireland act passed in 1823, when this species of force was embodied throughout the country. Several subsequent acts were consolidated in 1836.

CONSTANCE, a city in Baden (S. Germany). Here was held the seventeenth general council, 1414-18, which condemned John Huss; and here he was burnt, 6 July, 1415; see Hussites.

CONSTANTINA, the ancient capital of Numidia, was taken by the French, 13 Oct. 1837. During the assault on 12 Oct. the French general Damremont was killed. Achmet Bey retired with 12,000 men, as the victors entered Constantina.

CONSTANTINOPLE (formerly Byzantium) (which see), now Stamboul, derives its name from Constantine the Great, who removed the seat of the Eastern Empire here, dedicating it 11 May, 330. See Eastern Empire. Population, 1885, 873,505.

General ecclesiastical councils against heresy were held here in 381, 533, 680, and 869.

ERA OF CONSTANTINOPLE has the creation placed 5508 years A.C. It was used by the Russians until the time of Peter the Great, and is still used in the Greek church. The civil year begins 1 Sept., and the ecclesiastical year in March; the day is not exactly determined. To reduce it to our era, subtract 5508 years from January to August, and 5509 from Sept. to the end. Nicola.

CONSTELLATIONS. Arcturus, Orion, the Pleiades, and Menzabrah are mentioned in Job ix. 9, and xxviii. 31, about 1500 B.C. Homer and Hesiod notice constellations; but our first direct knowledge was derived from Claudius Ptolemy, about A.D. 140. Hipparchus (about 147 B.C.) made a catalogue of forty-eight constellations, and others were added by Tycho Brahe, Hevelius, Halley, and others. The number at present acknowledged is 49 northern, 45 southern, and 12 zodiacal.

CONSTITUENCIES, see Constituencies, House of

CONSTITUENT. see National Assembly

CONVENTICLES, private assemblies for religious worship, held by dissenters from the established church; but first applied to the schools of Widdows. 35 Elizabeth, c. 1 (1593) passed "to prevent and suppress seditious conventicles," was re-enacted by 16 Charles II. c. 4 (1664) and by 22 Charles II. c. 1 (1670). Persons attending them were liable to severe punishment. The statutes were repealed by the toleration act, 24 May, 1689.

CONVENTION PARLIAMENTS, assembled without the king's writ upon extraordinary occasions. One on 25 April, 1660, voted the restoration of Charles II. A second met 22 Jan. 1689; offered the crown to William and Mary 13 Feb.; and dissolved in Feb. 1690; see National Convention.

CONVENTIONS, see Travels.

CONVENTS were first founded, according to some authorities, 270. The first in England was erected at Folkestone, by Radbald, in 630. Camden. The first in Scotland was at Coldingham, where Ethelreda took the veil in 670. They were founded earlier in Ireland. They were suppressed in England in various reigns, particularly in that of Henry VIII. A very great number have been suppressed in Europe in the present century. The king of Prussia secularised all the convents in the duchy of Posen. Dom Pedro put down 300 convents in Portugal in 1834; and Spain abolished 1800 convents. Many were abolished in Italy and Sicily in 1860, 1861, and 1866, and many in Russia 31 July, 1834, and Nov. 1864.

In 1597 lady Mary Percy founded a convent at Brussels, which flourished there till 1794, when the nuns were compelled to remove to England. They were received by bishop Milner, and placed at Winchester, at which place they remained till their removal to East Bergholt, in Suffolk, June, 1857. This was the first English conventual establishment founded on the continent after the Restoration.

By the Municipalisation act of 1849, 10 Geo. IV., the establishment of convents and other religious communities in the United Kingdom was prohibited, but this enactment has been a dead letter. 1849 There were in 1832, 16 convents in England; in 1870, 23; and 30 monasteries in Great Britain.

A select committee to investigate into the revenues of British convents appointed by the commons, 20 May, 1870; reappointed Feb. 1871. The committee reported the evidence heard. June, 1871. Mr. Newdegate's motion for an inquiry respecting these institutions was negatived. 10 June, 1874. Large convent at Bourne-mouth, in connection with Church of England, opened. 3 Oct. 1875. A Carmelite convent, specially patronised by the duke of Norfolk and family, at St. Charles's Square, Notting Hill, London, W., opened by Cardinal Manning. 29 Sept. 1878. Many convents in France abolished, by decree 29 March, 1880.

CONVERSION, see National debt, 1883.

CONVEYANCING ACT (Scotland) passed 7 Aug. 1874. The Conveyancing and Law of Property Act (England), 44 & 45 Vict. c. 41, passed 22 Aug. 1881.

CONVICTS, see Transportation.

CONVOCAATION, the ancient general assembly of the clergy of the nation, convened by the sovereign's writ, to consult on the affairs of the church;

tion was limited by a statute of Henry VIII., to whose reign the convocation was reorganised. The two houses of convocation were deprived of various privileges in 1718, and ceased to meet. The annual meetings of the clergy held during the sitting of parliament were revived in the province of Canterbury 1852, and York 1861, and fruitless attempts have been made to obtain the power of dealing summarily with ecclesiastical affairs; but in Feb. 1872, convocation was authorised to deliberate respecting alterations in the Liturgy; upon which it acted, 5 March; again in 1879. Petition to the queen for reform of convocation, Nov. 1884.

Convocation relieved from the jurisdiction of the secular courts by Richard III., 1484. The Archbishop of York's claim for this in regard to elections (in the case of Canon Trustam) confirmed by the Queen's Bench Division, Nov. 1887. See Layman, House of, which first met 16 Feb. 1886.

In 1808 a.c. a calf was cooked by Abraham to entertain his guests (Gen. xviii. 7, 8) "The Forme of Curry" (i.e. cookery) is dated 1390. An English cookery-book was printed 1496; see Catagor's Store.

Military Cookery—Capt. Grant devised a system of cooking for the camp at Aldershot, which has continued a successful operation for the service of between 25,000 and 24,000 men. From April to August, in 1875, the 1st war ambulance corps served as a cooking corps for 6000 men, who marched in and out of the encampment during that period. The consumption of fuel required for this system of cooking was one half-pound of coal per man per day, and the official report claims the cost to be one halfpenny per man per week for the ten daily meals.

Self-supporting Cooking Depots for the working classes were set up at Glasgow (by Mr. Thomas Corbitt) 4 Sept. 1860; and proved successful in Manchester, London, and other places soon after.

Three medals were awarded to the Norwegian self-acting cooking apparatus (Borresen's patent) at the Paris Exhibition, 1867. Cooking is effected by boiling water the heat of which is maintained by collecting it in a non-conducting substance.

A School of Cookery was opened at the International Exhibition, South Kensington, 14 April, 1875.

A National Training School for Cookery, projected 17 July, 1875, was established in 1874.

COOK'S EXCURSIONS. Mr. Thomas Cook in 1841 began his tourist system by arranging with the Midland railway company for the conveyance of a party of 574 from Leicester to Loughborough and back at a shilling.

He gradually extended his business through the United Kingdom, and thence to the continent. In 1864 he conducted his first tour to the Continent, to the Rhine, returning home via Paris. He afterwards applied his system to America, and in 1871 to Holy Land. Mr. Cook died 25 Aug. 1892.

The chief object of the expedition, at the request of the Royal Society, was the observation of the transit of Venus over the sun's disk, which was effected, 3 June, 1769. Captain Cook sailed to explore the southern hemisphere, 13 July, 1772, and returned 30 July, 1775. In his last expedition (begun 12 July, 1776) he was killed by the savages of Owhyhee, 14 Feb. 1779. His ships, the Resolution and Discovery, arrived at Sheerness, 4 Oct. 1780.

Kootmanschap, to assist in making the great Pacific railway. His proposal in 1869 to replace the negroes in the Southern States of North America for the cultivation of cotton, was not accepted. "The Coolie, his Rights and Wrongs," by E. Jenkins, was published 1871. Coolie emigration has been the subject of negotiation between the British and Chinese governments since 1855.

COOPERAGE, an ancient art, probably suggested for preserving wine. The coopers of London were incorporated in 1501.

These societies (312 in 1862) are registered pursuant to 13 & 14 Vict. c. 115 (1849). On 31 Dec. 1866, 749 industrial, provident, and co-operative societies were registered; 1153, May 1865; 1,281 in 1868. By an act passed in 1867 they are bound to make a return. (Exod. viii. 37). The mines of Pahlun, in Sweden, are most surprising excavations. In England, copper-mines were discovered in 1561, and there are upwards of fifty mines in Cornwall, where mining has been increasing since the reign of William III. In 1857, 75,832 tons of copper ore were imported, and 25,241 tons extracted. In 1865, 108,705 tons of copper ore were extracted from British mines, and 11,605 tons smelted: 82,556 tons were imported. Fuile in 1879, in which a mixture of the two metals is finely subdivided, with the points of junction exposed, so as to promote the decomposition of any binary liquid into which small pieces are immersed, the resistance of the liquid being greatly reduced. The couple is formed by immersing zinc foil in a solution of sulphate of copper; the copper being deposited on the zinc in minute particles. By this couple impurities in water are readily detected, many peculiar analyses have been made, and new organic bodies formed.

Hist.* Corn provided a common article of food from the earliest ages of the world, and baking bread was known in the patriarchal ages; see Genesis xii. 15. The first importation of corn, of which we have a note, was in 1347. A law restricting it was made in 1364, and similar legislation followed. Bounties were granted on its importation into England in 1639. See Wheat.

Mr. Morris Ranger, a great cotton speculator, failed 31 Oct. 1883, causing much distress.

Another "cotton corner" proposed in June 1887 was rebuffed by the joint action of the manufacturers and operatives. A cotton corner in Liverpool was successfully resisted and closed, 30 Sept. 1889. See Trade.

On the retreat of the ancient Britons after the Saxon conquest, Cornwall is said to have been formed into a kingdom, and to have existed many years under different princes, among whom were Ambrosius Aurelius, and the celebrated Arthur. Tradition says, that in 513 Pergus, a prince of the royal line, having obtained the Scottish throne, procured the use of this stone for his coronation at Dunstaffnage, where it continued until the time of Kenneth II., who removed it to Scone; and in 1296 it was removed by Edward I. from Scone to Westminster; the present chair being made to receive it.

A Coronation Chair was administered by Dunstan, archbishop of Canterbury, to Ethelred II., in 978. An oath, nearly corresponding with that now in use, was administered in 1377. The oath prescribed by Will & Mary, c. 6 (1580) was modified in 1700, and again in 1840 on account of the union of the Churches of England and Ireland.

CORSICA, an island in the Mediterranean Sea (called by the Greeks Cyros), held by the French. The ancient inhabitants had the character of robbers, liars, and atheists according to Seneca. Corsica was colonised by Phœnicians 504 B.C., and afterwards held by the Carthaginians, from whom it was taken by the Romans, 238 B.C. It has been held by Vandals, A.D. 456; by Saracens 852; by Pisa, 1077. It was dependent upon Genoa from 1559 till 1768, when it was ceded to France.

During a revolt erected into a kingdom under Theodore Neuhoff, its first and only king 1736
He came to England, was imprisoned in the King's Bench prison for debt, and long subsisted on private friends, but released; he gave in his schedule the kingdom of Corsica to his creditors, and died in Boto 1735

The earl of Orford wrote the following epitaph, for a tablet near his grave in St. Anne's church, Dean-street—

"The grave, great teacher! to a level brings Heroes and beggars, galleys-alives and kings.
But Theodore this moral learn'd ere dead;
Fate pour'd its lesson on his living head,
Bestow'd a kingdom and denied him bread."

CORTE MUYA, now El Paso, N. Mex. Has the emperor Maximilian defeated the Milaneses after a seven months' conflict, 27 Nov. 1877.

CORTES, the Spanish parliament, originating in the old Gothic councils. The cortes were assembled after a long interval of years, 24 Sept. 1809; and settled the new constitution, 16 March, 1812, which was set aside by Ferdinand VII., who banished many members of the assembly in May, 1814. The cortes were reopened by him March, 1820, dissolved Oct. 1823; again assembled April, 1834, and have since been regularly convened. The cortes of Portugal assembled by virtue of Dom Pedro's charter, 30 Oct. 1826; they were suppressed by Dom Miguel in 1828, and restored in 1833.

CORUNNA (N. W. Spain). The British army, about 15,000 men, under the command of Sir John Moore, had just accomplished their retreat when they were attacked by the French, whose force exceeded 20,000: the enemy were completely repulsed, but the loss of the British in the battle was immense, 16 Jan. 1809. Sir John was struck by a cannon-ball, which carried away his left shoulder and part of the collar-bone, and he died universally lamented. The remains of the army embarked at Corunna, under Sir David Baird, 17 Jan.

CORUS (Corupedion, or Cypripedium), a plain in Phrygia, Asia Minor, where the aged Lysimachus was defeated by Seleucus, and slain, 281 B.C. These two were the only survivors of Alexander the Great's generals.

CORVÉE, forced labour and service under the feudal system in France, was partially reduced by Louis XVI., at the instigation of Turgot, 27 June, 1789; by the constituent assembly, 18 March, 1790; and totally abolished by the convention, 17 July, 1792. See Egypt, Dec. 1869.

CORYMBUS, the principal person of the chorus in ancient tragedy. The name is said to have been given to Tyneus, or Stesichorus, who first instructed the chorus to dance to the lyre, 556 B.C.

COSMOGRAPHY, see Astronomy and Geography.

COSPATRICK, emigrant vessel, burnt, see Wreck, 1874.

COSACKS, warlike people inhabiting the confines of Poland, Rumania, Tartary, and Turkey. They at first lived by plundering the Turkish galleys and the people of Anatolia; but were formed into a regular army by Stephen Bathori, about 1576, to defend the frontiers of Russia from the Tartars. They joined the Russians in 1654, and in the great war against France (1813-15) formed a valuable portion of the Russian army.

COSOVA, a plain in Serbia. Here Arsurath I. totally defeated the Christian army (Servians, Hungarians, &c.), 15 June, 1389; but was himself killed by an English soldier. Here John Hunyadi was defeated by a Turkish army four times larger than his own, 17 Oct. 1448.

COSTA RICA, a republic in Central America, part of Guatemala, declared independent 15 Sept. 1821. With the other republics of Central America formed a single state 1 July, 1823; compact dissolved 1849; constitution of 22 Dec. 1821 adopted 24 April, 1822. It has been much disturbed by the American filibusters, see Honduras and American Central Constitution, 27 Dec. 1859. On 14 Aug. 1859, the president Juan Mora was brutally assassinated, and Dr José Monteforte made president; Dr F. Monteforte died 7 April, 1865, was succeeded by Dr Joseph Castro, 9 May, 1865; deceased; J. J. Herrera, governor, Nov. 1868; Vicente Guadalupe, provisional president 14 March, 1871; J. M. J. Rodriguez, 5 May, 1890. Population 1885, estimated, 213,765.

COSTERMONGERS, itinerant dealers in fruit, vegetables, fish, &c., deriving their name, it is said, from costers, a favourite apple. The London costermongers are useful in relieving the markets when glutted; and it was said in 1860, that 3,000,000 passed through their hands annually. Previous to fasting and thanksgiving days, they sell the appointed forms of prayers in great numbers. On 22 Nov. 1860, they held a meeting in order to represent to the city authorities the hardships they felt by the police restricting their means of livelihood; and the Metropolitan Streets Act was modified, 7 Dec. 1867.

Their moral and physical condition has been much improved of late years, greatly through the instrumentality of the earl of Shaftesbury, who constituted himself a costermonger, and owned a barrow in 1874.

COTOPAXI, see Andes.

COTTAGE. The term was originally applied to a small house without land, 4 Edw. I. 1275. "No man may build a cottage, except in towns, unless he lay four acres of land thereto," &c., 21 Edw. 1589. This statute was repealed, 15 Geo. III. 1775. By returns to the tax office, in 1786, the number of cottages was 284,459. The number in 1800 was 428,214; the number in 1840 was about 770,000. In 1860 the public attention was much drawn to the deplorable state of cottages in many parts of the country, and the law of settlement was altered in 1864. Mr. Disraeli (afterwards lord Beaconsfield) said that "every cottage should have a tank, an oven, and a porch."

Cottage Improvement Society, founded 12 April, 1865, 7, Adam-street, Strand. Some of the society's models appeared in the International Exhibitions—in London, 1862, in Paris 1867.

COTTAGE HOSPITALS: much advocated by Dr. Hercules Swete in 1870. Many since then have been established: one by the barrister Burdett-Coutts, 1873.

COTTON, a vegetable wool, the produce of the Gossypium, a plant indigenous to the tropical regions of India and America. Indian cotton cloth is mentioned by Herodotus, was known in Arabia in the time of Mahomet, 637, and was brought into Europe by his followers. It does not appear to have been in use among the Chinese till the 13th century; to them we are indebted for the cotton fabric termed nankeen. Cotton was the material of the principal articles of clothing among the Americans when visited by Columbus. It was grown and manufactured in Spain in the 16th century; and in the 18th century was introduced into Italy. Indian muslins, chintzes, and cottons were so largely imported into England in the 18th century, that in 1700 an act of parliament was passed, prohibiting their introduction. Cotton became the staple commodity of England in the present century, about 1841 the "cotton" or "Manchester" interest began to obtain political influence, which led to the repeal of the corn laws in 1846. Failure of Mr. Morris Bonger, a great cotton speculator, and others at Liverpool announced 31 Oct. 1853. Cotton manufactures introduced into Bombay about 1868 gradually becomes very successful, reported Dec. 1859. See Calico, Muslin, Cotton, Stripes.

Dr. Edmund Cartwright, 1785; the dressing machine, by Johnson and Radcliffe, 1802-4; another power-loom, by Horrocks, 1802-3. A combing machine was patented by Joshua Heilmann, in 1845.*

Stockings. The stocking-frame was invented by William Lee, in 1739. Cotton stockings were first made by hand about 1730; Jedediah Strutt obtained a patent for Derby ribbed stockings in 1759; and Horton patented his knotted frame in 1776; Crompton's mule was employed in making thread for the stocking manufacture about 1770.

Cotton-Lace—Bobbie-net. The stocking-frame of Lee was applied to lace-making by Hammond, about 1768; the process perfected by John Heathcoat, 1809.

American Cotton. Previous to 1793, our cotton fibre came from the East and West Indies, the Levant, and within the United States. About 1786, the growth of cotton began in Georgia. In 1793, Eli Whitney, an American, invented the saw-gin, a machine by which cotton wool is separated from the pod and cleaned with great ease and expedition. This led to such increased

COTTON YARNING.

The supply of cotton from North America nearly ceased, in consequence of the recession of the southern states from the union in 1860-61. In 1882, Mr. T. Darby warned the country on the danger of trusting to this source. In May, 1866, he stated that through its failure the loss of the labouring classes was 20,000,000 sterling a year, and estimated the loss, including the employing classes, at nearly 40,000,000 l. a year.

*As a meeting of noblemen and gentlemen, connected with the cotton manufacturing districts, at Bridgewater-house, St. James's, on 19 July, 1866, the seat of Darby in the chair, 10,000 were subscribed to the Cotton District Relief Fund. The victory of Egypt, in London at the time, gave relief, and the queen gave 1000 l. on 24 July. Liberal subscriptions flowed in from all parts. On 28 Aug. the lord mayor had received 41,000 l.*

In the Lancashire district (population about 4,000,000) there were receiving partial relief Sept. 1866, 20,000 persons; in Dec. 1866, 763,498. Earl of Derby, 3 Dec. 1866.

In July, 1863, about the value of 900,000 l. amounted to the donations which had been received in money and goods, amounting to about 2,000,000 l.

On 9 Feb. 1864, the "George Grenville" arrived, containing contributions of provisions, &c. from North America, for the relief of the sufferers in Lancashire.

* A trial of various kinds of cotton gins, under the direction of Mr. Thomas Watson, took place at Manchester, on Nov.-23, Dec. 1829.

COSTA RICA, see REPUBLIC, N. Haly. When the Emperor, Pedro II. defeated the Milanese after a seven months' siege, 27 Nov. 1857.

CORTES, the Spanish parliament, originating in the Cortes of León. The cortes were assembled after a long interval of years, at Sept. 1808, and settled the new constitution, 16 March, 1812, which was set aside by Ferdinand VII., who dismissed many members of the assembly in May, 1814. The cortes were reopened by him March, 1820, dissolved Oct. 1823; again assembled April, 1834, and have since been regularly convened. The cortes of Portugal assembled by virtue of Dom Pedro's charter, 30 Oct. 1826; they were suppressed by Dom Miguel in 1834, and restored in 1833.

CORUNNA (N. W. Spain). The British army, about 15,000 men, under the command of sir John Moore, had just accomplished their retreat when they were attacked by the French, whose force exceeded 30,000: the enemy were completely repulsed, but the loss of the British in the battle was immense, 16 Jan. 1809. Sir John was struck by a cannon-ball, which carried away his left shoulder and part of the collar-bone, and he died universally lamented. The remains of the army embarked at Corunna, under sir David Baird, 17 Jan.

CORUS (Corupedion, or Cypripedium), a plain in Phrygia, Asia Minor, where the aged Lycurgus was defeated by Seleucus, and slain, 281 B.C. These two were the only survivors of Alexander the Great's generals.

CORVÉE, forced labour and service under the feudal system in France, was partially reduced by Louis XVI., at the instigation of Turgot, 27 June, 1776; by the constituent assembly, 18 March, 1790; and totally abolished by the convention, 17 July, 1792. See Expiat, Dec. 1839.

CORYPHÆUS, the principal person of the chorus in ancient tragedy. The name is said to have been given to Tyneus, or Steinhornus, who first instructed the chorus to dance to the lyre, 556 B.C.

COSMOGRAPHY, see Astronomy and Geography.

COSPATRIOK, emigrant vessel, burnt, see Wrecked, 1874.

COSSACKS, warlike people inhabiting the confines of Poland, Russia, Tartary, and Turkey. They at first lived by plundering the Turkish galleys and the people of Anatolia; but were formed into a regular army by Stephen Bathory, about 1576, to defend the frontiers of Russia from the Tartars. They joined the Russians in 1654, and in the great war against France (1813-15) formed a valuable portion of the Russian army.

COSSOVA, a plain in Servia. Here Amurat I. totally defeated the Christian army (Servians, Hungarians, &c.), 15 June, 1456; but was himself killed by an English soldier. Here John Hunyadi was defeated by a Turkish army four times larger than his own, 17 Oct. 1456.

COSTA RICA, a republic in Central America, part of Guatemala, declared independent 15 Sept. 1821. With the other republics of Central America signed a single treaty 1 July, 1823; compact dissolved 1860; constitution of 20 Dec. 1821 adopted 25 April, 1822. It has been much disturbed by the American filibusters, see Hungarians and America, Central. Constitution, 27 Dec. 1829. On 14 Aug. 1850, the republic from Mont was suddenly destroyed, and Dr. José Montenegro was president; Dr. F. Alvarado president 2 Sept. 1851, who was deposed by Dr. Joseph Castro, 8 May, 1852; deposed; J. Jimeno, governor, Nov. 1853; Vicente Guadalupe proclaimed president 15 March, 1854; J. M. Guadalupe, 1871 for 1874-6; Alberto Biquel, 8 May 1876; Vicente Herrera, 31 Jan. 1879, resigned; succeeded by Thomas Guardia, Oct. 1877; died July, 1882, succeeded by Francisco Fernandez; died March, 1885, succeeded by Bernardo Soto 13 March, 1885; by J. J. Rodriguez, 8 May, 1890. Population 1885, estimated, 213,785.

COSTERMONGERS, itinerant dealers in fruit, vegetables, fish, &c., deriving their name, it is said, from costard, a favourite apple. The London costermongers are useful in relieving the markets when glutted; and it was said in 1860, that 3,000,000. passed through their hands annually. Previous to fasting and thanksgiving days, they sell the appointed forms of prayers in great numbers. On 22 Nov. 1860, they held a meeting in order to represent to the city authorities the hardships they felt by the police restricting their means of livelihood; and the Metropolitan Streets Act was modified, 7 Dec. 1867.

Their moral and physical condition has been much improved of late years, greatly through the instrumentality of the earl of Shaftesbury, who constituted himself a costermonger, and owned a barrow in 1874.

COSTUME, see Dress.

COTOPAXI, see Andes.

COTTAGE. The term was originally applied to a small house without land, 4 Edw. I. 1275. "No man may build a cottage, except in towns, unless he lay four acres of land thereto," &c., 31 Eliz. 1559. This statute was repealed, 15 Geo. III. 1775. By returns to the tax office, in 1786, the number of cottages was 284,459. The number in 1800 was 428,214; the number in 1840 was about 770,000. In 1860 the public attention was much drawn to the deplorable state of cottages in many parts of the country, and the law of settlement was altered in 1865. Mr. Distaff (afterwards Lord Beaconsfield) said that "every cottage should have a tank, an oven, and a perch."

Cottage Improvement Society, founded 10 April, 1861, 7, Aldersgate, Strand. Some of the society's models appeared in the International Exhibition—in London, 1862; in Paris 1867.

The Cottager's Stone, designed by captain John Grant, registered and presented by him to the metropolitan association for improving the dwellings of the industrious classes Dec. 1849. A Cottage Garden Society established about 1846 still exists 1865.

COTTAGE HOSPITALS: much advocated by Dr. Harriet Swete in 1870. Many since then have been established: one by the baroness Burdett-Coutts, 1876.

COTTON, a vegetable wool, the produce of the Gossypium, a shrub indigenous to the tropical regions of India and America. Indian cotton cloth is mentioned by Herodotus, was known in Arabia in the time of Mahomet, 662; and was brought into Europe by his followers. It does not appear to have been in use among the Chinese till the 12th century; to them we are indebted for the cotton fabric termed nankeen. Cotton was the material of the principal articles of clothing among the Americans when visited by Columbus. It was grown and manufactured in Spain in the 12th century; and in the 12th century was introduced into Italy. Indian machine spinning and cottons were so largely imported into England in the 17th century, that in 1700 an act of parliament was passed, prohibiting their introduction. Cotton became the staple commodity of England in the present century. About 1841 the "cotton" or "Manchester" interest began to obtain political influence, which led to the repeal of the corn laws in 1846. Failure of Mr. Morris Banger, a great cotton speculator, and others at Liverpool announced 31 Oct. 1863. Cotton manufacture introduced into Bombay about 1868 gradually becomes very successful, reported Dec. 1889. See Cotton, Machine, Cotton, Strikes.

American Cotton. Previous to 1795, our cotton fibres came from the East and West Indies, the Levant, and a little from the United States. About 1795 the growth of cotton began in Georgia. In 1793, Mr Whitney, an American, invented the new gin, a machine by which cotton wool is separated from the pod and cleaned with great ease and expedition. This led to much increased cultivation that the United States now export 2,310,000 lb. of cotton.

COTTON FAMILIES

The supply of cotton from North America nearly ceased, in consequence of the secession of the southern states from the union in 1860-61. In 1859, Mr T. Buxley warned the country on the danger of trusting to this source. In May, 1860, he stated that through its failure the loss of the labouring classes was 200,000,000 sterling a year, and estimated the loss, including the employing classes, at nearly 400,000,000 a year.

At a meeting of noblemen and gentlemen, convened with the cotton manufacturing districts, at Bridgewater-house, St James's, on 19 July, 1860, the Earl of Derby in the chair, 20,000 were subscribed to the Cotton District Relief Fund. The viceroy of Egypt, in London at the time, gave 2000, and the queen gave 200. On 24 July liberal subscriptions flowed in from all parts. On 28 Aug. the Lord Mayor had received 41,000.

In the Lancashire district (population about 1,000,000) there were receiving parish relief, Sept. 1860, 40,000 persons, in Sept. 1861, 163,498. Earl of Derby, 1 Dec. 1860.

In July, 1861, about the value of 700,000 remained of the donations which had been received in money and goods, amounting to about 2,000,000.

* A total of various kinds of cotton gins, under the direction of Mr. Parker Watson, took place at Manchester, at Nov. 23 Dec. 1889.

The Union Relief Act (passed Aug. 1862, and continued in 1863) gave much relief by enabling owners to borrow money to be expended in public works to be executed by the unemployed workmen.

In Oct. 1864, much distress still existed, and fears were entertained for the approaching winter—50,000 more paupers than ordinary in cotton districts. Times, 18 Jan. 1865.

In June, 1865, Mr. Farnall, the special commissioner, (appointed in May, 1864) was recalled by the poor-law board, and the famine was declared to be ended. £200,000 had been expended in two years. The committee of the Central Relief Fund held their last meeting, 1 Dec. 1865.

The account of the fund was made up in 1873. The balance, above £100,000, was proposed to be appropriated to the foundation of a convalescent hospital for Lancashire.

A memorial window (the gift of the cotton operatives of Lancashire, who subscribed to commemorate the munificence of the metropolis to them during the cotton famine, 1861-4) placed in Guildhall and uncovered, 15 July, 1868.

Corporation Factories regulated by acts of parliament passed in 1845, 1853, 1864, and 1869. The hours of labour were limited, and the employment of children under nine years of age prohibited. In 1866, 1724 cotton mills employed 197,500 persons. In 1866, the persons employed were stated to be 451,000. 315,000 in Lancashire. Excitement through 5 per cent. reduction of wages in Lancashire, &c., Sept. 1883; strike; dispute settled, 27 Sept. 1883.

COTTONIAN LIBRARY, formed by sir Robert Bruce Cotton, 1600, et seq. He died 6 May, 1651. It was rescued from the republicans during the protectorate, 1649-60, and was secured to the public by a statute in 1700. It was removed to Essex-house in 1712; in 1730 to Dean's-yard, Westminster (where on 23 Oct. 1731, a part of the books sustained damage by fire); to the British Museum in 1757.

COTTON OIL, largely manufactured from the seeds in the south of the United States; year 1876-7, 3,376,000 gallons; 1878-9, 8,175,000 gallons.

COTTON-WOOL, see Respiration. Dr. Peery, in 1874, applied cotton-wool to purify the air for ventilating the houses of parliament.

COULMIERS, a village ten miles west of Orleans, central France. Here the Bavarians, under general Von der Tann, were defeated by the French army of the Loire, under general d'Aurelle de Paladine, who took about 2000 prisoners, 9 Nov. 1870, and regained Orleans.

COUNANI, a territory between Brazil and French Guiana. The ridiculous attempt to found an independent Republic failed here (M. Jules Gras, president), Aug.-Sept. 1887. An arrangement respecting this territory was made between France and Brazil in 1862, for police purposes.

COUNCIL OF JUDGES. See Judges.

COUNCILS. King Alfred, in about 886, is said to have so arranged the business of the nation, that all resolutions passed through three councils. The first was a select council which considered all affairs to be laid before the second council, bishops and nobles appointed by the king, like the present privy council. The third was a general assembly of the nation, called, in Saxon, Wittenagemot, in which quality and office gave a right to sit. In these three councils we behold the origin of the cabinet, privy councils, and parliaments; see Cabinet, Council and Privy Council, &c.

The division of Ireland into counties took place in 1562. Lord-lieutenants were appointed in 1549 in England, and in 1831 in Ireland. Counties first sent members to parliament, before which period knights met in their own counties, 1285. CHANDOS CLAUSE, Sect. 20 of the Reform act, 2 Will. By it occupiers as tenants of land not situate in a borough, paying an annual rent of 50*l.*, became entitled to a vote for the knight of the shire. It increased the number of tert voters, and in consequence several attempts were made to repeal it. It was superseded by the Reform act of 15 Aug. 1867.

By the Winter Assizes Act, 1876, certain counties were united (by order in council, first time, 23 Oct. 1876) to facilitate more speedy trials of prisoners.

COURLAND, a duchy of Livonia, conquered by Duma, 1218; by Teutonic knights, 1239; subjected to Poland in 1567, conquered by Charles XII. of Sweden in 1701; Ernest Biran, duke, 1737; his son, Peter, 1769; annexed to Russia, March, 1795. Population, 1886, 688,792.

COURT BABON, an ancient court which every lord of a manor may hold by prescription. In it duties, heriots, and customs are received, and estates and surrenders are passed. Its jurisdiction was restricted in 1747 and 1833. By the Small Debts Act, 1856, lords of the manor may give up holding these courts.

COURT CIRCULAR, conservative weekly paper; established 26 April, 1856.

COURT DRESS, see Dress.

COURT PARTY—COUNTRY PARTY, politicians in the parliaments of England, beginning about 1620. At the end of the 17th century the latter embodied Toryism and high church principles, maintained the rights of "the land," as opposed to Whiggism and the trading interests. Its most distinguished statesman was Sir Thomas Hanmer (the Montalto of Pope's Satires), who died in 1746. See Montalto.

COURT OF HONOUR. In England the court of chivalry, of which the lord high constable was a judge, was called Curia Militaris, in the time of Henry IV., and subsequently the Court of Honour. In Bavaria, to prevent duelling, a court of honour was instituted in April, 1810. Mr. Joseph Hamilton for many years ardently laboured to establish a similar institution in Britain.

COURT OF JUSTICIARY, HIGH, in Scotland, constituted by a commission under the great seal, 1671, ratified 1672. The procedure in this court was amended by an act passed in 1868. See Court of Session.

COURT OF REQUESTS, see Conscience.

COURT OF REVIEW, see Bankruptcy.

COURT OF SESSION, the highest civil tribunal in Scotland, was instituted by James V. by statute, 17 May, 1532, its origin being ascribed to the ancient Synod of Albany. It consisted of 14 judges and a president, and replaced a committee of parliament. In 1820 the number of judges was reduced; and the court now consists of the lord president (formerly lord justice general), the lord justice clerk, and 11 ordinary judges. In 1867 the number of sessions this court was altered by the Lord of Session; and, on 21 July, 1868, the lord president, the right hon. John Inglis, appointed, Feb. 1867; died 20 Aug., succeeded by James P. B. Robertson, Sept. 1891.

COURT THEATRE, Blooms-square, Chelsea, opened 25 Jan. 1871; Miss Litten first manager.

COURTRAI (Belgium). Here Robert, count of Artois, who had defeated the Flemings in 1307, was defeated and slain by them, 11 July, 1320. The conflict was named the "Battle of Spura," from the number of gilt spurs collected.

COURTS MARTIAL are regulated by the Mutiny act, first passed in 1690. The powers of these courts were much diminished in 1867, in consequence of the measures used to suppress the negro insurrection in Jamaica, Oct. 1866. See Army, 1 Jan. 1887.

COURTS OF JUSTICE were instituted at Athens, 1507 B.C. (see Demosthenes); by Moses, 1493 B.C. (Exod. xviii. 25), and in Rome. For these realms, see Chancery, Common Pleas, Exchequer, King's Bench, &c. The citizens of London were privileged to plead their own cause in the courts of judicature, without employing lawyers, except in pleas of the crown, 41 Hen. III. 1257. Stow. The rights of the Irish courts were established by the British parliament in April, 1783. See Supreme Court.

COURTS OF LAW FEES ACT, passed 20 Aug. 1867, directs the application of surplus fees towards providing new courts of justice. Acts for building these courts were passed in 1865 and 1866. See Law Courts.

COURTS OF SURVEY, consisting of a judge and two assistants, for appeals respecting unseaworthy ships, were directed to be appointed in certain ports and districts by the Merchant Shipping Act, 39 & 40 Vict. c. 80 (15 Aug. 1876). They act in 1877.

COUTRAS (S. W. France). Here Henry of Navarre totally defeated the duc de Joyeuse and the royalists, 20 Oct. 1587.

COVENANTERS, those persons who in the reign of Charles I. having signed the solemn league and covenant, engaged to stand by each other in opposition to the projects of the king in 1638. The covenant or league between England and Scotland (the preceding one modified), solemnly adopted by the parliament, 25 Sept. 1643; was accepted by Charles II. 16 Aug. 1650, but repudiated by him on his restoration in 1661, when it was declared to be illegal by parliament, and copies of it ordered to be burnt. See Commonwealth and Northwell Bridge.

The covenant consisted of six articles:
1. The preservation of the reformed church in Scotland and the reformation of religion in England and Ireland.
2. The extirpation of popery, prelacy, schism, &c.
3. The preservation of the liberties of parliament and the king's person and authority.
4. The discovery and punishment of all malignants, &c.
5. The preservation of "a blessed peace between these kingdoms."
6. The sanctifying all who enter into the covenant:
"This will we do as in the sight of God."

COVENT GARDEN (London), corrupted from "Convent Garden," having been the garden of St. Peter's convent. The square was built about 1633, and the piazza on the north side and the church were designed by Inigo Jones. The fruit and vegetable markets were rebuilt in 1820-30, from designs by Mr. Fowler (the ground belonging to the Duke of Bedford).

COVENT GARDEN THEATRE sprung out of one in Lincoln's-in-fields, through a patent granted 14 Chas. II. 1662, to sir William Davenant, whose company was designated the "duke's servants," as a compliment to the duke of York, afterwards James II.; see under Theatre.—The theatre was burnt down 5 March, 1856, during a bal masqué held by Mr. Anderson, the wizard of the north. The present theatre by R. Barry was opened 15 May, 1858. The Moral Hall adjoining it was opened 7 March, 1860, with the volunteers' ball.

COVENTRY ACT passed, to prevent malicious maiming and wounding, 6 March, 1671, in consequence of sir John Coventry, K.B., M.P., being maimed in the streets of London, by sir Thomas Sandys and others, adherents of the duke of Monmouth, 21 Dec. 1670. Repealed 1828.

COVENTRY (Warwickshire). Leofric, earl of Mercia, lord of Coventry, is said to have relieved it from heavy taxes, at the intercession of his wife Godiva, on condition of her riding naked through the streets, about 1057. Processions in her memory took place in 1851; 23 June, 1862; 4 June, 1866; 20 June, 1870; 4 June, 1877; 6 Aug. 1883; and 2 Aug. 1892. The legend is probably fabulous. A parliament was held here in the reign of Henry IV. called parliamentum indoctum, or the unlearned parliament, because lawyers were excluded, 1404; and in the reign of Henry VI. another met, called parliamentum diabolum, from the acts of attainder passed against the duke of York and others, 30 Nov. 1459. The town was surrounded with strong walls, three miles in circumference, and twenty-six towers, which were demolished by order of Charles II. in 1662. The ribbon-makers here suffered much from want of work in the winter of 1810-6. An industrial exhibition here was opened by earl Granville, 19 June, closed by the earl of Clarendon, 21 Oct. 1867. The prince and princess of Wales were warmly received 7 Nov. 1874. The BISHOPRIC was founded by Oswy, king of Mercia, 656, and had the double name of Coventry and Lichfield, which was reversed by later bishops. It was so wealthy, that king Offa, by the favour of pope Adrian, made it archiepiscopal; but this title was laid aside on the death of that king. In 1075 the see was removed to Chester; in 1102 to Coventry; and afterwards to its original foundation, Lichfield, but with great opposition from the monks of Coventry. Coventry merged into the bishopric of Lichfield (which see). Population, 1881, 44,831; 1891, 52,720.

New park, gift of Mr. D. Spencer, opened 11 Oct. 1883

COW-POCK INOCULATION; see Small Pox and Vaccination.

CRABS. The size at which they are to be sold is determined by the Fisheries Act, 1877.

CRACOW, a city in Austrian Poland. The Poles elected Cracow for their duke, who built Cracow with the spoils taken from the Franks about 700. It was their capital, 1240-1600. Cracow was taken by Charles XII. in 1702, and taken and retaken several times by the Russians and other confederates. The sovereign was crowned at Cracow until 1764. The Russians, who had taken it 1768, were expelled by Kosciuszko, 24 March, 1794; but it surrendered to the Prussians, 15 June same year, and in 1795 was awarded to Austria. Cracow was formed into a republic, June, 1815. Occupied by 10,000 Russians, who followed here the defeated Poles, Sept. 1831. Its independence was extinguished; and it was seized by the emperor of Austria, and incorporated with his empire, 16 Nov. 1846, which was protested against by England, France, Sweden, and Turkey; see Poland. A dreadful fire laid the greater part of the city in ashes, 13 July, 1850. The discovery on 22 July, 1860, of Barbara Astryk, a man, secluded for 21 years in a convent cell, led to violent rioting. Population, 1890, 76,025.

The Bishop Albin Dunajewski, made a prince of the Empire, and primate of Poland Jan. 1869
The body of Adam Mickiewicz, the Polish poet, brought from France, re-interred here 4 July, 1890
Polish congress of natural science and medicine about 19 July, 1891

CRANES are of very early date, for the engines of Archimedes may be so called. In 1857 a crane had been erected at Glasgow capable of lifting 50 tons. One in Woolwich arsenal in 1881 lifted 400 tons. See Derrick.

CRANIOLOGY (or PHRENOLOGY), the study of the external form of the human skull, as indicative of mental powers and moral qualities. Dr. Gall, the propounder, was a German physician, born March, 1758, and his first observations were among his schoolfellows. Afterwards he studied the heads of criminals and others, and eventually reduced his ideas to a system, marking out the skull like a map. His first lecture was given at Vienna in 1796; but in 1802 the Austrian government prohibited his teaching. In 1800 he was joined by Dr. Spurzheim; and in 1810-12 they published at Paris their work on the "Anatomy and Physiology of the Nervous System, and of the Brain in particular." Gall died in 1828. The researches of Gall and Spurzheim led to increased study of the brain. Combe's "Phrenology," first published in 1819, is the popular English work on this subject. Phrenological societies were formed early in London and Edinburgh.

Phrenology was refuted by Lord Jeffrey in the Edinburgh Review, in 1826, and more recently by Dr. W. E. Carpenter. Professor David Ferrier reported the results of researches tending to prove localization of certain faculties in the brain to the British Association, Sept. 1873. He published his work "The Functions of the Brain," 1876; and edition 1887.
"Brain," a quarterly journal, began in 1878.

CRANMER, LATIMER, AND RIDLEY, martyrdom of, see Protestants, note.

CRANNOGES, see Lake-dwellings.

CRANNON or CRANON, Theomely, N. Greece. Near here the Macedonians under Antipater and Craterus defeated the confederated Greeks, twice by sea, and once by land, 322 B.C. The Athenians demanded peace, and Antipater put their orators to death, among whom was Hyperides, who, that he might not betray the secrets of his country when under torture, cut out his tongue, and Demosthenes is said to have taken poison shortly after.

CRANWORTH'S ACT, LORD, to simplify the practice of conveyancers, 23 & 24 Vict. c. 145 (1860).

CRAONNE (N. France). Here Victor and Ney defeated the Prussians under Blücher after a severe contest, 7 March, 1814.

CRAPE. It is said some crape was made by Ste. Badour, when queen of France, about 660. It is said to have been first made at Belgium.

CRAVANT, see Cravent.

GRAYFORD (Kent). Here the Countess said to have defeated the Britons, about 457.

CHRYSONE, coloured substances made into paste, and dried into pencils, were known in France about 1425 and improved by L'Oricr, 1748.

CHRYSONE, or CHRYSONE (discovered by Reichenbach about 1833), a powerful antiseptic and coagulator of albuminous tissue, is obtained by the destructive distillation of wood and other organic matters. It has been used for the preservation of meat, timber, &c.

CHRYSONE (from the Greek chrysa, flesh), the chemical principle of flesh, was discovered in 1835 by E. Chevreul, and has been investigated by Liebig, Gregory, and others.

CHRYSONE OF THE WORLD. The date given by the English bible, and by Usher, Blair, and some others, is 4004 B.C. There are about 140 different dates assigned to the Creation, varying from 3616 to 6984 B.C. Dr. Hales gives 5411; see Encyc.

Hales's Creation [foratong], composed 1766-8; first performed (in London, at Covent Garden Theatre), 2d March, 1800; in Paris, 24 Dec. same year.

CHRYSONE, establishments for temporarily receiving the young children of working mothers; begun at Paris, about 1844; in London (in Rathbone-place, &c.) about 1863; others since.

CHRYSONE, or CHRYSONE (N. France), where Edward III. and his son, Edward the Black Prince, and an army of about 35,800, obtained a great victory over Philip, king of Bohemia, with about 130,000, 26 Aug. 1346. John, king of Bohemia (nearly blind); James, king of Majorca; Ralph, duke of Lorraine (sovereign prince); and a number of French nobles, together with 30,000 private men, were slain, while the loss of the English was very small. The crest of the king of Bohemia (three ostrich feathers, with the motto Je tiens—in English, "I serve") has since been adopted by princes of Wales.

CHRYSONE PONCHIER, &c. A plan of providing loans to landowners was introduced by Frederick the Great of Prussia, in 1761, in some of the Prussian provinces, as the best method of alleviating the distresses of the landed interest caused by his war. The system consists of lending money to landowners on the security of their estates, and providing the loan capital by the issue of debentures charged upon the aggregate mortgaged estates. There are two modes of carrying out this scheme: (1) by means of an association of landowners; (2) by means of a proprietary public company. The former obtains in Eastern Prussia, but the latter is exclusively found in Western Europe.

Credit Foncier companies have been founded in Hamburg (1782), Western Prussia (1767), Belgium (1841), France (1862), England (1865). Similar companies were formed in all the states of Europe, in India, and in our colonies and dependencies. A. G. Henriquez. See France, May, 1862.

CREDIT MOBILIER: a joint-stock company with this name was established at Paris by Isaac and Emile Pereire, and others, 18 Nov. 1852.

It took up or originated trading enterprises of all kinds, applying to them the principle of commandite, or limited liability; and was authorized to supersede or buy in any other companies (repurchasing their shares or bonds with its own capital, and also to carry on the ordinary business of banking. The funds were to be obtained by a joint-supply of all millions sterling, the issue of certificates of deposit of 25 days' date or sight, and the receipt of money on deposit or current account. The society accordingly proceeded; but was abandoned by its subscribers, and a near approach to its bankruptcy in 1858.

Several of the directors failed, Sept. 1857, no dividend paid. May, 1858. Many companies based on its principles established in London. 1863. Emile and Isaac Pereire withdrew from the management; the company failed, and the capital was said to have disappeared. 1867. The high court of appeal decided that MM. Cremona was eminent for violin makers from about 1550 to 1750.

Alexander III. of Scotland, 1249, had a plume of feathers, and the helmet of Robert I. was surmounted by a crown, 1306; and that of James I. by a lion, 1424. In the 15th and 16th centuries, the crest was described to be a figure placed upon a wreath, coronet, or cap of maintenance. Quilman.

CRICKET, an ancient English game, said to be identical with the "club ball" of the 14th century; mentioned in 1598. Rules were laid down in 1774 by a committee of noblemen and gentlemen, including the duke of Dorset and six Hercey Men. In 1861 the All England Eleven gained and lost games in Australia; in Sept. 1866, they beat the CRIME. About 1856 it was computed that a fifteenth part of the population of the United Kingdom lived by crime. The increase in education and manufactures is gradually reducing this proportion. From 1848 to 1865 there had been no commitment for political offences, such as treason or sedition. The returns of thirty-two years showed that crime absolutely and relatively diminished (Sept. 1866). "Judicial Statistics," with abundant details, are published by the government annually, price 2s. On 17 Feb. 1887, of 166 persons thus liberated, 58 were believed to be living honestly.

In 1861, 1862, and 1863, the system was considered to have failed through the numerous crimes committed by ticket-of-leave; it was modified by the Penal Servitude Act, in 1864.

CRIMEA, or CRIM TARTARY, a peninsula in the Euxine or Black Sea, the ancient Taurica Chersonesus, colonized by the Greeks about 550 B.C. The Milesians founded the kingdom of Bosphorus, now Kertch, which about 108 B.C. formed part of the dominion of Mithridates, king of Pontus, whose descendants continued to rule the country under Roman protection till the irruption of the Goths, Hunas, &c. about A.D. 258. About 1237 it fell into the hands of the Mongols under Genghis Khan; soon after the Venetians established commercial stations, with a lucrative trade, but were supplanted by the Genoese, who were permitted to rebuild and fortify Kaffa, about 1261. In 1475 Mahomet II. expelled the Genoese, and subjected the peninsula to the Ottoman yoke; permitting the government to remain in the hands of the native khans, but closing the Black Sea to Western Europe. In 1774, by the intervention of the empress Catherine II., the Crimea recovered its independence: but on the abdication of the khan in 1783, the Russians took possession of the country, after a war with Turkey, and retained it by the treaty of Jassy, 9 Jan. 1792. The Crimea (now Taurida), was divided into eight governments in 1802. War having been declared against Russia by England and France, 23 March, 1854, large masses of troops were sent to the East, which, after remaining some time at Gallipoli, and other places, sailed for Varna, where they disembarked 29 May. An expedition against the Crimea having been determined on, the allied British, French, and Turkish forces, amounting to 58,000 men (25,000 British), commanded by lord Raglan and marshal St. Arnaud, sailed from Varna, 3 Sept. and landed on the 14th, 15th, and 16th, without opposition, at Old Fort, near Eupatoria, about 30 miles from Sebastopol. On the 20th they attacked the Russians, between 40,000 and 50,000 strong (under prince Menchikoff), entrenched on the heights of Alma, supposed to be unassailable. After a sharp contest the Russians were totally routed. See Alma and Russo-Turkish War. Peace was proclaimed in April, 1856, and the allies quitted the Crimea 12 July following.

CRIMINAL LAW PROCEDURE (IRELAND) ACT, (see Ireland) 50 & 51 Vict. c. 30, passed 19 July, 1887, provides for summary jurisdiction by magistrates, special juries, change of place of trial, proclamation of districts, prohibition of dangerous associations, and continuance of 44 & 45 Vict. c. 5, and 49 & 50 Vict. c. 24.

Act for Scotland passed 16 Sept. 1887 to simplify and amend the Criminal Law of Scotland.

CRIMINAL LAWS OF ENGLAND. Their great severity, pointed out by Sir Samuel Romilly, Sir James Mackintosh, and others, about 1818, was considerably mitigated by Sir R. Peel's acts, passed 1826-8. The criminal law acts were consolidated by 24 and 25 Vict. cc. 94-100, 1861. Some defects were amended by an act passed in 1867. The punishment of death is now virtually restricted to treason and wilful murder.

CRIMINALS, a group of the colored people, who were taken to the United States by the British government, and brought in by the British government, 14 May, 1858. Sentenced to royal penitentiaries (Quakers Blackburn and others) and Sir James F. Stephen; announced 3 July, 1857.

The bill brought in and withdrawn. Criminal Law Amendment Act (relating to women) passed, 14 Aug. 1855.

CRIMISTUS, a river in Sicily, near which Timoleon defeated the Carthaginians, 339 B.C.

CRIMPING-HOUSES were used to entrap persons into the army; hence the name of "crimp agent." Some of them in London were destroyed by the populace, in consequence of a young man who had been enticed into one being killed in endeavouring to escape, 16 Sept. 1794.

CRINAN CANAL, Argyshire, cut through Kintyre peninsula, 1793-1801. 15 locks; saves about 115 miles.

CRINOLINE (a French word, meaning stuff made of crin, hair) is the modern name of the "farthingale" of the time of queen Elizabeth, hoop-like petticoats made of whalebone, &c., revived in France and England since 1855. They have frequently occasioned loss of life, by coming in contact with fire and machinery. In No. 116 of the Tatler, published 5 Jan. 1710, is an amusing trial of the hoop-peticoat then in fashion.

CRIPPLEGATE (London), was so-called from the lame beggars who sat there, so early as the year 1010. The gate was now built by the brewers of London in 1344; and was pulled down and sold for gut in July, 1760. The poet Milton was buried in the church near it, 12 Nov. 1674. See London.

CRIPPLES' HOME, Marylebone-road, established 1851, for crippled girls to be taught suitable trades. The Cripples' Nursery, Old Quebec-street and Margate, was established 1862.

CRISPIN and CRIPPIANUS are said to have been two saints, born at Rome, from whence they travelled to Soissons, in France, to propagate the Christian religion. They worked as wheelwrights, but the governor of the town discovering them to be Christians, ordered them to be beheaded, about 288. Their day is 25 Oct.

CRITERION THEATRE, Regent's Circus, Finsbury, opened by Spens and Fould, 21 March, 1874.

CRITICS. The first society of them was formed 350 B.C. Blasphemy, Varro, Cicero, Apollonius, and Aristophanes were ancient critics. In modern times the Journal des Savants was the earliest periodical critical work. It was originated by Denis de Sallie, an ecclesiastical councillor in the parliament of France, and was first published at Paris, 30 May, 1655, and in 1656 continued. Jean La Cretelle's "Art Critique" published 1765, is said to be the earliest systematic treatise. The first work of this kind in England was the Review of Daniel Defoe (his works being reviewed by himself), published in Feb. 1729. The Quarterly Review began 1789, and the Notes of Literature in 1714; discontinued in 1728. See Reviews.

The inability of this criticism was established in the English courts, in Feb. 1794, when an action was entered against a critic, brought by an author against a reviewer for a severe criticism upon his work, was determined in favour of the defendant on the principle that criticism is allowable, however sharp, if just, and not malicious. See Travis, 1875.

CROSIER, a staff surmounted by a cross, borne before an archbishop, was in use in the 4th century. The bearing a crosier before ecclesiastics is mentioned in the life of St. Cassarius of Arles about 500. The term "crosier" is also applied to the pastoral staff of a bishop, which terminates in an ornamental curve or crook.

CROSS. That on which the Redeemer suffered on Mount Calvary, was said to have been found at Jerusalem, with two others, deep in the ground, by the empress Helena, mother of Constantine I., 3 May, 326 (termed the Invention of the Cross); commemorated annually on that day. It was carried away by Chosroes, king of Persia, on the plundering of Jerusalem; but was recovered by the emperor Heraclius (under whose reign it was carried off), 14 Sept. 615, and that day has since been commemorated as "the festival of the Exaltation of the Cross," established in 642.

It is asserted by church writers that a great shining cross was seen in the heavens by Constantine, and that it led him to adopt it as his standard, with the inscription "In hoc signo vinces." "Under this sign thou shalt conquer." With this (Labarum) he advanced to Rome, where he vanquished Maxentius, 27 Oct. 312. Langlet Signifying with the Cross was first practised by Christians to distinguish themselves from the Pagans, about 120

In the time of Tertullian, it was deemed efficacious against poison, witchcraft, &c.

The crown of Alfred had two little bells attached (893): it is said to have been long preserved at Westminster, and may have been that described in the parliamentary inventory taken in 1649.

The revenue of the duchy of Cornwall belongs to the prince of Wales even during his minority. Henry VII. (1485) resumed those lands which had been given to their followers by the sovereigns of the house of York. The hereditary estates of the crown were largely bestowed on their successors by the monarchs — especially by the Stuarts. The income of the crown, formerly derived from lands, royalties, &c., now belongs to the state exchequer, see Civil List. In the year ending 31 March, 1891, the receipts were 515,737 l. 3s. 10d., the expenditure 57,121 l. 19s. 6d.

CROWNS in gold were coined by Henry VIII., 1522. Crowns and half-crowns of silver were coined in England by Edward VI. in 1553. CRUSADES (French Crusades), were undertaken to drive the infidels from Jerusalem and the "Holy Land." Peter Gautier, the Hermit, an officer of Amiens, on his return from pilgrimage incited pope Urban II. to expel infidels from the city where Christ had taught. Urban convened a council of 310 bishops at Clermont in France, at which the ambassadors of the chief Christian potentates assisted, and gave Peter the commission to summon Europe to a general war, 1094. The first crusade was published; an army of 300,000 men was raised, of which Peter had the direction, and Godfrey de Bouillon the command, 1095. The warriors wore a red cross upon the right shoulder; and their motto was Volenti de Deo, "God's will."—The French government have published some of the Historians of the Crusades in a magnificent form (1844-56).

II. Franchised by St. Bernard in 1146, headed by emperor Conrad II., and Louis VII. of France. Crusaders defeated Jerusalem lost in 1187.

CUSTOMS were collected upon merchandise in England, under Ethelred II. in 979. The king's claim to them by grant of parliament was established 3 Edw. I. 1274. The customs were farmed to Sir Thomas Smith for annual sums varying from 14,000*l.* to 50,000*l.* in the reign of Elizabeth. 1560. They were farmed by Charles II. for 390,000*l.* in 1666. Downton. In 1671 commissioners were appointed. The customs were consolidated by Mr. Pitt in 1787. Between 1820 and 1830 so many reductions and consolidations were made in the customs department, that above a quarter of a million was saved in salaries, though the work had enormously increased.—Acts consolidating the customs duties were passed in 1853, 1854, and 1855, whereby the number of articles in the tariff and the amount of the customs were greatly reduced. Many changes have been made since; by the Customs

Act of 1830, the laws were amended and the duties modified; see Boroma. The disqualification of custom-house officers and officers of excise from voting for the election of members of parliament in 1782, was removed in 1867-8.

The laws respecting the customs were amended by an act passed at Aug. 1872, and consolidated by acts passed, 24 July, 1876; amended, 1887.

The term Dance of Death was also applied to the frenzied movements of the Flagellants, who had sometimes skeletons depicted on their clothing, about the end of the 12th century.

Dancing mania, accompanied by aberration of mind and distortions of the body, was very prevalent in Germany in 1374, and in the 16th century in Italy, where it was termed Tarantism, and erroneously supposed to be caused by the bite of the Tarantula spider. The music and songs employed for its cure are still preserved.

DANCING was practised by the Curetes, 1539 B.C. Buccheis. The Greeks combined the dance with their dramas, and pantomimic dances were introduced on the Roman stage, 22 B.C. Umbra. Dancing by cinque paces was introduced into England from Italy, A.D. 1541. In modern times the French introduced ballets ensembles in their mimical dramas. The country dance (contre-danse) is of French origin, but its date is not precisely known. Spelman. See Morice Dance, Quadrille, and Waltz.

It was rebuilt in 1537 by Rayn, queen of George the Old, for which she was named “Dannebald,” the pride of the Danes. It was repaired by Genl Tryppmann between 1792 and 1802. DANUBE (German, Donau; anciently Ister and Danuvius), the largest river in Europe, except the Volga, rises in the Black Forest and falls into the Black Sea. Trajan's bridge at Glodova was destroyed by Adrian, to prevent the barbarians entering Dacia. Steam navigation was projected on this river by count Szechenyi, in 1830, and in that year the first steam-boat was launched at Vienna, and the Austrian company was formed shortly after. The Bavarian company was formed 1836. A canal between the Danube and the Main was completed by Louis I. of Bavaria. Charlemagne, in the 8th century, contemplated uniting the Danube and Rhine by a canal. At the peace of 30 March, 1856, the free navigation of the Danube was secured, and an independent European commission appointed to make it navigable from Isackthi to the sea, which has worked with good effect. The British government, in 1868, lent 135,000. to complete the works. The treaty respecting the navigation of the Danube renewed for twelve years, 13 March, 1871. The river suddenly took possession of a new bed near Vienna, 17 April, which was formally opened 30 May, 1875.

A company was formed in 1695, and in 1698-9, three expeditions sailed thither from Scotland, where 400,000 had been raised. The first consisted of 1200 young men of all classes, besides women and children. The enterprise not having been recognised by the English government, the settlements were abandoned by the Spaniards, to whom they were finally surrendered, 30 March, 1700. Paterson and a few survivors from famine and disease, had set off shortly before the arrival of the second expedition. Several years after, 308,081 were voted by parliament to the survivors as "Equivalent money." 18,000 were also voted to Paterson; but the bill was rejected in the house of Lords. See Panama. The average breadth, 40 miles; least breadth, 30 miles.

DARJEELING, a British district in the Himalayas, ceded about 1824. The capital Darjeeling, is used as a sanitarium. The cultivation of tea is flourishing, and the population rapidly increasing (1859.)

DARK AGES, a term applied to the Middle Ages; according to Hallam, comprising about 1000 years—from the invasion of France by Clovis, 486, to that of Naples by Charles VIII., 1495. During this time learning was at a low ebb. Hallam's "View of the State of Europe during the Middle Ages," published 1818. Supplemental Notes, 1848. Darkest Africa, see Soudan, 1887-90. DARWINISM, see Development and Species.

DATES were affixed to grants and assignments to Edw. I. 1250. Before this time it was usual at least to pass lands without dating the deed of conveyance. Lucas. Numerous instruments of assignment enrolled among our early records establish this fact. The date is determined by the names of the parties, particularly that of the grantor: the possession of land was proof of the title to it. Harder. A useful glossary of the dates given in old charters and chronicles will be found in "Nicolas's 'Chronology of History.'" J. J. Bond's "Handy-Book for Verifying Dates," published 1866.

DAUPHINÉ, * S. E. France, successively held by the Allobroges, Burgundians, and Lombards, was, about 732-4, delivered from the invading Saracens by Charles Martel. After forming part of the kingdom of Arles, it was much subdivided among counts. One of these, Humbert II., ceded Dauphiné and the Viennois to Philip VI., in 1343, for his eldest son, on the condition that the prince should be styled dauphin, which took effect in 1349, when Humbert became a monk. Louis Antoine, duke of Angoulême, son of Charles X., the last dauphin who assumed the title at his father's accession, 16 Sept. 1824, died 3 June, 1844.

DAVENPORT, see Plymouth.

DAVID'S, St. (S. W. Wales), the ancient Meneips, now a poor decayed place, but once the metropolitan see of Wales, and archiepiscopal. When Christianity was planted in Britain, three archbishops' seats were appointed, viz. London, York, and Caerleon upon Usk, in Monmouthshire. That at Caerleon being too near the dominions of the Saxons, was removed to Mynew, and called St. David's, in honour of the archbishop who removed it, 522. St. Sampson was the last archbishop of the Welsh; for, withdrawing himself on account of a pestilence to Dôle, in Brittany, carried the pall with him. In the reign of Henry I. the archbishops submitted to the see of Canterbury. Beaton. Present income 4500*l*.

DAVID'S DAY, St., 1 March, is annually commemorated by the Welsh, in honour of St. David. Tradition states that on St. David's birthday, 540, a great victory was obtained by the Welsh over their Saxon invaders; and that the Welsh soldiers were distinguished, by order of St. David, by a lock in their caps.

DAVIS'S STRAIT (N. America), discovered by John Davis, 11 Aug. 1585, on his voyage to find a N. W. passage, 1585-87. He made two more voyages for the same purpose, and five voyages to the East Indies. In the last he was killed by Japanese pirates, on the coast of Malacca, 27 or 29 Dec., 1605.

DAVVUM, a new metal, discovered by Sergius Kora, 26 June, 1877, in the residuum of platinum ore; said to be hard, infusible, and rather ductile. It has been suspected to be ruthenium.

DAY. Day began at sunrise among most of the northern nations, at sunset among the Athenians and Jews; and among the Romans at midnight as with us. The Italians in some places, reckon the day from sunset to sunset, making their clocks strike twenty-four hours round. The Chinese divide the day into twelve parts of two hours each. The astronomical day begins at noon, is divided into twenty-four hours (instead of two parts of twelve hours). Thus the astronomical day 8 Dec. begins at noon of 8 Dec. and ends at noon of 9 Dec. At Greenwich, from 1 Jan. 1885, the day of 24 hours began at midnight; the reckoning was discontinued for railways, &c. A system of universal time for all countries was put forth by Mr. Stephen Fleming, of Canada. The Washington and the Madison Congresses adopted a resolution, and it declaring the universal day to be the mean solar day, beginning, for all the world, at the moment of mean midnight of the initial meridian, coinciding with the beginning of the civil day, and that meridian to be counted from zero up to 24 hours, 21 Oct. 1884. The scheme for universal time was advocated by Mr. W. H. M. Christie, the Astronomer Royal, at the Royal Institution, 19 March, 1886.

DEACONS (literally servants), an order of Christian ministers, began with the Apostles, about 53. (Acts vi.) Their qualifications are given by St. Paul (65), 1st Timothy iii. 8-14. Mr. John Andrews, master of Shrewsbury High School, was ordained at Lichfield Cathedral a permanent deacon in conformity with a resolution passed in the Upper House of Convocation, Feb. 1884; his duties are to assist the priest in the communion service, &c., 18 Dec. 1887.

DEACONESES, or ministering widows, have their qualifications given in 1 Tim. v. 9, 10 (65). Their duties were to visit the poor and sick, assist at the agape or love feasts, admonish the young women, &c. The office was discontinued in the Western church in the 5th and 6th centuries, and in the Greek church about the 12th, but has been recently revived in Germany. The appointment of deaconesses, subject to the parochial clergy, was advocated by the bishop of Ely about 1853, and some were appointed. The Diocesan Deaconess Institution, London, was established in 1861.

DEAD. Prayers for their benefit were probably offered up in the 2nd century, being referred to by Tertullian, who died 220. The practice was protested against by Aetius, and defended by Epiphanius, who died 403. It is generally objected to by the church of England, but is not expressly forbidden; so decided by sir Herbert Jenner in the Court of Arches (Phillimore, Ecl. Law, 1873-6).

Book of the Dead, a collection of prayers and exorcisms written in Egyptian hieroglyphic or hieratic characters, composed for the benefit of the pilgrim soul in his journey through Amenti (the Egyptian Hades). Portions of these papyri were placed with the mummy in his tomb. They are said to form fully one half of the thousands which are extant. The "Book of the Dead" is dated from the 4th dynasty 3713-3566 A.C. After much toil a pure text with illustrations was published by M. Édouard Naville, 1886. Translations in several European languages have appeared. A facsimile of the Papyrus of Ani in the British Museum was printed in 1890.

DEAD WEIGHT LOAN acquired its name from its locking up the capital of the Bank of England, which in 1833 advanced 11,000,000*l*. to the government (to construct new ordnance, &c.). The latter engaged to give an annuity of 585,740*l*. for 44 years, which ceased in June, 1867.

DEAF AND DUMB. The first systematic attempt to instruct the deaf and dumb was made by Pedro de Ponce, a Benedictine monk of Spain, on Jerome Cardan's system, about 1570. See Blind. Bonet, a monk, published a system at Madrid 1620. Dr. Wallis published a work in England on the subject 1690.

The first regular academy for the deaf and dumb in Britain opened in Edinburgh 1772. In modern times the abbé de l'Épée (1712-89), and his friend and pupil the abbé Suard of Paris (1740-1800); the rev. Mr. Tawman and Mr. Baker, of London; Mr. Thos. Baldwin of Edinburgh; and surgeon Orpen of Dublin, have laboured with much success in promoting the instruction of the deaf and dumb. Van Fraeght introduced the so-called German system into this country in July, 1867; published his "Plan for the Establishment of Day Schools [in preference to boarding-houses] for the Deaf and Dumb" (in which they are to be taught by speech and lip teaching only; the finger alphabet and artificial signs being rigidly excluded), in 1871. By the help of the baroness Meyer de Rothschild and others, the "Association for the Oral Instruction of the Deaf and Dumb" was founded in 1872, and a day-school opened at 19, Fitzroy-square 16 July, 1872

DEAN, FOREST OF, Gloucestershire, anciently wooded quite through, and in the last century, though much curtailed, was twenty miles in length and ten in breadth. It was famous for its oaks, the material of our ships of war. Riots in this district, when more than 3000 persons assembled in the forest, and demolished upwards of fifty miles of wall and fence, throwing open 10,000 acres of plantation, took place on 8 June, 1831. The Dean forest (mines) act passed 16 Aug. 1871.

DEAN (decanus), a name commonly given to the arch-priest, or eldest presbyter, in the 12th century; originally a military title, an officer over ten soldiers. In the church of England the dean and chapter of a cathedral nominally elect the bishop and form his council. By 13 & 14 Car. II. (1662), a dean must be in priest's orders; previously the office had occasionally been held by a layman, with special dispensation. The ancient office of "rural dean" has been much revived since 1850. The Deans' and Canons' resignation act passed 13 May, 1872. The Five Deans' memorial, and counter memorial, see Church of England, 1881. See Archææ.

DEBATES IN PARLIAMENT. See Reporting.

DEBATING SOCIETIES; several formed in the last century. The celebrated Oxford Union Society was founded in 1823, and many orators have been trained by it.

DEBTORS have been subjected to imprisonment in almost all countries and times. In the eighteen months subsequent to the panic of Dec. 1825, as many as 101,000 writs for debt were issued in England. In the year ending 5 Jan. 1830, there were 7114 persons sent to the several prisons of London; and on that day, 1547 of the number were yet confined. On the 1st of Jan. 1840, the number of prisoners for debt in England and Wales was 1732; in Ireland the number was under 2000; and in Scotland under 100. The operation of statutes of relief, and other causes, considerably reduced the number of imprisoned debtors. When the new Bankruptcy act (abolishing imprisonment for debt except when fraudulently contracted) came into operation in Nov. 1825, & many of the debtors who had been confined were released. Arrest of Absconding Debtors bill, 14 & 15 Vict. c. 52, 1852. DECCAN (Dekhan or Dakhan), S. India, was invaded by the Mahometans in 1204. The first independent sultan was Ala-ud-din. The natives revolted, and the dynasty of Bahmani was founded by Hasan Ganga in 1347. About 1686-90, Aurangzeb I. recovered the Deccan, but soon lost great part of it to the Marhattas. The Nizam al Mulk, his viceroy, became independent in 1717. A large part of the Deccan was ceded to the English in 1818.

DECEMBER (from decem, ten), the tenth month of the year of Romulus, commencing in March. In 713 B.C. Numa introduced January and February before March, and thenceforward December became the twelfth of the year. In the reign of Commodus, A.D. 181-192, December was called, by way of flattery, Amazonius, in honour of a courtesan whom that prince had loved, and had had painted like an Amazon. The English commenced their year on the 25th December, until the reign of William I.; see Year. For 2 Dec. revolution see France, 1851.

DECEMVIRI, or Ten Men, appointed to draw up a code of laws, to whom for a year the whole government of Rome was committed, 451 B.C. The laws they drew up were approved by the senate and general assembly of the people, written on ten metallic tables, and set up in the place where the people met (comitium). Two more tables were added by a second decemvirate, 450 B.C. The tyrannical conduct of Appius Claudius, one of the Decemviri, towards Virginia, who was stabbed by her father Virginia to save her from slavery, led to a revolution, and the re-establishment of the consular government, 449 B.C.

DECENNALIA, festivals instituted by Augustus, 17 B.C., celebrated by the Roman emperors every tenth year of their reign, with sacrifices, games, and largesses. Livy. Celebrated by Antonine Pius, A.D. 148.

DECORATIVE ART. Its principles, enunciated by A. W. Pugin, in his "Designs," in 1835, have been advanced by Owen Jones, Redgrave, and others. Owen Jones's elaborate "Grammar of Ornament," was published in 1856. A Decorative Art society, founded in 1844, existed for a short time only.

DE COURCY'S PRIVILEGE, that of standing covered before the king, granted by king John to John de Courcy, baron of Kingsale, and his successors, in 1203. He was the first Irish nobleman created by an English sovereign, 27 Hen. II. 1181, and was entrusted with the government of Ireland, 1185. The privilege was allowed to the baron of Kingsale by Will. III., Geo. III., and by Geo. IV. at his court held in Dublin, in Aug. 1821. The 31st baron, John Fitz-Roy de Courcy, who succeeded 1874, died, aged 69, 20 Nov. 1890. The present baron is the 32nd in succession.

DECRETALS. They formed the second part of the canon law, or collection of the pope's edicts and decrees and the decrees of councils. The first acknowledged to be genuine is a letter of Siricius to Himerus, a bishop of Spain, written in the first year of his pontificate, 385. Hovvi. Certain false decretals were used by Gregory IV. in 837. The decretals of Gratian, a Benedictine (a collection of canons), were compiled in 1150. Hennell. Five books were collected by Gregory IX. 1227; a sixth by Boniface VIII. 1247; the Clementines by Clement V. in 1313; compiled by John XXII. in 1317; the Extravagantes range from 1422 to 1483.

DEEP-SEA SOUNDINGS. Much new and interesting information respecting the animal life and temperature of the deep sea has been acquired by the dredgings on the coast of Norway by M. Sars, and by those of Dr. W. B. Carpenter and prof. (aft. sir) Wyville Thomson on our own coasts, near the Faroe Isles, in 1868 and 1869, and in the Mediterranean by Dr. Carpenter in 1870. Living animals have been found at a depth of three miles. On 21 Dec. 1872, Dr. Wyville Thomson and a party of scientific men sailed in H.M.S. Challenger (Capt. O. S. Nares), to examine into the physical and biological condition of the great ocean basins and the direction of their currents. Deepest sounding then known was taken in the Atlantic, north of St. Thomas's, 3875 fathoms (4 miles, 710 yards), 24 March, 1873. On 10 Dec. 1874, capt. Thompson succeeded capt. Nares, who took the command of the new Arctic expedition. The Challenger returned, with valuable collections, 25 May, 1876, after a voyage of above 80,000 miles. The "Voyage" was published by sir C. Wyville Thomson in Dec. 1877; and forty-eight volumes of reports had been published, March, 1882. A Norwegian expedition explored the northern seas 16 July—18 Aug. 1877; an Italian expedition in the Mediterranean started 2 Aug. 1881.

In Sept., 1880, the South Atlantic Ocean, midway between the island of Tristan d'Arunha and the mouth of the Rio de la Plata, was stated to be 45,236 feet, or 8½ miles.

The deep sea explorations, carried on in the eastern Mediterranean for the academy of Vienna, reported successful; the greatest depth, 2½ miles, is between Molla and Ceigo. . . . March, 1882.

DEER are mentioned in a will of one Athelstan, dated 1045. Professor Owen thinks that fallow deer are not native, but were introduced here at an early period. There are now in England 334 deer parks, the oldest being probably lord Abergavenny's at Eridge, Sussex. See Evelyn Shirley's "Account of Deer Parks." July, 1867. 1658 deer in the royal parks, 1873.

DEERHOUND, an English yacht, while conveying arms to the Carlists, seized by the Spanish government vessel Buenaventura, off Biarritz, and captain and crew imprisoned, 13 Aug.; released about 18 Sept. 1873.

DEFAMATION is punishable by fine and imprisonment by statute of 1843. The jurisdiction of the ecclesiastical courts on this subject was abolished by 18 & 19 Vict. c. 41 (1855). See Libel.

DEFENCE, see Church Defence, National Defence.

DEFENCE ACT, a complete conscription act, authorising a levy en masse, 1803, was unsuccessful; new measures were taken in 1807-8. The Defence of the Realm Act passed 28 Aug. 1860, in consequence of the unsettled state of Europe, and the doubtful policy of the emperor Napoleon; see Fortifications and Colonies.

"DEFENCE GOVERNMENT" in France, formed on 4 Sept. 1870, when the emperor was deposed and a republic proclaimed, gen. Trochu president; it included Gambetta, Simon, &c. It resigned, after Paris had capitulated, 5, 6 Feb. 1871. See France.

DEFENDER OF THE FAITH (Fidei Defensor), a title of the British sovereign, conferred by Leo. X. on Henry VIII. of England, 11 Oct. 1521, for the tract against Luther on behalf of the Church of Rome (then accounted Dominicium fidei Catholicæ).

DEFENDERS, a faction in Ireland, which arose out of a quarrel between two residents of Market-hill, 4 July, 1784. Each was soon aided by a large body of friends, and many battles ensued. On Whit-Monday, 1785, an armed assemblage of one of the parties (700 men), called the Nappagh Fleet, prepared to encounter the Bacon Fleet, but the engagement was prevented. They subsequently became religious parties, Catholic and Presbyterian, distinguished as Defenders and Peep-o'-day-boys; the latter were so named because they usually visited the dwellings of the Defenders at daybreak in search of arms; see Diamond.

DEGREES. Eratosthenes attempted to determine the length of a geographical degree about 250 B.C. See Geodesy, Latitude, and Longitude. Collegiate degrees are conferred with universities. Masters and doctors existed, 826. See Lambeth Degrees.

Those in law are traced up to 1149; in medicine, to 1384; in music, to 1463. Middle class examinations for degrees were instituted at Oxford, 18 June, 1857; at Cambridge, 24 Nov. 1857; and girls were allowed to compete for degrees, Oct. 1863. Bill to enable Scotch universities to grant degrees to women rejected by the Commons, 3 March, 1875. See Women.

DEI GRATIA, see Grace of God.

DEISM, THEISM, or MONOTHEISM (Latin, deus; Greek, theos, God), the belief in one God, in opposition to polytheism and to the doctrine of the Trinity. About the middle of the 16th century some gentlemen of France and Italy termed themselves deists, to disguise their opposition to Christianity by a more honourable appellation than that of Atheism (which see). The most distinguished deists were Herbert, baron of Cherbury, in 1624; Hobbes, Tindal, Morgan, lord Dillingbroke, Gibbon, Hume, Holcroft, Paine, and Godwin.

A high-caste Brahmin, Ramanuloh Roy, founded a Brahmin monothestic church in 1820, termed the Brahmo Bonaj. He died at Bristol 27 Nov. 1843. His reforming work was revived in 1842 by Delendra Nath Tagore. In 1858 Baboo Keshub Chunder Sen joined the society, and became a most energetic propagandist, advocating also social reform; being much opposed, he formed the new Brahmo Samaj of India in 1856. Keshub Chunder Sen was received at a public meeting in London as a reformer, 12 April, and subsequently preached in a Unitarian chapel, Finsbury, London. He was in his church; new church formed (Society of God) 1870. He died at Calcutta . . . 2 Jan. 1884. See Unitarians and Poyry.

DEITIES, see Mythology.

DELAGOA BAY, S.E. Africa, claimed by Great Britain and Portugal. Having been referred to arbitration, the southern portion was awarded to Portugal by marshal MacMahon, Aug. 1875.

The importance of the port was greatly increased by the discovery of gold in the Transvaal districts. The South African Republic promoted a railway to be constructed by German and Dutch capitalists. The acquisition of the bay by Great Britain strongly advocated . . . Dec. 1887.

The Portuguese government in 14 Dec. 1883, granted a concession to a Portuguese company for the construction of a railway from the bay to the Transvaal territory. The prospectus of the East African railway company (capital 500,000*l.*) was issued 7 March, 1887. As the railway was not completed in the specified time, the works were discontinued by this Portuguese government, 25 June, et seq., who cancelled the concession (see Portugal). 26 June, 1889. The British and United States governments remonstrate with Portugal. . . . April, 1890. The completed railway inaugurated . . . 28 April. The Portuguese government accepts the principle of arbitration; the governments request the Swiss government to appoint three jurists to form a court of arbitration. . . . reported 2 May. The Portuguese government pays 25,000*l.* to the British government for the railway company provisionally. . . . reported July. The court of arbitration meets at Bern 2 Aug. . . .

DELAWARE, one of the United States of North America, named after lord de la Warr, governor of Virginia, who entered the bay 1610. It was settled by Swedes, sent thence by Gustavus in 1637; acquired by the Dutch, 1655; ceded to the

DELTA METAL, a modern bronze resembling gold, containing a small proportion of iron, invented by Mr. A. Dick: watch cases were made of it at Geneva in 1884.

DELUGE, THE UNIVERSAL, predicted by Noah, is described in Genesis vi. vii. viii.; dated by Usher and the English Bible 2348 B.C. The following are the species of the deluge, according to Dr. Hales:—

Traditional deluges described in the classics: in Beroza and Attica in the reign of Ogyges, 18th century A.C.; in Thebes in the reign of Deucalion, 1503 A.C.; the dates are conjectural.

DEMERARA, ESSEQUIBO, AND BERBICE, colonies in British Guiana, South America, founded by the Dutch, 1580, were taken by the British, under major-general Whyte, 22 April, 1795, but were restored at the peace of Amiens, March, 1802. They again surrendered to the British under general Grindfield and commodore Hood, Sept. 1803, and became English colonies in 1814. See Guiana, British.

DEMOCRATIC FEDERALISTS, a political party, proposed by Mr. Joseph Cowen, M.P. for Newcastle, opposed to the policy of the government of Mr. Gladstone, 5 April, 1881.

DEMOCRATS, advocates for government by the people themselves (demos, people, and kratein, to govern), a term adopted by the French republicans in 1790 (who termed their opponents aristocrats, from aristos, bravest or best). The name Democrats was adopted by the pro-slavery party in N. America (the southern states), and the abolitionists were called Republicans. Into these two great parties a number of smaller ones were absorbed at the presidential election in 1856. In 1860, the Republicans formed "Wide-awake" clubs for electioneering purposes, and succeeded in getting their candidate, Abraham Lincoln, elected president, 4 Nov., which led to civil war; see United States, 1860.

In the autumn of 1874, the democrats, free-traders, and opponents of negro-rule, once more obtained the majority in the elections for the next congress; a reaction in their favour against the republicans, protectionists, then powerful; see United States, 1875-7. Governor Cleveland, democrat, elected president, 4 Nov. 1884; not re-elected, being replaced by general Benjamin Harrison, republican, 5 Nov. 1888.

DEMONEOLOGY, see Devil Worship.

DENAIN (N. France). Here marshal Villars defeated the Imperialists, 24 July, 1712.

DENARIUS, the chief silver coin among the Romans, weighing the seventh part of a Roman ounce, and value 744 sterling, first coined about 269 B.C., when it exchanged for ten asses (see As). In 516 B.C. it exchanged for sixteen asses. A pound weight of silver was coined into 100 denarii. Digby. A pound weight of gold was coined into twenty denarii aurei in 206 B.C.; and in Nero's time into thirty-five denarii aurei. Comptoir.

DENHAM MURDERS, see Trade, 1870.

DENIS, St., an ancient town of France, near Paris, famous for its abbey and church; the former abolished at the revolution, the latter the place of sepulture of the French kings, from its foundation by Dagobert, about 630; the remains of the saint Denis were placed there in 636. On 6, 7, 8 Aug. 1793, the republicans despoiled most of the royal tombs, and in Oct. following, the bodies were taken from coffins and cast into a pit; the head was melted, and the gold and jewels taken to Paris. By a decree of Bonaparte, dated 20 Feb. 1805, the church (which had been turned into a cattle-market) was ordered to be cleaned out and redecorated as "the future burial-place of the emperors of France." On the return of the Bourbons, more restorations were effected, and the due de Berry and Louis XVIII. were buried here. The damage sustained in the war of 1870-1 has been well repaired. Near St. Denis the Catholics defeated the Huguenots, but lost their leader, the constable Montmorency, 10 Nov. 1567.

DENISON'S ACT (18 & 19 Vict. c. 34), provides "for the education of the children of persons in receipt of out-door relief:" passed 26 June, 1855.

DENMAN'S ACT, LORD, 6 & 7 Vict. c. 85 (1843), relates to juries and witnesses.

DENMARK (N. Europe). The most ancient inhabitants were Cimbric and Teutonic, who were driven out by the Jutes or Goths. The Teutons settled in Germany and Gaul; the Cimbrics invaded Italy, where they were defeated by Marina. The peninsula of Jutland obtained its name from the Jutes; and the name of Denmark is supposed to be derived from Dan, the founder of the Danish monarchy, and mark, a German word signifying country. For their numerous invasions of Britain, &c., see Danes. Population of the kingdom of Denmark in 1860, 1,600,551; of the duchies of Schleswig, Holstein, and Lauburg, 1,003,473; of the colonies, 120,283. By the treaty of peace, signed 30 Oct. 1864, the duchies were taken from Denmark; Schleswig and Holstein were to be made independent, and Lauburg was to be incorporated, by its desire, with Prussia. For the result, see Gesteis and Prussia, 1866. Population of the monarchy, 1870, 1,784,741; 1880, 1,969,039; of the colonies, 1880, 127,200; 1890, 127,200. DERELICT LAND TRUST, formed by subscription to promote the cultivation of farms in Ireland from which the tenants have been evicted for non-payment of rent. "Plantations" in County Wexford were formed in 1839.

DERRICKS are lofty, portable crane-like structures, used on land and water for lifting enormous loads, and in some cases depositing them at an elevation. They are extensively used in the United States, and were introduced into England as floating derricks for raising sunken vessels, by their inventor, A. D. Bishop, in 1857.

DERRY (N. Ireland), a bishopric first at Ardfrath; thence translated to Maghera; and in 1158 to Derry. The cathedral, built in 1264, becoming ruinous, was rebuilt by Londoners, who settled here in the reign of James I. The see is valued in the king's books at 2500 sterling; but it has been once the richest sees in Ireland. See Bishops; Londonderry.

DERVISH. Probably a corruption of der-pish or der-bish, one in advance. The dervishes of the present time, fanatical enthusiasts, unrecognized by orthodoxy, originated in Persia, whence they came over the Mohammedan world. These new sects, being Egypt are said to be subject to Imam Mohammed el Mahdi, a sorcerer of the late Mahdi of Khartoum. The dervishes have been persecuted over the ignorant masses. See Derwishes.

DEVELOPMENT OF MAN, see Development.

DESERTED VILLAGE, "a poem, by Dr. James Thomson, first published, 1851, 1770.

DEROGATING APPARATUS, see under Apparatus.

DESIGN, SCHOOLS OF, established by government, began at Somerset-house, London, 1 Jan. 1857. In 1858 the head school was removed to Marlborough-house, and became eventually "the department of science and art," transferred to South Kensington in 1857. It is under the direction of the committee of council on education. See Copyright.

DESPARD'S CONSPIRACY. Colonel Edward Marcus Despard, a native of Ireland, Brougham, Francis, Graham, Munsemann, Wood, and Whittier, conspired to kill the king, and establish a republic, on the day of opening parliament, 16 Nov. 1803. Above 30 persons including soldiers were taken in custody; of these tried, 20 Jan. 1803, Despard and six others were executed, 21 Feb. He had been a distinguished officer under Nelson.

DESTITUTE CHILDREN'S DINNER SOCIETY, established in 1807, to give weekly meat dinners. 16,822 dinners given in 1869; 147,858 dinners in 58 dining rooms in 1870; 114,000 dinners in 42 dining rooms, year 1876-7; 170,000 dinners in 49 rooms, 1878-9; now about 263,000 annually. In 1890, the co-operation of several societies was effected.

DESTRUCTIVE INSECTS (to crops), an act passed to prevent their introduction and spreading in Great Britain, 14 Aug. 1877. See Colorado.

DETECTIVE POLICE, see Police, and Tricks, 1837.

DETROIT, Michigan, N. America, the oldest city in the west, was built by the French about 1670. It is eminent for large metal works. Population in 1880, 116,340; 1890, 205,876.

DETTINGEN (Bavaria), BATTLE OF, 16 (or 27 O. S.) June, 1743, between the British, Hanoverian, and Russian army (52,000), commanded by king George II. of England and the earl of Stair, and the French army (60,000), under marshal Neelée and the duc de Grammont. The French passed a defile, which they should have merely guarded. The duc de Grammont with his cavalry charged the British feet with great fury, but was so received that he was obliged to give way, and to retreat the Marais, losing 3000 men. Handel's "Dettingen Te Deum," first performed, 27 Nov. 1743.

DEUTERONOMY, see Bible, note.

DEVELOPMENT (or Evolution). Wolf put forth a theory of epigenesis in 1759; Lamarck, the materialist, in 1809, propounded a theory that all animals had been developed from "monads," living minute particles; see Species and Protists. Buffon held a similar doctrine. In 1827 Ernst von Baer of Riga demonstrated that all mammals are developed from a minute egg, not a hundredth of an inch in diameter. Mr. C. Darwin's views are given in his "Origin of Species," 1859; and "Descent of Man," 1871. He supposes that man was gradually evolved from the lowest graded form of animal life. Huxley, his most advanced follower, published in Germany a "History of Creation," 1873; a translation in English, 1875. Mr. Alfred Wallace published his work on Natural Selection in 1870. See Species.

The theory of the development of living beings and of the origin of species was first put forth by Lamarck in 1809. See Species, 1809, 1830, 1831, 1832, 1833, 1834, 1835, 1836, 1837, 1838, 1839, 1840, 1841, 1842, 1843, 1844, 1845, 1846, 1847, 1848, 1849, 1850, 1851, 1852, 1853, 1854, 1855, 1856, 1857, 1858, 1859, DILETTANTICAL SOCIETY, LONDON, for the philosophical consideration of all subjects, with a view to the discovery and elucidation of truth, was established in 1865. The report of their committee on spiritualism was published in Nov. 1871. The dissolution of the Society reported May, 1888. See Wales, 1890.

DIA-MAGNETISM, the property possessed by nearly all bodies of behaving differently to iron, when placed between two magnets. The phenomena, previously little known, were reduced to a law by Faraday in 1845, and confirmed by Tyndall and others.

DIAMOND, a hamlet, Armagh, N Ireland, where was fought the "battle of the Diamond," 21 Sept. 1795, between the "Peep-o'-day-boys" and the "Defenders," and many of the latter were killed. To commemorate this conflict the first Orange Lodge was formed immediately after. See Defenders.

DIAMONDS were first brought to Europe from the East, where the mine of Sumbulpoor was the first known. Golconda, in India, now in ruins, was a celebrated diamond mart. The mines of Brazil were discovered in 1728. From these last a diamond, weighing 1680 carats, or fourteen ounces, was sent to the court of Portugal, and was valued by Mr. Bomoe de l'Isle at 224 millions, by others at 56 millions, and at 34 millions, its true value (not being brilliant) was 400,000!

The great Russian diamond weighs 293 carats, or 1 oz. 5 dwts. 4 gr. Troy. The empress Catherine II offered for it 104,166 13s. 4d., besides an annuity for life to the owner of 104,134 13s. 4d., which was refused, but it was afterwards sold to Catherine's favourite, count Orlov, for the first mentioned sum, without the annuity, and was by him presented to the empress on her birthday, 1772. It is now in the sceptre of Russia.

The Pitt (or Regent) diamond weighed 136 carats, and after cutting, 106 carats. It was sold to the king of France for 155,000 in 1740.

The Plover diamond (bought by Mr. Pitt, grandfather of Wm. Pitt) was sold for 500 guineas, in Mar. 1800. The diamond called the Kohinoor, from its size, or Mountain of Light, has a legendary history and is said to have belonged in turn to Shah Johan, Aurangzeb, Nadir Shah, the Afghan rulers, and afterwards to the Sikh chief Ranjett Singh. Upon the abdication of Duple Singh, the last ruler of the Punjab, and the annexation of his dominions to the British empire, in 1849, the Kohinoor was surrendered to the queen. It was accordingly brought over and presented to her, 3 July, 1850. It was shown in the Great Exhibition, 1851. Its original weight was nearly 30 carats, but it was reduced by the unskillfulness of the artist, Honorable Burgesse, a Venetian, in 1792, when it shone and she resembled the pointed half (one out) of a small hen's egg. The value is scarcely estimable, though two millions sterling have been mentioned as a possible price, if calculated by the scale employed in the trade. This diamond was bought in 1850, and now weighs 106 carats.

The Barch diamond, which belonged to Charles the Bold, Duke of Burgundy, was bought by Sir C. Jephthor from the Demidoff family for 20,000, in Feb. 1865.

A diamond, termed the Star of the South, was brought from Brazil in 1855, weighing 244 carats, half of which was lost by cutting.

Diamonds were discovered in Cape Colony, S. Africa, in March, 1867. A fine one, termed the "Star of South Africa," brought to England in 1869, was purchased by Messrs. Hunt and Roskill. After cutting, it weighed 48 carats and was valued at 25,000. In June, 1890 Rich diamond fields recently discovered near the West and Orange rivers, Sept. 1890.

DIAMOND NECKLACE AFFAIR—In 1785, Bohmer, the court jeweller of France, offered the queen Marie Antoinette a diamond necklace, for 56,000l. The queen desired the necklace but spared the expense. The countess de la Motte (of the ancient house of Valois) forged the queen's signature, and by pretending that the queen had an attachment for him, persuaded the cardinal de Rohan, the queen's chamberlain, to conclude a bargain with the jeweller for the necklace for 56,000l. De la Motte thus obtained the necklace and made away with it. For this she was tried in 1786, and sentenced to be branded on the shoulders and imprisoned for life. She scorned in vain the celebrated Italian adventurer, Cagliostro, of complicity in the affair, he being then intimate with the cardinal. She made her escape and came to London, where she was killed by falling from a window while, in attempting to escape an arrest for debt.—De Rohan was tried and acquitted, 14 April, 1786. The public in France at that time suspected the queen of being a party to the fraud. Talleyrand wrote at the time, that he should not be surprised if this miserable affair overturned the throne.

INTUMESCIBILITY OF DIAMONDS.

Boethius de Boot conjectured that the diamond was intumescent, 1609. When exposed to a high temperature it gave an acrid vapour, in which a part of it was dissolved, 1677. Boyle.

Mr Isaac Newton concluded from its great refracting power, that it must be combustible, 1697.

Avery demonstrated, by concentrating the rays of light on upon it, that the diamond was soluble in oxygen, and entirely disappeared, while other gemstones merely grew softer, 1809.

It has been established by Gordon, Dury, and others, that the temple of Diana at Ephesus was burned by the Goths, and the stones were carried by the intense heat of the temple to the city of Ephesus, in the reign of the emperor Diocletian, in the year 284.

DIANA, TEMPLE OF (at Ephesus), accounted one of the seven wonders of the world, was built at the command of all the Asiatic states, 535 B.C.; the chief architect being Oenopion. Ptolemy says that 120 years were employed in completing it. It was 425 feet long, 225 broad, and was supported by 127 columns (50 feet high, each weighing 130 tons of Parian marble), furnished by so many kings. It was set on fire, on the night of the birth of Alexander the Great, by Hierostatus or Kratostatus, who confessed that his sole motive was the desire of transmitting his name to future ages, 356 B.C. The temple was rebuilt, but again burnt by the Goths, in their naval invasion, A.D. 256 or 262. In April, 1869, Mr. J. T. Wood discovered the site of the second temple, and since then sculptured marble columns have been removed to the British Museum. Diana was the Roman name of the Greek Artemis.

DICTATORS were supreme and absolute magistrates of Rome, appointed to act in critical times. Titus Lartius, the first dictator, was appointed, 501 B.C. Caius Marcius Coriolanus was the first plebeian dictator, 370 B.C. This office became odious by the usurpations of Sylla and Julius Cæsar; and after the death of the latter, the Roman senate, on the motion of the consul Antony, passed a law forbidding a dictator to exist in Rome, 44 B.C. The dictator was also called master of the people, and had under him a master of the horse.

bombarded in 1794, and again, together with the town of Granville, by the British, 14 Sept. 1803.

"DIES IRÆ" ("Day of Wrath"), a Latin medieval hymn on the day of judgment, is ascribed to various authors, amongst others to pope Gregory the Great (died about 604); St. Bernard (died 1153); but is generally considered to have been composed by Thomas of Celano (died 1255), and to have been used in the Roman service of the mass before 1385.

DIET OF THE GERMAN EMPIRE (in which the supreme court of authority of the empire may be said to have existed) was composed of three colleges: one of electors, one of princes, and one of imperial towns, and commenced with the diet of Charles IV. 1355; see Golden Bull; Wurzburg (1240); Munsterberg (1407); Worms (1521); Speyer (1526); Augsburg (1530); Kaisers (1547); Frankfurt (1806, & seq.); and Germany.

"Dieu et mon droit" appears to have been first assumed as a motto by Henry VI. (1422-1461); see Somerset Record.

DIFFERENTIAL ENGINE, see Calculating Machines.

DIFFUSION OF GASES. In 1825, Döbereiner observed the transmission of hydrogen gas through a crack in a glass vessel, and professor Thomas Graham discovered the passage of gases through porous porcelain, graphite, and other substances, and established laws in 1832, and to him we are indebted for the discovery of Osmosis and Dialysis. He died 16 Sept. 1869.

DIFFUSION OF USEFUL KNOWLEDGE SOCIETY, which published a number of books relating to history, science, and literature, and an atlas, in a cheap form, ridiculed as the "Sixpenny Sciences," was established by Lord Brougham, Mr. William Tooker, Mr. Charles Knight, and others. It published its "Library," 1827-48, and patronised the publication of the Penny Magazine and the Penny Cyclopædia. Its proceedings were suspended in 1846. The Royal Institution of Great Britain was established in 1799, for "the Promotion, Diffusion, and Extension of Science and Useful Knowledge."

DIGEST. The first collection of Roman laws under this title was prepared by Atrænius Varus, the civilian, of Cremona, 66 A.C. Quintil. The "Digest," so called by way of eminence, was the collection made by order of the emperor Justinian, 529; it made the first part of the Roman law and the first volume of the civil law. Quotations from it are marked with a D. Pandect. The "Digest of Law" commissioners signed their first report 13 May, 1867, recommending the immediate preparation of a digest of the English common law, statute law, and judicial decisions.

DIGITS (digiti, finger), any whole number under 10: 1, 2, &c., are the nine digits; see Arithmetical. In astronomy, the digit is a measure used in the calculation of eclipses, and is the twelfth part of the lunary eclipsed.

DIJON, R. France, the ancient capital of Burgundy, is said to have been founded by Julius Cæsar, fortified by the emperor Marcus Aurelius, and named Divio, about 274. It has been several times captured in war; and a castle was erected here by Louis XI. Dijon became the capital of the dukes of Burgundy about 1180. It was attacked by the Germans, under general Beyer, 30 Oct. 1870. The heights and suburbs were taken by prince William of Baden, and the town surrendered on 31 Oct.

The society published, or aided in publishing, Stuart's Athens (1753-1816), Chandler's Towers (1775-6), and several other finely illustrated works. The members dined together from time to time at the Thatched-house tavern, St. James's. Mr. R. P. Pullen, on behalf of this society, excavated the temple of Bacchus at Ives, of Apollo Smithous in the Tread, and of Minerva Polias at Friens, between 1861-70. Published "Antiquities of Ionia," 4 parts, 1769-1887.

DIMITY, the term is derived from the Greek, dis, twice, and mitis, thread.

DINNERS, see Destitute.

DIOCESSE. The first division of the Roman empire into dioceses, at that period civil governments, is ascribed to Constantine, 323; but Strabo remarks that the Romans had the departments called dioceses long before. In England the principal dioceses are coeval with the establishment of Christianity; of 28 dioceses, 20 are suffragan to the diocese of Canterbury, and six to that of York; see Bishops, and the sees severally. Diocesan conferences of the clergy and laity now frequent.

DIOCLES' CODE, drawn up by him for Syracuse, where he was a popular leader, 412 A.C. It was highly approved, and copied by other nations, and remained in force till superseded by the Roman laws, after the conquest, 212 A.C.

DIOCLETIAN ERA (called also the era of Martyrs, on account of the persecution in his reign) was used by Christian writers until the introduction of the Christian era in the 6th century, and is still employed by the Abyssinians and Copts. It dates from the day on which Diocletian was proclaimed emperor at Chalcedon, 29 Aug. 284.

DIOPTRIC SYSTEM (from the Greek, diō, through, and optomet, I see), an arrangement of lenses for refracting light in lighthouse, devised by Fresnel, about 1819, based on the discoveries of Buffon, Condorcet, Brewster, and others; see Light-houses.

DIORAMA. This admired exhibition was first opened by MM. Bouton and Daguerre in Paris, 11 July, 1822; in London, 30 Sept. 1823. It was not successful commercially here, and was sold in 1848. The building in Negent's park was purchased by sir S. M. Peto, in 1855, to be used as a Baptist chapel.

DIPHTHERIA (from the Greek diphthera, leather), a disease resembling croup which has the essential character of developing a false membrane on the mucous membrane connected with the throat. It was named diphtheria by Brietmann of Tours in 1820. From its prevalence in Boulogne, it has been termed the Boulogne sore-throat; many persons were affected with it in England at the beginning of 1858. The princess Alice, grand-daughter of Hesse-Darmstadt, died of this disease, 14 Dec. 1878, after nursing her husband and children.

DIPLOMACY, the art of managing the relations of foreign states by means of ambassadors, envoys, consuls, chargés d'affaires, &c.; see Ambassadors and Consuls. New regulations for the British diplomatic service were issued 5 Sept. 1862.

DIPLOMAS. The wholesale fraudulent sale of diplomas of M.D. &c., for 10s., by a Dr. Buchanan, dean of the American University of Philadelphia, and others, was detected in 1866. The attempted escape by a steam engine, but was captured, prosecuted, and imprisoned.

THE BOOK OF COMMON PRAYER was drawn up at the instance of the parliament by an assembly of divines at Westminster in 1549, after the suppression of the Book of Common Prayer. The general hints given were to be managed with discretion; for the Directory prescribed no form of prayer or manner of external worship, and required the people to make no response except Amen. It was adopted by the parliament of Scotland in 1565, and many of its regulations are still observed by presbyterians.

DIRECTORY, THE FRENCH, established by the constitution of the 5th of Fructidor, an III. (22 Aug. 1795), and nominated 1 Nov., was composed of five members (MM. Lepaux, Lebonneur, Baybel, Barrea, and Carnot). On 18 Fructidor, 4 Sep. 1797, two directors (Garnot and Barthélemy) were deposed, and afterwards, with other officials, transported to Cayenne for favouring royalty. The directory ruled in conjunction with two chambers, the Council of Ancients and Council of Five Hundred (which see), till the revolution of the 18th of Brumaire (9, 10 Nov. 1799). It was deposed by Bonaparte, who, with Cambacérès and Lebrun, assumed the government as three consuls, himself the first, 13 Dec. 1799; see Consulate.

DIRECTORY, the first LONDON, is said to have been printed in 1677. The "Post-office Directory" first appeared in 1800.

Messrs. Kelly's "Directory of the Merchants, Manufacturers, and Shippers of the United Kingdom," was first published in 1877; at first triennially, now annually.

DIRECTORS' LIABILITY Act, relating to prospectuses, &c., of public companies, passed 26 Aug. 1860.

"DISCIPLES OF CHRIST" (also called CAMPBELLITES) profess adherence to pure Scriptural doctrine and practice, reject human creeds and formularies, and admit to their communion all who recognize Christ's obedience and death, as "the only meritorious cause of the sinner's acceptance with God;" and are baptized (by immersion) in his name.

DISCIPLINE, ecclesiastical, originally constituted spiritually according to the divine commands in Mat. xviii. 15, 1 Cor. v., 2 Thes. iii. 6, and other texts, was gradually changed to a temporal character, as it now appears in the Roman, Greek, and other churches. The "First Book of Discipline" of the presbyterian church of Scotland was drawn up by John Knox and four ministers in Jan. 1560-1. The more important "Second Book" was prepared with great care in 1578 by Andrew Melville and a committee of the leading members of the general assembly. It lays down a thoroughly systematic form of government, defines the position of the ecclesiastical and civil powers, &c.

The term Campbellites originated through their first church at North Ayr, in Ayrshire, having been set up by a Scottish presbyterian minister from Glasgow, named Robert Campbell, and his own adherents. As they were called Campbellites and were afterwards by immersionists, they came to be known in Scotland as the "Campbellites," and in the United Kingdom, where the movement began independently and subsequently, about 1810. After some time they were called "Disciples of Christ."

medical advice and medicines, began in London. The Royal General Dispensary, London, was established in St. Bartholomew's Close, in 1770. It relieved about 30,000 persons in 1861; about 27,000 in 1865. Western Dispensary, 1789. Barth's Medical Poem, "The Dispensary," published 1699.

DISPENSATIONS, ecclesiastical, were first granted by pope Innocent III. in 1200. These exemptions from the discipline of the church, with indulgences, absolutions, &c., led eventually to the Reformation in Germany in 1517.

DISPENSING POWER OF THE CROWN (for setting aside laws or their power) asserted by some of our sovereigns, especially by Charles II. (in 1672 for the relief of nonconformists) and by James II. principally to enable Roman Catholics to hold civil and military offices, in 1686-8, was abolished by the bill of rights, 1689. It has been on certain occasions exercised, as in the case of embargoes upon ships, the Bank Charter act, &c.; see Indemnity.

DISRAELI ADMINISTRATIONS. On the recognition of the earl of Derby through ill-health, 25 Feb., 1868, Mr. Disraeli reconstituted the ministry, 20 Feb. (see Derby Administrations, III.). As the elections gave a large majority to the liberal party, Mr. Disraeli's ministry resigned 3 Dec. He declined to take office with the then house of commons when Mr. Gladstone resigned, 12 March, 1873, and the latter resumed office.

DISSENTERS, the modern name of the Puritans and Nonconformists (which see). In 1851, in London, the number of chapels, meeting-houses, &c., for all classes of dissenters amounted to more than 554. (The Church of England had 458; Roman Catholics, 35.) The great act (9 Geo. IV. c. 17) for the relief of dissenters from civil and religious disabilities was passed 9 May, 1828. By this act, called the Corporation and Test Relief act, so much of the several acts of preceding reigns as imposed the necessity of receiving the sacrament of the Lord's Supper as a qualification for certain offices, &c., was repealed. By 6 & 7 Will. IV. c. 85 (1836), dissenters acquired the right of solemnising marriages at their own chapels, or at a registry office; see Marriage in England.

A Burial Bill to permit the ministers of dissenters to officiate at funerals in churchyards several times rejected: in the commons 248 to 234, 21 April, 1875; 270 to 248, 3 March, 1866; and Granville's resolution in the lords rejected 121 to 92, 13 May, 1876.

Mr. Colclough Morgan's resolution for reforming burial laws (i.e. permitting other services), rejected (222-257), 18 Feb. 1877.

Act to amend the burial laws, permitting dissenters to have their own services or no service in churchyards;

The Rev. W. H. Fremantle having proposed to stand at St. Xavier's city temple, and the bishop of London having disapproved, the opinion of two counsel (Messrs. Stirling and Stephen and Benjamin Storr) was taken. They declared it to be illegal for the clergy of the English church to take part in worship of dissenters, June, 1875.

Several episcopal clergymen take part in the dedication services of Christ church (formerly Surrey chapel) Blackfriars, middle of July, 1876.

The distillation of spirituous liquors was in practice in Great Britain in the 16th century. Burns. The processes were improved by Adam of Montpellier in 1801. M. Payen's work (1861) contains recent improvements. An act to prevent the use of stills by unlicensed persons was passed in 1846. 118 licences to distillers were granted in the year ending 31 March, 1858, for the United Kingdom.

It consists of two volumes, a greater and less, wherein all the counties of England, except Northumberland, Durham, Westmoreland, and Cumberland, are surveyed. An imaginary battle of Dorking in which the German invaders totally defeat the British army is the subject of a clever article, attributed to col. This town gives its name to the Roman Catholic English version of the Bible authorized by the pope, the text being explained by notes of Roman divines. The Old Testament was published by the English college at Douay in 1609; the New had been published at Rheims in 1582. The English college for Roman Catholics was founded in 1566 by William Allen, afterwards cardinal. Dodd.

The episcopate of St. Patrick (buried here in 493, in the abbey of Saul, founded by himself) brought this place into great repute. The see was united with that of Connor in 1441 (see Down); and the see of Downmore was united to both by the Irish Church Temporalities act, 3 & 4 Will. IV. c. 37, Aug. 14, 1833. DRAFTS (or cheques). In 1856, drafts crossed by a banker's name were made payable only to or through the same banker. This act was passed in consequence of a decision to the contrary in the case of Carlson v. Ireland, 12 Dec., 1855. In 1858 the crossing was made a material part of a cheque, but bankers are not held responsible when the crossing does not plainly appear, and a penny stamp was ordered to be affixed to drafts on bankers, commencing 25 May. In the case of Summons v. Taylor, May, 1859, it had been decided that the crossing formed no part of the draft. The crossing had been crossed, and the money paid to the holder of the draft, who had stolen it.

Plays opposed by the Puritans in 1631, suspended during the commonwealth, 1649, restored 1660

Two companies of regular performers were licensed by Charles II. Killgrew's and Sir William Davenant's. The first was at the Ball, Vine-street, Clare-market, which was immediately afterwards removed to Drury-lane; the other in Dorset-garden, 1662. Till this time, boys performed women's parts, but Mrs. Coleman (the first female on the stage) had performed Jaske, in Davenant's "Sings of Rhodes," in 1666

Sir William Davenant introduced operas, and both companies united, 1684, and continued together till 1694, when a schism under Betterton led to the opening of a theatre in Lincoln's-inn-fields, the parent of Covent garden

DRAMATIC COLLEGE, for the benefit of distressed actors and their children, was proposed 21 July, 1858, at the Princess's theatre, by Messrs. C. Dickens, Thackeray, C. Keen, B. Webster, and others. Mr. Henry Dodd's offer of land and money, with certain stipulations, was declined Jan. 1859. The first stone of the buildings at Maybury, near Woking, was laid by the prince consort, 1 June, 1860; and on 29 Sept. 1862, seven annuitants were installed. The central hall was opened by the prince of Wales, 5 June, 1865. The queen was the patron. The vicerey of Egypt was present at the annual fête at the Crystal Palace, July 1867, and gave 500*l.* to the college. The scheme was unsuccessful. On 12 Nov. 1877, it was determined to close the college, and provide for the inmates. The buildings were sold by private contract about 23 July, 1880.

Severe contest between the allied army under the prince of Schwarzenberg, and the French commanded by Napoleon 26, 27 Aug. 1813

The allies, 200,000 strong, attacked Napoleon in his position at Dresden, and the event had nearly proved fatal to them, but for an error in the conduct of general Vandamme. They were defeated with dreadful loss, and were obliged to retreat into Bohemia, but Vandamme pursuing them too far, his division was cut to pieces, and himself and all his staff made prisoners. In this battle, general Moreau received his mortal wound, while in conversation with the emperor of Russia 27 Aug. "

DRESS. The attire of the Hebrew women is censured in Isaiah iii., about 760 B.C. Excess in dress among the early Romans was restrained by sumptuary laws; and also in England by numerous statutes, in 1363, 1465, 1570, &c. (see Chap. Stow, P. W. Fairholt's "Costume in England" (1846) contains a history of dress with numerous illustrations derived from MSS., the works of Strutt, &c. J. R. Planche's elaborate "Cyclopaedia of Costume" first appeared in 1876. A "dress-making company" was established in London, 6 Feb. 1865, with the view of improving the condition of the workwomen.

Sir Walter Raleigh wore a white satin-pinked vest, close-sleeved to the wrist, and over the body a doublet finely flowered, and embroidered with pearls, and in the feucher of his hat a large ruby and resplend drop at the bottom of the apron a piece of a button. His breeches with his stockings and ribbon garters, tinged at the end, all white; and buff shoes, which, on great court days, were so gorgeously covered with precious stones as to have exceeded the value of 500*l.*; and he had a suit of armour of solid silver, with sword and belt blazing with diamonds, rubies, and pearls.

King James's favourite, the duke of Buckingham, had his diamonds tucked so loosely on, that when he chose to shake a few off on the ground, he obtained all the finest he derived from the pickers-up, who were generally the Domest de la Cour.

The court dress of civilians, previously that of the time of the Georges, was modified by the lord chamberlain, Lord Sydney, in 1865.

* Dresden china was invented by John Frederick Buttner (or Botzchew), an apothecary's boy, about 1710. He died 23 March, 1719. A costly service, exquisitely painted, with battles, &c., was presented to the duke of Wellington by the king of Prussia.

The Bloomer Costume, introduced into America in 1846, by Mrs. Ann Bloomer, and worn there by many of the women. It resembled male attire, being an open-fronted jacket and loose trousers, the latter like those of the Turk, but gathered in at the ankles. The Bloomer dress was adopted by a few females in the west of London, in August, 1851; but though recommended by some American ladies in popular lectures, it was soon totally discontinued.

A Greek exhibition opened in Piccadilly, London, 29 May, 1873.

National Dress Association active, May, 1881.

The first of the numerous fountains since erected is that near St. Sepulchre's church, Skinner-street, 21 April, 1859. The magnificent fountain in Victoria-park, London, was inaugurated by the donor, Miss (afterwards baroness) Burdett-Coutts, 26 June, 1862. A remarkable drinking-fountain (the gift of the maharajah of Vizianagram) was inaugurated in Hyde-park, 29 Feb. 1863, another in Regent's-park, the gift of a Parson, Aug. 1869.—324 in the metropolis, June, 1877; 392 fountains, 404 cattle-troughs, July, 1879; 437 fountains, 438 troughs, July, 1880; 673 drinking fountains, 726 troughs, July, 1890.

DEOGHEDA (Ireland, E.), formerly Tredagh, a place of great importance, having the privilege of coining money. Here was passed Poyning's law (which see) in 1494. In the reign of Edward VI. an act was passed for the foundation of a university here. The town was besieged several times in the contests between 1641 and 1691, and Cromwell took it by storm, and put the governor, sir A. Aston, and the whole of the garrison, to the sword, 12 Sept. 1659. More than 3000 men, most of them English, perished. It surrendered to William III. in 1690.

by drowning in a quagmire. Stow. It is said to have been inflicted on eighty intractable bishops near Nicomedia, A.D. 370; and to have been adopted as a punishment in France by Louis XI. The wholesale drownings of the royalists in the Loire at Nantes, by command of the brutal Carrier, Nov. 1793, were termed Noyades. 94 priests were drowned at one time. He was condemned to death in Dec. 1794. Societies for the recovery of drowning persons were first instituted in Holland, in 1767. The second society is said to have been formed at Milan, in 1768; the third in Hamburg, in 1771; the fourth at Paris, in 1772; and the fifth in London, in 1774. The motto of the Royal Humane Society in England is: Letat scintilla foras—"A small spark may perhaps lie hid." DRUNKARDS were to be excommunicated in the early church, 59 (1 Cor. v. 11). In England, a canon law forbade drunkenness in the clergy, 747. Constantine, king of Scots, punished it with death, 870. By 21 James I., c. 7, 1623, a drunkard was liable to a penalty of five shillings, or six hours in the stocks. See Temperance and Teetotaller.

DRURY-LANE THEATRE derives its origin from a cock-pit, which was converted into a theatre in the reign of James I. It was rebuilt and called the Phoenix, and Charles II granted an exclusive patent to Thomas Killigrew, 25 April, 1663. The actors were called "the king's servants," and ten of them, called gentlemen of the great chamber, had an annual allowance of ten yards of scarlet cloth, with lute, see under Theatres. Drury-lane Theatrical Fund, established, 1766

DRUSES, a warlike people dwelling among the mountains of Lebanon, derive their origin from a fanatical Mahometan sect which arose in Egypt about 996, and fled to Palatine to avoid persecution. They now retain hardly any of the religion of their ancestors: they eat pork and drink wine, and do not practise circumcision, pray, or fast. In the middle of 1860, in consequence of disputes (in which doubtless both parties were to blame), the Druses attacked their neighbours the Maronites (which see), whom they massacred, it was said, without regard to age or sex. Peace was made in July, but in the meantime a religious fury seized the Mahometan population of the neighbouring cities, and a general massacre of Christians ensued. Yusef Pacha with Turkish troops, and general Houtpoul with French auxiliaries, invaded Lebanon in Aug and Sept. The Druses were rendered, giving up their chiefs, Jan 1861. See Damascus and Syria

This name is also given to another explosive compound, invented by Mr Nobel, composed of ammoniac and saw dust, acted on by nitro-sulphuric acid

DUALISM, a term applied to the equally-matched conflicting powers of good and evil in the Persian mythology, the Homuzd and Ahriman of Zoroaster is also applied to the principles of the advocates for a separate government of Hungary under the emperor of Austria, effected in 1867

DUBLIN, capital of Ireland, anciently called Ashkelod, said to have been built 140 Auluna, daughter of Alpina, a lord or chief among the Irish, having been drowned at the ford where now Whitworth-bridge is built, he changed the name to Auluna, by Ptolemy called Eblana (afterwards corrupted into Dubhiana). Alpina is said to have brought "the then rude hill into the form of a town," about 155, see Ireland and Trinity College. Dublin returns a M.P. at present 25 June, 1885.  DUBLIN, ARCHBISHOPRIC OF. It is supposed that the bishopric of Dublin was founded by St. Patrick, in 448. Gregory, bishop in 1121, became archbishop in 1152. It was united to Glendalagh in 1214. George Browne, an Augustine friar of London (deprived by queen Mary in 1554), was the first Protestant archbishop. Dublin has two cathedrals, St. Patrick's, said to have been founded 1190, restored 1865; Christ Church, built about 1078, made a cathedral in 1541. The revenue was valued, in the king's books, 30 Henry VIII., at 534l. 15s. 2d. Irish. Kildare, as its last avoidance, was annexed to Dublin, 1840; see Bishops.

DUELING took its rise from the judicial combats of the Celtic nations. The first formal duel in England, between William count of Eu and Geoffrey Baynard, took place 1096. Duelling in civil matters was forbidden in France, 1305. Francis I. challenged the emperor Charles V. 1528 without effect. The fight with small swords was introduced into England, 1587. Proclamation that no person should be pardoned who killed another in a duel, 1679.* Duelling was checked in the army, 1792; and has been abolished in England, by the influence of public opinion, aided by the prince consort. A society "for the discouraging of duelling" was established in 1845. "The British Code of Duel," published in 1824, was approved by the duke of Wellington and others. See Battle, Wager of, Combat, and Service.

The earliest recorded claim for the bacon was in 1445, since when to 1855 it is said to have been demanded only five times.

DWARFS, OR PYGMIES, are described by several ancient classical writers. Herodotus gives an account of a race of pygmies living in Libya and the Syrtis, to which Aristotle and Pliny also refer. Godfrey Hudson, an English dwarf, when a youth of 18 inches high, was served up to table in a cold pie, before the king and queen, by the duchess of Buckingham, in 1606. He challenged Mr. Crofts to fight a duel, but the latter came armed with a sword. At another meeting the dwarf shot himself dead, 1652.

Count Bismarck, a Polish gentleman of great accomplishments and elegant manners, well known in England, where he resided for many years, was born in Nov. 1732. His growth was at one year of age, 12 inches; at six, 17 inches; at twenty, 33 inches; and at thirty, 39. He had a sister, named Anastasia, seven years younger than himself, and so much shorter that she could stand under his arm. He visited many of the courts of Europe, and died in England in 1797.

Charles Maywood Stratton (known general Tom Thumb), an American, was exhibited in England, by Mr. F. F. Russell, 1844. In Feb. 1864, in New York, when 25 years old and 21 inches high, he married Lavinia Warren, aged 20, 30 inches high. He, his wife and child, and comedienne Matt, another dwarf, came to England in Dec. 1864, and remained there some time. Died 25 July, 1869.

Tom Thumb, and smaller than Stratton, came at command to London, and was termed the "Foulest Thing Since Heaven," Jan. 1872.

Minnie (dwarf) sent to St. Andrew near the preceding subject at the Westminster Aquarium, July, 1874.

Chenck, a Chinese, 21 years old, 25 inches high, exhibited at the Westminster Aquarium, 21 June, 1876. Lucia Martin, born 1 Jan. 1862, in Mexico, height 20 inches, weight 4 lbs., and general Miss. Francis Joseph Flynn, born 2 Oct. 1864, in New York State, height 25 inches, weight 6 lbs., exhibited in Providence, 22 Nov. 1880, et seq. Milly Edwards exhibited in London, July, 1880, 23 years of age, weighing 7 lbs.; these two were married at Manchester, 25 May, 1884.

DYEING is attributed to the Tyrians, about 1500 B.C. The English are said to have sent fine goods to be dyed in Holland, till the art was brought to them probably in 1608. "Two dyers of Exeter were sought for teaching their art in the north" (of England), 1628. A statute against abuses in dyeing passed in 1783. The art has been greatly improved by chemical research. A discovery of Dr. Senhouse in 1848, led to M. Marnus procuring wares from Ichna; and Dr. Hoffmann's production of aniline from coal-tar, has led to the invention of a number of beautiful dyes (mauve, magenta, red, green, black, &c.); see Aniline.

DYNAMICS is the science which treats of matter and motion recently substituted for "mechanics," which see. Professor W. K. Clifford's "Elements of Dynamics," 2 vols., 1878-87.

DYNAMITE, a new explosive compound, consisting of 25 parts of silicious earth saturated with 75 parts of nitro-glycerine (which see). It is suitable for mining purposes, and was tried and approved at Mertham 14 July, 1868. It was invented by Alfred Nobel to obviate danger. Its manufacture is very dangerous. A preparation called "Safety" Dynamite, invented by Herr von Dahmen, who by the addition of a simple substance renders dynamite uncompressible, thus avoiding the danger of thawing in cold weather, 1859. Dynamite which cannot be frozen, invented by Herr Edward Liebert, of Berlin (very important, many deaths having been caused by thawing frozen dynamite); reported Aug. 1860. See Canon, 1891.

A man named Thompson, Thompson, or Thomas, consigned a cask of dynamite to Bremerhaven, to be conveyed by the North German Lloyd steamer Mosel. With it he sent a clock-work machine, which would in eight days give the cask a blow powerful enough to explode the dynamite and destroy the ship. From some cause the machine went off and exploded in the dock, killing above 80 and wounding about 200 persons, chiefly emigrants and their friends, 11 Dec. 1875. Thompson committed suicide, dying 16 Dec. 1875, after confessing his crime, his object being to obtain the paltry sum for which he had insured his goods. It appears that similar machines were known in 1873.

A parcel containing 27 cartridges of dynamite placed on the London and N. W. Railway, between Busby and Watford (perpetrators not discovered), night 20-21 Sept. 1886.

Failure of attempt at explosion at the Times office, 21 Mar. 1888.

Thomas O'Brien, alias Scott, of Lowell, Massachusetts, and Michael Burke, of Philadelphia, both residing in Islington, charged with conspiring together to cause a dynamite explosion, a large quantity of dynamite having been found in their dwellings in Islington 20 Nov.; committed 20 Dec. (O'Brien, a co-conspirator died 20 Oct.) 1881; on accessories sentenced to 18 months penal servitude 1-3 Feb. 1882.

Lieut. Graydon's safe dynamite for use in shells, &c., announced April, 1889.

The violent Irish party in America termed Dynamitards, April, 1883. Many said to be settled in Paris. Report refers to two associations—one under O'Donovan Rossa (telling), another named Cla-na-gael—men said to have been killed; 25 convicted and imprisoned issued 1885.

O'Donovan Rossa said to have been succeeded by Dr. Hamilton Williams at New York (see Pensées) 14 Dec. 1887.

DZOUNGARIA, a region of Central Asia, N. of China, with about 2,000,000 inhabitants, fierce, warlike Mahommedans. After being long tributary to China, they rebelled in 1864, massacred the Chinese residents, and set up their countryman Abel Oghlan as sultan. As he was unable to restrain predatory attacks upon the Russians, the czar declared war in April, 1871. After a brief campaign in May and June, and several conflicts in which the Russians were victors, the sultan surrendered himself to general Kolpakovski, 4 July, and the country was annexed to the Russian empire.

EAGLE.

EAGLE, an ancient coin of Ireland, made of a base metal, and current in the first years of Edward I. about 1272, was so named from the figure impressed upon it. The American gold coinage of eagles, half eagles, and quarter eagles, began 6 Dec. 1792; an eagle is of the value of 10 dollars, or about 2*l.* 1*s.*—The standard of the eagle was borne by the Persians, at Cunaxa, 401 B.C. The Romans carried gold and silver eagles as ensigns, and sometimes represented them with a thunderbolt in their talons, on the point of a spear, 102 B.C. Charlemagne added the second head to the eagle for his arms, to denote that the empire of Rome and Germany were united in him, A.D. 800. The eagle was the standard of Napoleon I. and Napoleon III.; as well as of Austria, Russia, and Prussia; see Knighthood.

EARL (Latin, comes), introduced at the conquest, superseded the Saxon ealdorman, and continued the highest rank in England, until Edward III. created dukes in 1337 and 1351, and Richard II. created marquises (1385), both above earls. Alfred used the title of earl as a substitute for king. William Fitz-Osborn was made earl of Hereford by William the Conqueror, 1066. Gilchrist was created earl of Angus, in Scotland, by King Malcolm III. in 1037, and Sir John de Courcy created baron of King-ale and earl of Ulster in Ireland, by Henry II. 1181.

EARL MARSHAL of England, the eighth great officer of state. This office, until it was made hereditary, always passed by grant from the king. Gilbert de Clare was created lord marshal by King Stephen, 1135. The last lord marshal was John Fitz-Alan, lord Maltrevers, Camden. Richard II. in 1397 granted letters patent to the earl of Nottingham by the style of earl marshal. In 1574, Charles II. granted to Henry lord Howard the dignity of hereditary earl marshal. The earl marshal's court was abolished in 1642. (See Howard.)

EARL MARSHAL of Scotland was an officer who commanded the cavalry, whereas the constable commanded the whole army, but they seem to have had a joint command, as all orders were addressed to "our constable and marshal." The office was never out of the Keith family. It was reserved at the Union, and when the heritable jurisdictions were bought, it reverted to the crown, being forfeited by the rebellion of George Keith, earl marshal, in 1715.

EARL DE LA WARR'S ACT, see Childers.

EARLY CLOSING ASSOCIATION established 1842, to abridge the hours of labour, and to abolish Sunday trading.

under ground which have a communication with each other, some of which abound with water, others with exhalations, arising from inflammable substances, as nitre, bitumen, sulphur, &c. Dr. Stokely and Dr. Priestley attributed earthquakes to electricity. They are probably due to steam generated by subterranean heat. An elaborate Catalogue of earthquakes (from B.C. 1600 to A.D. 1842), with commentaries on the phenomena, by R. and J. W. Mallet, was published by the British Association in 1857. In 1860 the velocity of their propagation was estimated by Mr. J. Brown at between 470 and 530 feet per second.* See Seismometer.
